Vandals cut bus wires, stall school opening

'Professionals' blamed

By Mike Berger

Monday was the last day School Supt. Eugene Crowell will order schools closed because of bus vandalism.

Between sunset Sunday, Jan. 2 and early Monday morning, Jan. 3, "professional" vandals cut ignition wires on seven of nine school buses. They were parked on Route 3A at a lot owned by mechanic Charles Pape.

Crowell was notified of the vandalism at 6:45 a.m. and at 7:20 a.m. school officials had the town-wide fire alarm sounded to notify students classes had been called off. A majority (nearly 60 percent) of the town's children are bused to school. Many students had prepared themselves for school and had gone outside to wait for the bus Monday morning.

"I have a message to those responsible," said an angry Crowell. "They are jeopardizing school programs."

Police have no suspects in the vandalism case and are still investigating. Crowell said the job was obviously cone by "professionals who knew what they are doing. It wasn't done by children."

As a result of Monday's school cancellation, the day will be made up at the end of the school year.

If bus vandalism should happen again, Crowell will not close the schools. He said it will be the parents' responsibility to transport children to school. If parents could not do so, children would be excused for that day's absence.

Crowell added that should weather conditions make transportation by bus or by parents unsafe, school would be cancelled. But not because of bus vandalism.

Monday's vandalism may have some relevance to the arrest of several out-of-town youths Wednesday night, Dec. 29. Three males were charged with stealing 60 gallons of gasoline from the bus fleet.

Arrested at 9:45 p.m. were John Saturno, 18, of Milton, 17 year-old Richard Loonie of 34 Gannett Road, Scituate, and John O'Toole of Milton.

They were charged with larceny and breaking and entering into a motor vehicle.

Police are unsure if there is a relationship between the two incidents since those arrested were out-of-

Damned by the merchants

The Bottle Bill has enemies

By Jane Lane

The Bottle Bill takes effect Jan. 17. And on that day, there are going to be a lot of bewildered merchants and angry consumers.

Local package store owners say they have received no direction from the state regarding Bottle Bill regulations. But they are quick to warn consumers that prices are going to skyrocket — and there is nothing they can do to prevent that.

What consumers can expect in two weeks, is to pay a five cent deposit on each 12 ounce bottle or can of beer. That comes to $1.20 extra per case.

But local store owners said the distributors are charging $1.26 per case, so that extra cost will be pushed onto the consumer.

The wholesalers also figured this was a good time for an overall price hike, so they are charging the merchants about $1 extra.

This price will also be carried over to the unwary consumer.

Adding the average price markup per case, the consumer may expect to pay about $14.50 for a case of Michelob bottles which they now buy for about $11.50.

But it is not just the consumers who will be paying more, the local merchants note. It will take them extra hours to pack and sort the bottles and cans, which means either additional employees or more hours for current personnel. And many local small stores will have to build additions in which to store the empty containers.

The local package store owners are not happy about the prospects for this new year. Some have resigned themselves that it will result in unwanted labor.

But others stand defiant against the proposal and the voters who approved the measure.

One local merchant said he will be ready with "loaded guns" aimed at the "do-gooders and environmentalists who wanted this thing passed, but who will be

Yarmouth man named exec secretary

Mark Lanza, assistant executive secretary of South Yarmouth, was appointed executive secretary Dec. 22 by selectmen.

Arthur Clark, who was scheduled to retire as the town's first executive secretary last Saturday, will continue in the position at least until Jan. 17 when Lanza will begin his new job.

Selectmen decided to extend Clark's contract until that time so he could work with Lanza and familiarize the Yarmouth resident with the town. If additional money can be found within the town budget, Clark's contract may be extended another week, selectmen said.

Lanza also served as assistant executive secretary in Wayland and Sharon. He will begin his employment in Cohasset at a salary of $21,000. He has a master's degree in public administration and a bachelor of science degree from Bridgewater State College.

Selectmen interviewed five candidates for the position, including local resident Richard Silvia. They received 30 applications for the position.

Selectmen were impressed with Lanza's qualifications and his interview with the board. As the assistant executive secretary for Yarmouth, he supervises personnel, finances and data processing for the town.

He also served as an administrator for Wayland and was responsible for the town receiving $300,000 in public housing after submitting a grant. He works for a five-member board of selectmen in Yarmouth, a seacoast town whose population reaches 50,000 residents in the summer.

Henderson succeeds Thaxter as T.C.

Atty. Richard Henderson was appointed town counsel after selectmen received notification of J. Blake Thaxter's resignation.

Thaxter notified selectmen because his office was in the process of becoming affiliated with a Palm Beach, Fla. firm, he was not able to devote enough time to town business. He resigned from the position Jan. 1.

Selectmen immediately voted to appoint Richard Henderson as town counsel. Henderson, who serves in Thaxter's Cohasset firm, has acted as special town counsel during the recent legal proceedings regarding the town's present sewer program. He is working with the selectmen, sewer commission and the sewer ad hoc committee to attempt to legally dissolve the Metcalf and Eddy engineering study in favor of less expensive alternative plans.

Henderson, 41, lives with his wife Linda and two children on Jerusalem Road. He received a B.A. from Mt. Allison University, New Brunswick, and his law degree from Dalhousie, Nova Scotia, both in Canada. Before joining Thaxter he was associated with Fine & Ambrogne of Boston for four and one-half years.

Selectmen did not vote to appoint assistant town counsels as listed on the agenda because they did not receive a proposed new system of appointing the assistants to specialized tasks from town counsel.

Henderson says the firm of Thaxter, Beckwith and Cohasset's week...

Protulis named chairman

The Massachusetts Bay Chapter of the March of Dimes has appointed William Protulis of the Cohasset Fire Department as chairman of the annual coin cannister campaign for Cohasset.

Each year members of the department assist the March of Dimes during the month of January by placing cannisters in local stores and restaurants. The cannisters are collected by Cohasset firemen at the end of a one month period.

"We hope to better last year's total of $61," said Protulis. "The March of Dimes needs the help of everyone in Cohasset if birth defects are to be eliminated."

For more information on the March of Dimes, call 328-3657.

Trailer permit approved

William Figueiredo of Marshfield notified the Mariner he has received his permit to house a trailer for six months a year at 37 Parker Ave.

Figueiredo said he and his wife will live there to protect his nine acres of property in the Bailey Creek area.

The permit was granted by Dedham Superior Court after the Cohasset Zoning Board of Appeals rejected the variance for environmental reasons. Figueiredo said the ZBA surpassed the limitation of 75 days which led to the approval.

Figueiredo applied in April of 1982, but received an official letter of rejection in August.

The court overturned the decision Dec. 2.

Depending on the weather, Figueiredo plans to install the trailer between March and April. He will live there six months to protect his lobster boats.

In another matter, he is waiting for the Army Corps of Engineers to decide on his application for a marina for the Bailey Creek area. Figueiredo plans 500 feet of floats and facilities for 90 boats. He said he has received approval from the Conservation Commission and the state Department of Quality Engineering.

A second matter of contest between Figueiredo and the town is his claim that the town took seven acres of his property in the Bailey Creek area for dredging purposes without proper easement or eminent domain procedures. He plans to bring the matter to court.

Sewage rules amended

The Cohasset Board of Health amended the regulation governing rules and regulations for the disposal of sanitary sewage at their December 20 meeting.

Section 36 "Supplement to Section 2.3 of Title V of the State Environmental Code, entitled 'Minimum Requirements for the Subsurface Disposal of Sanitory Sewage' (currently referred to as 310 CMR 15.00)" now reads as follows:

"Persons obtaining a 'Septage Handler's Permit' must submit a monthly reporting form indicating address of the system pumped, reason for pumping, i.e. routine or discharge to the surface of the ground, number of gallons pumped, and condition of the system, and such other information as the Board of Health may require on a monthly reporting form. The format of this monthly reporting form shall be supplied by the Board of Health."

Jerusalem Road hearing

The Conservation Commission will reopen a hearing Feb. 7 on the application of Donald Staszko of Cohasset Associates of 172 Beach St.

Staszko wants to construct a new home near the intersection of Jerusalem Road and Atlantic Avenues and install a subsurface disposal system.

The commission asked Staszko to return to the board with evidence that the new home and system will satisfy criteria set by the state building code for setbacks for beach homes and evidence the property will stand despite wave runoff of a 100-year storm and potential foundation erosion.

Tom Hamilton of 363 Jerusalem Road opposed the application because he feels the area may be a sand dune and the town zoning bylaw prohibits a special permit in any area which may be subject to flooding.

Conservation members are concerned about reviewing the application without study first from the ZBA. The Board of Health approved the sewage system on the condition Staszko performs one more ground water test.

Fonseca named Cohasset postmaster

Northeast Regional Postmaster General John Mulligan has appointed Edward Fonseca, Jr., as Cohasset Postmaster.

The Northeast Regional Management Selection Board nominated Fonseca, and the appointment was also approved by Postmaster General William Bolger in accordance with the merit selection procedures of the Postal Reorganization Act.

Fonseca began his postal career in 1968 as a clerk at Cohasset, and in 1972 he became the Postmaster of Brant Rock. He has held numerous managerial positions in post offices in the Greater Boston area, and from January to May of 1982 he served as officer-in-charge of the Cohasset office.

As Postmaster, Fonseca will head an office of 20 employees, and an annual mail volume of approximately four and one-half million pieces. He succeeds Gerard Keating, who retired in August.

Fonseca will receive his Certificate of Appointment at a special ceremony at the Cohasset Post Office, Friday, Jan. 7, at 10:30 a.m.

Dog problems nip at selectmen

The topic turned to dogs last week when selectmen heard yet another complaint about free-roaming pets.

This time, the dogs accused of wandering onto private property and causing chaos, are owned by Robert Byrnes of 39 Elm Court.

Neighbors accused the two Dobermans of chasing their cats and attacking another unrestrained dog on October 4.

But Byrnes argued, "If one neighbor had ever asked me to restrain my dogs, or said my dogs were bothering them, or that they were afraid of my dogs, I'd restrain them. But I have to read this in the newspaper, that my dog is accused of being in a dog fight."

Byrnes carred a petition with several neighbors' signatures, testifying that the Dobermans had never been on their properties and had never bothered them.

Stevens Lane resident Mary Kennedy told selectmen that the two Dobermans were frequently in her yard, and that one of the large animals had killed her cat. That occurred two years ago, and she had asked the Byrnes' to restrain the dogs at that time. She said the two dogs continue to harass her pets, and she requested selectmen to order Byrnes to permanently restrain the pair.

Again Byrnes emphasized the need for cooperation between neighbors to settle such complaints.

"This is setting a precedent. Every Wednesday night will be dog complaint night (for selectmen) to issue retraining orders. As neighbors, we should try and work things out before things get this far. It takes cooperation to work things out. A lot of these complaints have just ballooned," Byrnes said.

Other neighbors, such as Nancy Sladen who lives across the street from Byrnes, said the dogs have never chased her cats and have never been any trouble in the neighborhood.

Selectmen Henry Ainslie emphasized that there is a town bylaw which requires all animals to be kept on their own property, and that trespassing onto another's property is a violation of that bylaw.

When Byrnes asked whether he would be required to keep the dogs leashed on his property, selectmen Mary Jane McArthur said the bylaw required the restraint of animals by leash or within a fenced area. The intent of the bylaw is to keep the loose animals restricted within the owner's property, she said.

Following the hour-long hearing, selectman McArthur said selectmen should sit down with Dog Officer Richard Yocum and prepare an explanation of the town bylaw regarding restraint of animals.

The statement, which could be released to the local newspapers, would detail the owner's responsibilities regarding the town bylaw, she said.

McArthur added that under the Massachusetts General Laws, once a restraining order is issued by selectmen, they do not have the authority to rescind that vote.

Selectmen voted to take the matter of the Byrnes' dogs under advisement.

This was the third "dog hearing" before selectmen in the past month. Although there is no leash law in Cohasset, selectman McArthur said the situation "had reached the point" where an interpretation of the town's bylaw regarding restraint of animals is necessary.

HAND CANING AND FIBER RUSH

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept registrations by phone for hand caning or fiber rush courses to be taught by Kenneth Sargent of Country Workshop, Cohasset. Individuals may register for either of these programs which are scheduled for Thursdays, 10 a.m. to noon for a five week period. Non-residents will be accepted on a space available basis.

The program is designed to teach chair caning or rushing beginning with basic techniques, graduating to the finished product. Each person will need a chair to work on.

Classes are scheduled to begin during mid-January. To register please call the recreation office at 383-6791.

SPRING WASHINGTON D.C. TRIP

The Recreation Department may conduct a spring trip to Washington, D.C., for seventh and eighth grade students if enough are interested.

The trip would include round-trip motor coach transportation, three nights lodging, three breakfasts and dinners, entrance fees, evening activities and guided tours of Washington and Alexandria, Virginia.

If interested, please call the department office at 383-6791. There will be one adult chaperone for every 20 students.

The Bottle Bill has enemies . . .

the first to holler when they find out what they are going to have to spend on a case of beer."

When the Bottle Bill takes effect, a deposit will be charged on all soft drinks and beer. That includes all plastic and glass bottles, and cans. The deposit will be rated according to the size of the container. The consumer will pay five cents for a 12 ounce can or bottle, ten cents for a two-liter plastic bottle and five cents for a quart container, or less.

According to sponsors of the Bottle Bill which was approved as a referendum article in the November election, the deposit will serve as an incentive for the consumer to bring the container back and retrieve his deposit money, and not to ditch the empty bottles and cans along the roads.

Some local merchants, such as Ed Donovan, assistant manager of Tedeschi's Package Store on Front Street, Scituate, say the bill will have a minimal effect on litter.

"Unfortunately, it is my opinion that the 18 and 19 year-olds who borrow Dad's car for the night, will not return the beer cans and bottles they were drinking from. They can't bring the car home with the cans and bottles still inside, so they will probably end up throwing them out the window of the car. It will end up on the streets, just like it always had," he said.

"It's not the 20 years and older group who are the greatest litterers. It's always been the underaged kids. And the Bottle Bill is not going to stop them from littering."

Many local package store owners share the same sentiments. Raymond Riddle, who owns four food marts in Scituate, Cohasset and Hingham, two of which sell beer and wine, said he is upset with the legislation because it is misdirected. A strong opponent of litter, Riddle said a more strict enforcement of anti-litter laws, not the present Bottle Bill, will eliminate the profuse littering in Massachusetts.

He complained there are as many MacDonald and Burger King wrappers lying on the streets around his stores, as there are empty cans and bottles. The only way to reduce the litter problem is to better educate our children and the public, he suggested, and for local towns to stringently enforce their anti-litter laws.

Riddle was formerly employed in the manufacturing and distributing areas of the bottle business. He predicted that only one-half of the containers brought back by consumers will eventually be reused.

The manufacturers are not set up to recycle and reuse the bottles and cans, he said. Instead, the large corporations will recycle the containers, by crushing and salvaging them, which is the current practice.

He also predicted that consumer prices for all carbonated sodas and beer will jump 20-25 percent because of the Bottle Bill.

The price hike is inevitable, Donovan added, because of the numerous times the same container must be handled by the merchant.

The local store owner takes the beverage container in from the distributor, sells it, takes it back in, puts it away, separates and counts the bottles and cans, and gives them back to the distributor.

"Nothing is done for nothing," he said. "The consumer will pay for it in the long run."

One provision of the new law is that a store must honor all empty containers, as long as the store carries that brand. Therefore, the little corner store will be hard hit by consumers who will return the soda or beer containers they originally bought at a supermarket or liquor store.

"Where is the small corner store supposed to keep all those empty containers?" he asked.

Another part of the bill, which many consumers may not have realized, is that all glass and plastic bottles, and even cans, must be thoroughly washed before they may be returned to the store. The containers must also be in the same condition as when they left the store, except that no trace of the content may be left within the container.

"That means the consumer will have to wash each beer can and bottle separately, store them away until he has finished the six-pack or case, and then bring them back to the store," Greenbush Package Store owner Carl Burney explained.

No drops of beer or soda may be left in the containers. Absolutely no cigarette butts. And no crushed cans.

"Now how the heck are we supposed to be able to tell if a can is cleaned?" Burney asked. "It will be hard enough with the dark bottles."

Burney said he will be extremely upset if he has to hire extra help to assist him in counting and separating the containers.

He also said he has installed signs on the windows of his store warning that anyone under the age of 20 years old may not enter his store unless accompanied by an adult. That means, youngsters will not be allowed to pick up stray beer bottles along the road, wash them out, and bring them back to the liquor store for spare change.

The rationale behind the cleansing of the containers is that scrubbed bottles and cans are least likely to attract insects and roaches. The Scituate merchants know that strict attention to that stipulation will be paid by the local Board of Health.

Package store owners who remember when containers were once returnable, also remember the constant battle against roach infestation.

An employee of the Country Package Store in North Scituate said he expects to call an exterminator at least once a month to control the expected problem.

He summed up his feelings about the Bottle Bill by saying, "John Q. Public voted for it, and John Q. Public is going to pay for it."

He said the North Scituate shop would have to expand to make room for the deposited containers.

"I'm not too happy with the Bottle Bill. I'm the one who is going to have to listen to everyone bitching about the increased prices," he said. "I'm wholeheartedly in favor of a Bottle Bill...in New Hampshire, Vermont or Maine."

Peter Logan, owner of Cohasset Liquors on Rte. 3A, said he is in favor of the bill if it significantly reduces the litter problem. But he feels the consumer was duped into thinking there wouldn't be a price increase attached to the passage of the legislation.

'John Q. Public voted for it, and John Q. Public is going to pay for it.'

"The proponents of the Bottle Bill promised there wouldn't be a significant price increase. Most people aren't aware there will be that significant price increase," he said.

Mary Muncey, co-owner of Cohasset Harbor Liquors, Inc., said her feelings regarding the bill are mixed. As a consumer and an advocate of anti-litter proposals, she is caught in the middle. She doesn't feel this measure will work effectively, and presents a hardship for her small "Mom and Pop" operation on Elm Street.

"If it is good for the environment, that's wonderful. But I feel it should have involved all glass containers, such as fruit juices. I don't think it went far enough," ehs said. "But how are we supposed to store these containers? We're trying to work out a method because it all has to be done within this building. We can't add on."

She is angry because she has repeatedly tried to contact the state regarding the specific regulations, and has received no reply.

Mrs. Muncey is also concerned that she and her husband will inevitably spend more time in the store, sorting and counting the deposited containers. The Cohasset residents currently work between 80 to 90 hours, six days a week.

Henderson will be reorganized. Thaxter will remain a partner for a while, and his daughter Deborah Thaxter will be a new partner with Henderson. Beckwith may do consulting. Associates will be Deirdre Kulevich, John J. Slater III, and Stephen W. Rider.

Town Counsel's contract with the town for fiscal year 1983 is for $25,000 personal service salary minimum. This is for 500 hours at $50 per hour. Any additional time is billed separately, as are legal expenses, such as filing fees.

Henderson says the contract covers all town departments, except for collective bargaining and schools. Selectmen also appointed four special town counsels in 1981 and 1982. Henderson says this is done "usually because of conflicts." The largest fee for a special town counsel case, $12,000 for the Lowry Bell "Tennis Court" litigation, to Burns & Levinson of Boston.

In fiscal year 1980 the town spent $18,000 which was then contracted to town counsel salary, $6,032 for legal expenses, and $6,172 for collective bargaining.

School Supt. Crowell says the school department paid $800 to town counsel in FY 1980, but much less in FY '81 and '82. He expects a substantial bill from town counsel for FY 1983 for the many hours Slater spent on the new drug policy.

Town Accountant William Signorelli expects the $25,000 contract will be exceeded in FY 1983.

Krueger to give Master Class at Conservatory

Noted Flutist Christopher Krueger will give a Master Class at the South Shore Conservatory of Music in Hingham Friday, Jan. 21 from 7 to 10 p.m.

A former member of the Conservatory faculty, Krueger is one of the most prominent free lance flutists today. He regularly performs as principal flute with the Handel and Haydn Society, the New Hampshire Symphony and the Opera Company of Boston.

He is a member of the Emmanuel Wind Quintet, winner of the 1981 Naumberg award for chamber music, the Bach Ensemble and other prestigious musical groups.

In addition to solo performances in Boston, New York and Los Angeles, he has recorded for Nonesuch, C.R.I. and Folkways and is on the faculty of Wellesley College and the Longy School of Music.

The class will be open to a limited number of participants for a fee. Anyone interested should call the Conservatory at 749-7565 for registration information and the list of music to be used.

The school will also welcome unlimited auditors to this class for a small fee. Auditors as well as participants will find it helpful to have the music with them. The class will be of particular interest to anyone who enjoys baroque music and Mr. Krueger will demonstrate on the baroque flute during the evening.

The South Shore Conservatory is a non profit community school of the arts located off 19 Fort Hill Street in Hingham. It is funded, in part, by the Mass. Council on the Arts and Humanities.

How new is the Paddle Fan? To anyoine in the middle age bracket it's easy to recall the fact that paddle fans in restaurants, ice cream parlors, drugstores, taverns — and we could go on and on — were essential for cooling prior to the introduction of air conditioning. Now, we're all being made aware of the benefits of installing Paddle Fans. In conjunctin with your air conditioning, or just by itself, they help distribute the air and save energy. In the summer, they cool the air, and in the winter, they force the hot air that gathers near the ceiling down into the room. Most Paddle Fans are designed to accommodate a wide variety of lighting in the center directly under the fan motor. Now, you've got a combination lighting fixture/paddle fan all in one functional, stylish unit.

Designing an interior? Perhaps the most challenging aspect is to find furniture that exactly fits your plan. The reward lies in the fact that furniture is of primary functional importance. Its role is to provide a seating, dining, living, studying, sleeping or lying space. Everything else in a room is a form of embellishment when compared to the functional role of furniture. There is no "usual" furniture grouping. Your furniture must fit your needs, demands, and lifestyle. The decorative function of furniture is important but secondary.

Whether you are decorating from scratch or looking for ways to add comfort to your life, BOUND BROOK PAINT & HARDWARE has lots of good ideas for you. around town

The team earned money for the trip through bake sales, T-shirt sales and swimathons.

Erin exends her gratitude to all families and individual pool members who purchased "I Love Cohasset" T-shirts last summer. The Laugelles, Johnsons, Leones, Birmanns, Buckleys, Village Sports, Marsacs, Babins, Karchers, Collinses, Hobsons, Sechens, Hobbses, Nedrows, McNamaras and Hendersons.

Also, Janesicses, Spooners, deVoses, Dormers, Buckleys, Stauntons, Duffys, Bairds, Knoxes, Coxes, Atkinsons, McKinnons, Urmsons, Aronsons, Tehranians, Tagues, Bowdoins, Bishops, Andersons, McNabbs, Whitmans, Caugheys and Redfields.

Also, Migliaccios, Waalses, all of the Japanese students, the Swim Team Committee and the Swim Center Staff.

☐Joanne Egan and her children, Matt and Jennifer, have many tales to tell about their holidays in California. They arrived in San Francisco a week before Christmas, rented a car and drove the coastal route to San Diego, then onto Sacramento for Christmas with Joanne's brother and his family. They were fortunate to miss the bad storms, but did say the temperature was on the chilly side, 65 degrees.

Joanne said she could fill the Mariner with their adventures during day trips, some of which included a mud bath (very popular in California), a mineral bath in 104 degree water and a trip through the wine country, touring the Sabastini wine vineyards. They also visited Nevada and couldn't get over the fact that there were no trees!

The Egans can't wait to see Clint Eastwood's newest movie, as they were in the town of Genoea where it was shot.

☐Good news for all John Drago fans! His knee injury isn't as serious as first suspected and he should be back on the ice in three weeks. A high scorer (John got four goals in the game before his injury), #10 will be welcomed back on the ice.

☐Gerard Keating is thoroughly enjoying his retirement. This Christmas season was the first in many years when he didn't have to worry about all the cards and letters arriving on time. He was able to take the time to read his own!

☐The Winter Program at the Community Center of Cohasset is underway, and what a program it is. Dancing, computers and business, crafts, cooking, flower arranging, knitting and many different awareness courses are available. Registrations will be held weekdays until Jan. 7 from 9 a.m. until 1 p.m.; classes begin Jan. 10. For information, call 383-0088.

Don't forget the Community Center Dance Jan. 28 at Hugo's Lighthouse. Watch for the tickets to arrive in the mail. Call the above number for extras.

☐Nils Gjesteby, son of Arne and Martha Gjesteby, is studying Spanish in Cuernavaca, Mexico, for a month. He is living with a Mexican family and attending the University. Nils is a student at Colby College.

☐With the winter sports schedule in full swing, the Boosters' club will have their concession stand open again during all home basketball games.

☐Another success story from a CHS alumna. Wendy May Lister has been living in New York City since graduating from Mount Holyoke College. She is director of the publishing division of Yourdon, Inc., a data-processing software and consulting firm. Wendy still keeps in touch with some Cohassetites and visited last summer to attend her 20th high school reunion.

☐Mrs. Bacigalupo had a wonderful Christmas. She went to Windsor, Conn., to visit her son Bill and his family. Bill had a huge Christmas Eve party, balloons for children and adults, and toys were everywhere and Santa made an appearance. Mrs. Bach said it was a super way to spend Christmas and can't wait until next year.

☐Curry College sophomore Joe McCullough is one of three hockey players tied for highest scorer. McCullough earned 11 points (five goals and six assists) in Curry's 6-3 season. The team plays Wagner College Saturday, Jan. 15 at 8 p.m. at home (Milton).

Vandals cut bus wires, stall school opening . . .

town residents.

Crowell said ignition wires were cut with wire cutters underneath the dashboards. Two buses were not vandalized.

"They may have seen a cruiser go by and got scared off before they could finish all of them," Crowell said.

He repeated his assertion the job was professional because the vandals knew where the ignition wires were, gained entrance to the buses, stayed out of sight of passing police cruisers and "obviously knew how to disable a bus for a day."

By 1 p.m. Monday, five of the buses were operational and all buses resumed their normal routes Tuesday.

Pape contracts with the School Department to store the buses and also serves as a master mechanic.

Crowell said Pape's Route 3A lot is the only location in town to house the buses and "if there was another place, I don't have enough money to move the buses."

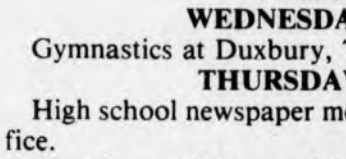
Two years ago, vandals hit the same location and let air out of the tires.

The superintendent is satisfied with the security measures taken by Pape. "I have no problem with the storage area. The buses were locked Sunday night. Mr. Pape has done everything we have asked him to do."

Acting Police Chief Joseph Kealey met with Crowell Monday morning to discuss security measures.

Kealey said the department will try to add additional measures but is limited in equipment (cruisers) and available manpower.

This is the second major vandalism case affecting the schools since November.



Police are still searching for a group of town vandals who smashed 75 windows at Cohasset High School, the junior high wing and the Deer Hill and Osgood Schools.

Kealey said Monday that case is still under investigation and some "break in that case could come at any time." He and Crowell believe there is no relationship between the window smashing and ignition cutting incidents.

Crowell agreed with Kealey. The only common denominator between the two, Kealey said, is the malicious destruction of property.

School officials estimated the window smashing at $5,000. Crowell said there has been no final dollar amount to Monday's vandalism.

Kealey added if the vandalism should continue, there may be much stronger security measures taken. "This has to stop. If we have to, we will take drastic measures," he said, but declined to elaborate.

Late Christmas list

What Cohasset got for Christmas...in past years the Mariner has reported what Cohasset wanted for Christmas...but what it got is much more interesting, we discovered!

D. Barrow got a late, late CHS graduation gift, or was it right on time? You'll have to ask him.

The police department is still waiting for its Christmas Gift...a new chief, to be appointed some time in the next month or so.

Selectmen got two card table chairs from Building #19 for the two soon-to-be elected selectmen.

Every two-out-of-three kids got Atari...the one-of-three's spent a lot of time at their friends' houses during vacation.

Most horses have or are about to receive snowshoes.

The Fire Department finally has a Fire Chief — Martin Dooley.

Philip Smith, a noted interior decorator, gave selectmen a $10,000 gift certificate to bring their offices into the space age.

Clark Chatterton's booty included honorary membership in the Legion and a new cowboy hat to replace the one destroyed in a fire.

"Phase I" residents got a do-it-yourself, on-site sewer system kit.

Charlie DeSantis got a subscription to "Sewage Treatment Illustrated."

Joe Gwinn got a contemporary expressions book titled "Go With the Flow."

The sewer commission was ignored by Santa... hopefully there'll be a legal quorum soon.

Bert Pratt got 101 ideas on keeping testimonial speeches down to eight hours.

Eugene Crowell got a set of vandal-proof windows for the schools...he's hoping to receive a fleet of tamper-proof buses for Valentine's Day.

Richard Henderson got a year's supply of anti-acid pills and free early morning wake-up calls for selectmen's meetings.

Bill Weeks received a subscription to "Troika" magazine, published in Moscow.

Herb Towle received a neon placard for the next town meeting.

Selectmen game themselves a new executive secretary.

The PSO got reimbursed for their calendars (P.O. Box 30).

MPG gave the Mariner its gift just before the holidays.

The Bells got reimbursed for their legal fees in return for their gift to the town, an agreement not to sue for 30 years.

Assessors got a 13-month calendar in order to get their tax bills out on time.

The Log and Line's Christmas gift to themselves was a $2 cover charge for lingerers and politicians.

The town got a morality committee.

The Recreation Department's gift was a computer dating service.

Nancy O'Toole got a license to open an arcade in the "old" News Company store.

Lillian Murray got all her mother's old campaign speeches...

Allan McKinnon's old speeches were given to Mary Jeannette Murray...

Eyes right

Phil Murray got a copier machine.

Parents of school children got "no snow days."

The Cohasset Tennis Club recieved six more tennis courts.

Dick Conley got a "how to" pamphlet on smiling...at school committee meetings.

Bill Signorelli got a guide titled, "301 Ways to Untangle Committee and Department Votes."

The school department received word that the birth rate increased by 30 percent.

Arthur Clark received a lifetime waiver from the Log and Line's loitering surcharge.

The Lamplight's stocking contained the services of a New York City marketing consultant who will advise them how to market their independent issues so that parents, merchants, geriatrics and other local tribesmen will be able to support it.

Cohasset Historic District Commission received 200 gallons surplus pink and green exterior house paint.

John Benbow found a pot of gold (we hope) for his favorite charity — Parents Anonymous (1-800 992-1250).

The Sportsmen's Club's old clubhouse got a coat of surplus pink and green paint and sold an hour after drying.

Lucia Woods received 500 all-purpose signatures.

Powder Puff got recognition and funds as a league sport.

Health agent Elaine Eliopoulos got a case of 24-hour vitamins for health board meetings.

The town bylaw which requires animals to be kept on their own property got a "leash" connection to the world of reality.

Manny Salvador received a dozen artificial pumps.

In preparation for cable TV, the following town committees received free outfittings for on-camera meetings:

School committee, from the Fashion Barn and the Casual Male;

Selectmen, from Peddlers II;

Sewer commissioners, Good Sport;

Advisory committee, Woolworth's, because they're such skinflints;

Recreation commission, Talbot's;

Historical commission, from Ellen at Tides Inn;

Board of appeals, In Stitches;

Board of health, by the Consignment Shop;

Planning board, by Marshall's; and

Medi-Mart will provide make-up for fire and police.

Selectmen briefs . . .

POLICE CHIEF FINALISTS

Selectmen will interview six candidates for the position of police chief, including three Cohasset officers who applied for the job.

Acting police chief Joseph Kealey, Lt. Charles Stockbridge and Sgt. Richard Barrow were selected as final candidates for the position last week by the board of selectmen. Three other persons whom selectmen would not identify will also be interviewed by the board. Forty-eight persons applied for the job.

The other three candidates include a town chief of police from Maine. Selectmen said the 40 year-old chief was formerly a patrolman from the South Shore and has been chief of police in Maine for a year.

Another candidate is a chief of police in a small town near Worcester. The 33 year-old chief was an assistant chief in a nearby town and served there for 10 years.

The sixth candidate is a 41 year-old sergeant from the North Shore. The officer had substituted for a police chief during a sick leave and had experience preparing a $700,000 annual police department budget.

For several months, the town has been in the process of finding a replacement for former chief John DeBassio. He left that position to become director of security for the Foxboro Company.

Salary for the new chief will range between $25,000 and $29,000 per year.

SEWER COMMISSION APPOINTMENT

Sewer commission member Joseph Gwinn officially notified selectmen in writing of the two vacancies on the commission. The selectmen have seven days in which to fill the two memberships.

Selectmen said they will appoint two members to the board at their Jan. 5 meeting. Members Janet Daggett and Gerard Stanton announced their resignations following town meeting's vote to search out alternative sewer plans.

NEW CLASS II LICENSE PROCEDURES

Former town counsel Blake Thaxter notified selectmen that Class II licenses may only be issued to those businesses which buy and sell vehicles as the principle portion of their business.

Selectmen were in the process of renewing the licenses when town counsel advised them of the state statute. Selectman McArthur emphasized that each business must be reviewed before any license is issued. Each business applying for the Class II license will have to submit a financial statement to selectmen, they decided.

This will become standard procedure in the future so that the licenses will not be held up after the first of each year.

WARRANT OPENING

Selectmen voted to open the warrant February 1 for the annual town meeting. That will be 60 days before the town meeting is scheduled to begin. Selectmen will insert any article in the warrant which is presented to them in written form and signed by 10 or more residents.

MOORING HIKE COMPLAINT

After hearing a complaint from Harbor Study Committee member Bernard Salvador, selectmen adopted a policy to request recommendations from that committee regarding future mooring rate settings.

Two weeks ago, selectmen met with Harbormaster Harry Ritter and voted to increase the mooring fee to $2. Salvador told selectmen last week the committee did not disagree with that rate, but emphasized the need for the harbor advisory committee to participate in such decisions.

When a similar decision was made regarding the mooring fees in February, 1982, the harbor study committee made a recommendation to the selectmen. Salvador expected the same policy would be followed this time, but the members were never consulted.

Selectmen agreed that the committee should be notified of any pending decisions in the future, and it will be solicited for its recommendation.

Lobster traps on the Government Island pier gather snow on a quiet New Year's Sunday.

Controversy erupts over school department warrants

Checks were mailed to school department vendors Dec. 23, although only two school committee members signed the authority warrant which totaled $36,145.

The School Committee did not meet before Christmas to consider goals and sign warrants, as planned at the board's Dec. 6 meeting.

The school bookkeeper prepared the warrant dated Dec. 20. She says, "School committee member Richard Conley saw the warrant in the business office and signed it. He went to a basketball game in the gym, saw member Joseph Nedrow and told him" (about the warrant).

Nedrow then went to the business office and signed.

Supt. Crowell said he telephoned member Martha Gjesteby the morning of Dec. 23 and told her the warrant had been prepared. He added that he would hold it for the school committee meeting, Jan. 10.

Member John Langmaid said he could not and would not have gone to school to sign the warrant because he was "sick with the flu for two weeks" before Christmas. He says Crowell knew he was sick.

Chairman Diana Kornet said she knew the warrant was prepared but did not go up and sign it.

Warrants are usually agenda items signed at regular school committee meetings.

Crowell said it had been the practice for 10 years, when school committee meetings were delayed due to vacations, to send the warrant to the town accountant's office for preprocessing, so that office could "get a leg up on their work" and to expedite payment.

Both Crowell and Signorelli deny published reports that the warrant had been requested by the town accountant. Signorelli says he has never requested a warrant be sent to town hall without the necessary number of signatures.

Crowell says the warrant was sent with a note requesting "hold for signatures."

Selectmen sign all warrants before they are paid by the Town Treasurer.

An assistant in the Treasurer's Office said she did not see the note or the original warrant. She was told verbally to hold payment for signature, and "thought this meant the selectmen's signatures."

After selectmen signed the warrant, the checks were mailed out Dec. 23.

Gjesteby descovered this mistake the same day she went to town hall. She says she was angry because Crowell had said the warrant would be signed at the next school committee meeting.

At the school committee reorganization meeting last April, Conley was assigned to sign all warrants. Gjesteby objected to the new practice and requested a ruling from Town Counsel.

Former Town Counsel Blake Thaxter ruled that under state law school committee authority to authorize expenditures for the payment of bills is not delegated to an individual member of that committee. They should submit all bills to the town accountant "as often as once each month." The word "committee" mandates action by a majority of the committee, he wrote.

Gjesteby says she wants all warrants signed at school committee meetings so that all five members can discuss any questions concerning the bills after all members have had the opportunity to see the warrant.

She added that school committee members only act officially when they meet, and that "meeting" under the open meeting law is defined as requiring a quorum "in order to make a decision at which any public business or public policy matter over which the governmental body has supervision, control or jurisdiction is discussed or considered."

Gjesteby says she would have asked two questions concerning that warrant. The warrant included a $2,496 payment for window vandalism. She wants to know what happened to the money the students collected from the raffle. "Did it pay for windows, was it put in a revolving account, or what happened to it?"

She says the warrant included $106.95 for three health magazine subscriptions, which she did not find listed in the budget backup for this year. She wants to know if these are being prepaid for next year out of this year's budget, before next year's budget is approved.

After conferring with Crowell, Signorelli says unsigned warrants were "occasionally" reviewed in advance by his office. Signorelli has issued a new policy: No warrants are to be submitted by the school department without the required number of dated signatures, and no warrants otherwise submitted shall be reviewed or processed.

Kornet says she signed the warrant on December 29, after the payments were released, because "after all, these were routine items, and it was only paid by mistake."

Superintendent Crowell said "no mistake was made by the school business office." He has asked town counsel to rule whether warrants have to be signed at a school committee meeting. Occasionally, when a meeting was postponed in the past, all members were sent copies of warrants, and asked to come to the business office to sign them individually.

Assessing the years of Gov. Edward King

By David A. Mittell, Jr.

As matters of public policy I don't agree with him on capital punishment or the Bottle Bill or abortion — issues very dear to his heart. His on-the-job training in 1979 was a succession of disasters that for tragic effect rivaled the unraveling of Mike Dukakis' "lead pipe cinch" in 1975. For sheer comic effect his first weeks in office harkened back to Endicott Peabody's attempt to dump Speaker Thompson in 1963.

But I believe it's true and I'd like to say it: Ed King has been a pretty darn good governor. Before he departs for what will undoubtedly be successful but less joyful pursuits in other fields, it might be nice to recount a few of the ways he's been a darn good governor.

It seems to me two items stand out above the rest. The first is economic development. King has always understood what some of us born after the Depression took too long to discover — namely that our way of life depends on a strong economy. None of our finer pursuits, from raising children, to raising opportunities for minorities, to the arts, to sports, can know much success when five million citizens of the Commonwealth are reduced to fighting for scraps from a shrinking economic pie.

That Ed King has been successful at economic development should be obvious. Just a few short years ago we were told that the "sunbelt" from Florida to Southern California was the land of opportunity, and that the "frostbelt" from Boston to Detroit was living on economic memories.

Today the nation is in its worst recession in four decades; yet Massachusetts is enjoying relative prosperity and an unemployment rate that is 35 percent below the national average. If "Reaganomics" begin to work for the nation, Massachusetts can expect something of a golden age in the next couple of decades.

Of course many good folks are responsible for this, including returning Governor Dukakis. But Ed King made economic development a crusade the last four years, and the children of many of those who have liked to look down their noses at King are likely to have opportunities they would never have had had it not been for the extraordinary efforts of the departing governor.

The second thing about Ed King that stands out in my mind is his unabashed willingness to stand for the old-fashioned virtues. We went through a period ten to fifteen years ago when the world got turned upside down — bad became good and good became bad. We reviled our presidents, our police, and even our families, while we made folk heroes out of ruthless revolutionaries, criminals, and drug users.

It became the trend among leaders to spurn strong action and to apologize for any statement that might give offense to society's sourest critics. What ensued was a decade that lost its high promise and turned into confusion.

At the state level at least, Ed King put such foolishness to an end. He saved his sympathy for the victims of crime, not its perpetrators. He did not interpret the separation of church and state to mean that he need hide his strong Roman Catholicism. His attitude was a breath of fresh air, and I believe that the return of some degree of sanity to the public process over the last few years is not unconnected with Gov. King's performance in office.

Some of you will say, "What about the man's blunders, for example this, for example that..." Yes, I know, and we've oftentimes commented on the blunders in the Mariner. But at this juncture it seems to me that plenty has been said about Ed King's blunders, and not very many of us have ever said,

"Thank you, Governor King."

(David A. Mittell, Jr. is the Mariner's chief editorial writer.)

from the kitchen

By Joan Pinkham

Now that the ornaments are down and stashed until Christmas '83, everyone has worn their new monogrammed sweater at least once and Santa's toys are old-hat, we embark upon the January doldrums. The hustle and bustle and magic that spells Christmas gives way to long winter days when it's nice to indulge in our hobbies. If it's cooking you're into, these recipes from our readers are guaranteed to make a January day a little special. Janet Ingram has been making this delectable bread for her family for years:

French Breakfast Ring

2 pkg. yeast
1/4 c. lukewarm water
1 c. milk
1/2 c. sugar
2 tsp. salt
1/4 c. shortening
2 eggs
1 tsp. grated lemon rind
5 c. flour, approx.

Soften yeast in water. Scald milk. Add sugar, salt and shortening. Cool to lukewarm. Add flour to make thick batter. Mix well. Add yeast and eggs. Beat well. Add enough more flour to make a soft dough. Turn out on floured board and knead until smooth and satiny. Place in greased bowl. Cover and let rise in warm place until doubled (about 1½ hours). Punch down. Let rest 10 min. Divide in half and make two rectangular sheets about 1/2" thick. Bruch each with melted butter and brown sugar sprinkled with cinnamon, then grated lemon rind. Roll up like jelly roll, the long way, sealing edge. Form into rings on greased cookie sheets. With scissors cut through rim almost to center in pieces 1" thick, turn each slice slightly, lifting every other one to center of ring. Brush lightly with melted butter. Let rise until doubled and bake in 350 oven for 25 min. When cool frost with conf. sugar icing and decorate with chopped nuts and cherries.

Scalloped Oysters

2 8 oz. containers of fresh oysters
2 c. crushed Ritz or soda cracker crumbs
1/2 c. melted butter, unsalted
1/2 c. light cream, approx.
1 T sherry, or to taste
Dash white pepper

Butter quart casserole or individual shells. Layer crackers, oysters, layering top with crumbs. Using liquid reserved from oysters, add with cream, sherry and butter to casserole. Bake at 425 for approx. 30 to 35 min. Serves two or three good portions and makes a good dip for an appetizer.

Lucky is the child who comes home from school on a cold January day to find the kitchen fragrant with the scent of homemade cookies. A cold, foamy glass of milk would go perfectly with one (but who could stop at just one?) of Barbara Burnham's

Great-Grandmother Dickinson's Ginger Cookies

2 c. molasses
3/4 c. lard and butter
1/2 c. boiling water, to which is added
1 T soda
1 T ginger
Salt
2 tsp. baking powder
6 cups flour, approx.

Mix ingredients together. Knead until quite hard. Roll, cut with cookie cutters. Bake at 350 degrees for 8 to 10 min.

As of January 1, to get service or phones call your Telephone Business Office.

It's the first call you should make.

And in some cases, it's the only call you'll need to make.

How do you get service?

The best way to arrange telephone service is to call your local Telephone Business Office. Why? Because we're going to eliminate all our PhoneCenter Stores on January first (some will be going to American Bell, and the rest will be converted to New England Telephone Service Centers).

So, making that one phone call to your Telephone Business Office is all you need to do.

And it's very easy to do. You'll find the number on the first page of your phone bill, or listed in your telephone directory.

How do you get telephones?

New England Telephone is still providing phones, subject to availability. But we don't have PhoneCenter Stores any more. So how do you get phones from us?

Simple. Just call your Telephone Business Office. The Service Representative there will handle all arrangements and tell you how and where you can pick up your telephones. Or, if you prefer, have them delivered to your home or business.

What's next?

This is one of several changes that have resulted from a ruling of the Federal Communications Commission, which affects how you'll get service or telephone equipment from New England Telephone.

But despite these changes, New England Telephone will still be your local phone company.

We'll be here, working harder than ever to see you through the coming changes. And doing our best to see that you barely notice any change at all.

But to do our job right, we need to stay in touch with you. So let's talk. If you have questions, call us on our "Let's Talk" line 1 800 555-5000. We've got the answers.

Let's talk

Trial date set for suspect in Haynes murder

A trial date will be set next week for John Tammaro, the North End man who is accused of murdering 20 year-old Leslie Ann Haynes.

Friday, Dec. 31, Tammaro was arraigned in Dedham District Court on one count of murder.

He was also charged with unlawfully carrying a gun in a motor vehicle. Tammaro pleaded innocent to both charges.

Twenty-one year-old Tammaro eluded police for nearly two weeks.

Police searched for him ever since Haynes was found shot to death in her family's Volkswagon early Sunday morning, Dec. 19.

A driver who had picked Tammaro up hitchhiking Sunday left him at Boston's South Station at 7:30 a.m., four hours after police found Haynes with her head leaning against the wheel in the car at the South Main Street Texaco station. She had been shot four times in the head and once in the shoulder.

Police believe Tammaro may have fled to New York City and had issued a national all-points bulletin.

Early Friday morning, Tammaro appeared at the Boston office of his family's lawyer, Joseph Balliro. He was taken to Norfolk County District Attorney William Delahunt in Dedham by Frank Mondano, a lawyer in Balliro's office, and the Rev. Alan Caparella of St. Leonard's Church of the North End.

Tammaro was ordered held without bail at the Norfolk County House of Correction. The trial date will be scheduled Tuesday, Jan. 11 at Dedham District Court.

Before Tammaro surrendered to authorities Friday, he was indicted by a grand jury. The indictment meant officials had the authority to bring Tammaro directly into Superior Court when he was found, instead of proceeding through a probable cause hearing in district court.

He is currently serving a year's probation after pleading guilty to assaulting another woman who had stopped going out with him. Police said he threw eggs at her at a Boston subway station.

Police still do not know who owns the .22 caliber pistol found a few yards away from the murder scene.

Tammaro became a prime suspect in the murder almost immediately after police began the investigation. Haynes had become friendly with Tammaro last summer, but recently tried to end the relationship. Tammaro flew to Denver, Colorado twice to see her and tried to call her when she returned to Cohasset for the Thanksgiving and Christmas vacations.

Delahunt said Tammaro was occasionally outside her home in the bushes waiting for her to return at night.

On the night of her death, officials said Haynes had attended a Christmas party in Boston with a girlfriend. Haynes was last seen alive about 3 a.m. Sunday when she dropped off the girlfriend.

Balliro, who will represent Tammaro, represented Bradford Prendergast in the stabbing of his ex-fiance Patricia Gilmore of Canton three years ago. Banks prosecuted the case. Prendergast admitted he killed Gilmore but pleaded innocent by reason of insanity. The court ruled him responsible and sentenced him to life imprisonment.

Acting Police Chief Kealey attended the indictment and the arraignment. He told the Mariner the arrest came after several weeks of hard work by the State Police, district attorney's office and the Cohasset Police Department. He expressed appreciation for the work of Cohasset police officers who aided in the investigation.

John Tammaro (right), the chief suspect in the shooting death of Leslie Ann Haynes, of 16 Surrey Drive, listens to his court arraignment Friday in Dedham Superior Court with one of his attorneys, Frank Mondano. Tammaro is charged with one count of murder and a count of unlawfully carrying a gun in a motor vehicle.

There are as many reasons to get The Globe as there are days of the week.

Yes it's Sunday and you've laughed through the comics. Enjoyed Boston's best sportswriting. Pored through our magazine. Caught up on the complete regional and national stories.

Now what will you do the rest of the week? For openers, we'd suggest putting The Globe in your hands Monday so you'll know how the rest of the world spent their day of rest.

Come Tuesday, you can open a bigger business with "Business Extra." A special section devoted to the people, industries, facts and figures that make New England's business world turn.

Wednesday, you'll get a golden opportunity to cut corners with pages of money saving coupons, budget hints, recipes and all you need to serve it up right, in the Food pages.

Thursday, there's every reason to check our Calendar. With The Boston Globe's leisure magazine you'll have the complete goings on in and around Boston for the week.

You'll find "At Home" the place to be on Friday, with ideas for decorating, improving, repairing and enjoying.

Saturday has a plus all its own. "Sports Plus." The official word on the winners and the losers. Plus in-depth stories on the action on and off the field.

Ahhhhh Sunday. It wouldn't be the same without The Boston Sunday Globe.

See, just like the world, The Boston Globe doesn't stop between Sundays. Every day, The Globe provides quality, comprehensive coverage of the happenings from around the world. As well as timely features and the entertaining and informative columnists you've come to know.

We'll bring it all to you fresh each day. And that makes one more good reason to get The Globe all the days of the week.

'Spring Fever' to mark Art Center opening Jan. 9

The Winter Brunch and Class Open House, combined with the opening of the Fourth Annual All-New England exhibit "Spring Fever," will mark the opening of 1983's activities at the South Shore Art Center Sunday, Jan. 9, 1 to 3 p.m.

The public is invited to the afternoon's activities, starting with brunch in the studios followed by refreshments and recorder music by Scott Ketcham in the "Spring Fever" exhibit in the Galleries.

Phillip Smith of Creations will give a talk on "Interior Design: How to Complement Art" at 3 p.m. He will use paintings from the exhibit to illustrate how to decorate with works of art.

Teachers for Winter Term classes will be present and enrollments will be taken. Reservations for the talk should be made by telephoning 383-9548 in advance, although the donation to benefit the scholarship fund may be made at the door. The Center is located at 103 Ripley Road in Cohasset.

New classes for the winter schedule include: Introduction to Landscape Design, Mary Smith, individual landscape problems will be solved; Stained Glass Workshop, Dana Buck, fundamental techniques for stained glass pieces or windows; Survey of Art II, Beverly Stanley, 16-class course covering painting, sculpture and architecture from 1420 to 20th Century; and Figure Painting, Clement Micarelli, intermediate and advanced students, with models.

Also, Beginning and Intermediate Photography (darkroom;, John Goldie III, Thursday evenings; Intermediate Photography, Monday evenings; and Individual Darkroom class.

Classes for college credit through Mass. College of Art Continuing Education Department, Pastel Portraits, Constance Flavell Pratt; Portraiture (oils), Clement Micarelli; Introductory Drawing and Introductory Painting, David Tandy; and Beginning Illustration, Irena Roman.

Also, Basic Drawing, Virginia Moore; Watercolor Painting, Virginia Avery; Seeing Selectively, Judith Van Hamm Wiers; and Design and Color, Louise Kalish.

Special workshops are Experimental Workshop, Joseph Burbank, students choose their own project and medium; The Figure in a Painting, Rosalind Farbush, use of clothed figure as part of composition; and one-day Winter Watercolor Day (outdoors), Avery.

Children's classes are divided into age 6 to 8 with Elisbeth Wyman, Thursday afternoons, and age 9 to 12 with Susan Rodgerson, Wednesday afternoons.

High School Mixed Media Workshop, with Rodgerson, Tuesday evenings, exploration of many techniques.

Nationally known watercolorist Murray Wentworth of Norwell and Oriental brush expert Eleanor Avakian of Hingham will be featured artist-teachers at the special mid-term session of the South Shore Art Center Jan. 10 to Jan. 14 in Cohasset.

The Intensive Watercolor Workshop with Wentworth will take place Monday through Thursday, 7:30 to 10 p.m. and is suited to intermediate and advanced artists who will work on specific projects of their own choosing.

Each participant is asked to bring in reference material or watercolors they have done to re-develop under Wentworth's experienced guidance. Teacher demonstration and critique will be a main part of the sessions.

Wentworth is a member of the American Watercolor Society and an associate of the National Academy of Design.

He is listed in "Who's Who in American Art" and is a nationally respected teacher and award-winning exhibitor.

Oriental Brush Technique Workshop with Avakian is open to beginners to expert, Monday through Friday, 10 to 12:20.

Workshop members will learn how to do basic oriental brush techniques using traditional subjects. The techniques can be used in other media as well as in oriental motifs. This will be an opportunity to learn a new skill.

Avakian studied at the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston, and with professors Hirosho Oda, Chung and Sheng-Chia Sun Lee. Her work has recently been on display at the Staircase Gallery in Hingham.

Pre-registration is essential for both workshops at 103 Ripley Road or by mail. Information on fees and supplies may be obtained by telephoning 383-9548.

CHS sports update . . .

By Alana O'Brien

BOYS BASKETBALL

The boys basketball team improved their record to 3-3 last week by winning Cohasset's first game at Middleboro and clinching the Scituate Christmas Tournament Championship.

The Skippers defeated the Middleboro Sachems 66-61.

Freshman Tony Bogarty played an outstanding game scoring 21 points along with senior Capt. Jack Maloney who scored 18 points.

In the final minute of play the boys were up by three 57-55 and Jack Maloney and David Barcomb went five for six at the free throw line to capture the victory for Cohasset.

Over vacation, the boys participated in the Scituate Christmas Tournament and won by defeating the Scituate Sailors 63-61.

In their first tourney game, they faced Chatham and defeated them 70-51.

Senior Dan Anderson played an excellent game for Cohasset scoring 17 points.

Coach Minelli praised freshman James Creed and junior Dave Barcomb for their strong rebounding job on both boards.

Minelli also commended freshman guard Tony Bogarty for his strong floor leadership for the win which enabled the Skippers to face a bigger, faster, stronger Scituate team.

The boys defeated Scituate 63-61. They had a two point lead at the half and went into the fourth quarter with a 16 point lead. However, the Sailors came back within one point. With 40 seconds left to play Maloney sank a free throw to earn the championship.

Coach Minelli acclaimed Capt. Jack Maloney, junior Dave Barcomb and Dan Anderson for an outstanding game. Minelli also praised sophomore David McDonald for his ball handling in the offensive pressure.

Coach Minelli believes this championship win will be a great incentive for the remainder of the season and he is looking forward to some real competitive games ahead.

Freshman James Creed was awarded the all tournament player trophy and freshman Tony Bogarty was awarded MVP trophy throughout the tournament.

The Skippers played Abington Tuesday and face East Bridgewater at home Friday at 7:45 p.m.

GIRLS BASKETBALL

The girls' varsity basketball team improved their record to 3-1 in the league and 4-2 overall by defeating league opponent Middleboro and earning the runner-up trophy in the Scituate Christmas Tourney.

At Middleboro, the girls scored a game high of 82 points as they defeated the Sachems 82-55.

Coach Fallon praised his team for an outstanding offensive performance.

Capt. Gia Barresi broke a team record by scoring 33 points.

Senior Beverly Mullaney scored 18 points and grabbed 12 rebounds while sophomore Carla Lucas scored 13 points and grabbed 10 rebounds. In the Scituate Christmas Tournament, the Skippers defeated Cape Cod Tech 75-36.

Capt. Gia Barresi and senior Beverly Mullaney scored 20 points apiece for the win.

Juniors Jenny Dickerman and Trina Moore along with sophomore Janet DiGirolamo played strong games for Cohasset.

In the finals of the tourney, Cohasset faced Scituate and was defeated 60-53.

Coach Fallon said his team was equal with Scituate in playing ability, but just made a few more mistakes.

Undefeated Scituate felt Cohasset was the toughest team they've faced this season.

Sophomore Carla Lucas scored 10 points while senior Beverly Mullaney scored a point and grabbed 11 rebounds.

The girls were to face league opponent Abington Tuesday. Coach Fallon said if his team beats Abington, they'll be tied for first place in the league.

Friday, they face East Bridgewater at home at 6:15 p.m.

ATHLETES OF THE WEEK

Junior right winger John Drago scored four goals in a recent hockey match against Scituate which ended in a 7-7 tie.

Unfortunately Drago, a big contributor on this year's squad, dislocated his knee in the third period of the first Lobster Pot game and will be out of commission for three to four weeks.

Senior Capt. Gia Barresi broke a three-day team record of 22 points scored by one player with 33 points in an 84-55 victory over league opponent Middleboro.

Barresi is rated the second best player in the league behind Abington's Chris Donovan who is rated the state's best guard.

HOCKEY

The CHS varsity hockey team's record now stands at 2-1-2 after last week's annual Lobster Pot Tournament.

In the first tourney game, Marshfield defeated the Skippers 7-6 in a very close game.

Seniors Don O'Neill and Dan Bowen scored two apiece and junior Joe Hoffman and sophomore Dan Curran scored one apiece.

In other game action the boys tied Don Bosco in a non-league match 2-2.

Senior center Dan Bowen scored the first goal two minutes into the first period. Don Bosco came back scoring their two goals in the first period.

With a minute and a half remaining Bowen scored his second goal off an assist from junior Joe Hoffman.

Looking back: The voyage of the Vista

By David Wadsworth
Cohasset Historical Society Curator

A Cohasset housewife began to keep a diary of a unique voyage Wednesday, Oct. 7, 1857. The writer was Drusilla Snow Percival, wife of Captain John Peter Turner Percival. The Percivals lived on South Main Street.

Capt. Percival's command was the Bark "Vesta," a Cohasset vessel owned by local merchant John Bates.

Mrs. Percival's diary begins with the words: "Left home, my husband, myself and two children for Boston, went on bark 'Vesta' bound for Constantinople. A number of our friends came down to see us before we left. The wind which was fair when we left home came round east and prevented our sailing that day."

On the following day Mrs. Percival wrote, "A very pleasant morning, wind fair for sailing, the children up and dressed, out on deck before breakfast...Pilot Mr. Hunt came on board to take us out...Dr. Lothrop was on board."

With this, "Vesta" and its Cohasset family left Boston for a wintery trans-Atlantic crossing. By Oct. 10, "Vesta" had encountered poor weather, and Drusilla Percival duly reported: "We are all sick this morning...it is so rough we cannot get about, we are in the Gulf Stream, a very heavy swell with a head wind."

On the following day the weather had cleared and she wrote, "A very pleasant morning, but an east wind — it seems to be an easterly gale, it is very rough...the children are better."

With this description there begins a fascinating story of a sailing voyage across the stormy Atlantic on a small 19th century ship. "Vesta" was a typical vessel of its day, neither as large nor as fast as the famous Clipper ships which plied the ocean routes under clouds of canvas.

It was pursuing its usual occupation of carrying cargo from Boston to the great seaports of Europe and the Middle East.

Continuing her chronicle of "Vesta's" progress, Mrs. Percival noted on Oct. 18, "We are halfway between Boston and the Western Islands (Azores) in Latitude 40.31, Longitude 50.02, we are making some progress in our passage, if we could have a westerly wind a little while, it would help us very much."

During the long voyage, the Percival children, Mary Snow, aged 10 and Priscilla Lothrop, aged 7, recited their daily lessons and in good weather played on the ship's deck. The following day, Drusilla reported: "A very stormy day, wind from the North East, took in sail at 5 o'clock in the morning...wind increasing, reefed (the sails) at 8 o'clock."

Then on Oct. 22, the Captain's wife noted, "Our latitude is 39.44, Longitude 46.20, a fortnight today since we left Boston. A head wind again, it requires a person to have a good stock of patience to go to sea for they have much to contend with, for it seems to be our misfortune to have a gale or a calm, or a heavy swell, but it is of no use to fret, what can't be cured must be endured." Good advice written by a Cohasset seafaring wife.

By the 31st of October, "Vesta" was passing by the Western Islands without stopping, leaving them visible low on the southern horizon. The vessel now was headed for the Straits of Gibralter, still hundreds of miles distant.

On Sunday, Nov. 1st, Mrs. Percival observed, "A Sabbath at sea is a day of rest as much as on shore, there is no labor required of the crew or officers, only to keep a watch on deck and to steer the vessel...all is quiet — we are going at seven miles an hour, we are opposite Pico (the Azores), the children are reading, we are all well."

On the 10th of November, Drusilla noted, "The children are teasing their father to let them come on deck." But head winds continued to slow "Vesta's" eastward crossing, and on the following day the vessel tacked toward the coast of Africa, but could not gain much toward Gibralter. They now were a week behind schedule.

Not until Nov. 14 was the first harbinger of approaching land sighted. "The children were excited, a visitor from the Spanish coast — or African, in the shape of a large owl, he perched on the topgallant yard, the Mate tried to catch him, but he was off in a hurry."

Finally on Monday, Nov. 16, "Vesta's" lookouts spotted land ahead, Cape Trafalgar on the Spanish coast, and the Cohasset bark soon entered the Straits of Gibralter.

But by Nov. 23, the ship had turned about and was fleeing westward while struggling in the grips of a tumultuously violent easterly storm. Gibralter now was miles away to the east, and Mrs. Percival tersely wrote, "We did not know our position." Despite damage, "Vesta" weathered the storm, and on the night of the 24th sailed past Gibralter, leaving that famous rock disappearing astern as the morning sun arose.

"Vesta's" passengers and crew celebrated Thanksgiving on Nov. 26 with a dinner of turkey, mutton, green peas and duff pudding. That was somewhat of a change from the usual mutton and beans.

From Boston to Gibralter the trip had taken 47 days; "it seemed sometimes as though we would never reach the Straits," wrote the Captain's wife.

"Vesta's" voyage from there across the Mediterranean to the island of Malta, where the ship abruptly was sold to new owners, leaving passengers and crew to find their own way home, is another story, — for it was not until Sunday, July 3, 1858 that the Percival family finally found its way back to Boston.

Drusilla Snow Percival's account of that voyage in its original handwriting can be found in the archives of the Cohasset Historical Society. It is only one of the fascinating stories of 19th century Cohasset seafarers that are still preserved for modern 20th century readers.

Obituaries

Howard Schramn

Howard J. Schramn, 74, retired owner of the Cohasset Motor Company, died Dec. 24 at Massachusetts General Hospital after a brief illness.

Born in Pittsburgh, he moved to Boston with his family when he was 15. He lived in Jamaica Plain for many years before moving to Scituate in 1942. He lived in Cohasset and Sandwich for six years.

He worked for Hoover Motors in Boston from his youth, advancing to manager before buying the company. He sold the firm in 1955 when he opened the Cohasset Motors Ford dealership. He retired several years ago.

He was a past director of the Metropolitan Ford Dealers and a member of the National Automobile Dealers Association. He was a past member of the University Club of Boston and a member of the Crosscup Pishon Veterans Club of Boston.

A founding member of the Scituate Youth Center, he was a member of the Scituate VFW Post 3169, the Scituate Disabled American Veterans, the Scituate Harbor Yacht Club and the Round Hill Golf Club of Sandwich. He was a former member of the Cohasset Golf Club and Boston Chamber of Commerce.

A World War II Army veteran, he was a member of the 8th Infantry Division, captured in the Battle of the Bulge, and was a prisoner of war in Germany for six months. He received the Purple Heart and other war decorations.

He leaves his wife, Hazel M. (Thomson) Schramn of Sandwich; a son, Peter T. Schramn of Cohasset; two daughters, Pauline S. Sheppard of Cohasset and Susan J. Schramn of Everett; a sister, Madeline Dunn of Ohio; six grandchildren, two nieces and two nephews.

A funeral service was conducted Dec. 29 at the First Trinitarian Congregational Church, Scituate Center. Burial was in Blue Hill Cemetery, Braintree.

Donations may be made to the Hemodialysis (Kidney) Unit, c/o Dr. Nina Rubin, Massachusetts General Hospital, Boston 02114.

Albert David Miller

Albert David Miller, 68, of Cohasset, an optician associated with University Hospital, Boston, died Friday at home.

Born in Boston, he attended Boston schools. He had lived in Cohasset for 20 years. Previously, he lived in upstate New York.

He was a member of the state Board of Dispensing Opticians and a former member of the Lions Club. He was a Navy veteran of World War II and Korea.

He leaves his wife, Virginia (Fry) Miller of Cohasset; a son, David A. Miller of Scituate; a daughter, Paula K. Miller of Cohasset; a sister, Mrs. Margaret L. Miller of Port Deposit, Md.; and two grandchildren.

A funeral Mass was celebrated Tuesday at St. Anthony's Church. Burial was in Woodlawn Cemetery, Everett.

Cohasset Knoll visitor

Santa Claus arrived at Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home on schedule Christmas Eve. He brought a bag of Christmas presents that he distributed to every resident.

The residents of Cohasset Knoll had a very busy schedule last month. The Girl Scouts brought their musical instruments and gave a concert. Brownie and Cub Scout Troops came in to carol, and both Scituate and Cohasset High School choruses entertained.

New Year's Eve was celebrated at noontime Friday with hats and horns and all the trimmings.

The public is always welcome to come to the Knoll's activities.

Goalie Mark Brown had 35 saves for Cohasset.

The team also tied Scituate 7-7 in a non-league match. The Skippers were up 7-5 with 20 seconds remaining and the Scituate Sailors came back and scored two goals to tie the game.

Junior right wing John Drago scored a hat-trick plus one in outstanding play while senior Dan Bowen netted two and Captain Don O'Neill netted one.

This year's squad lost nine seniors to graduation and junior Lee Wilson to a knee injury from last year's league championship team.

They're rated fourth in Division two behind Seekonk, Franklin and Falmouth.

Coach Tom Burnell is looking to this year's seniors for some strong leadership, especially from Co-Captain Don O'Neill and center Dan Bowen.

Their biggest game will be against Duxbury next Tuesday at 8 p.m. at Winter Gardens. Duxbury is the team to beat this year.

Helping Coach Burnell are graduates Peter Quilty, Jack Bowen, Scott Ripley and Larry Drago.

Between now and their big game against Duxbury, they played league opponent Rockland Tuesday and travel to Abington Saturday at 1 p.m.

CCC winter programs

The Cohasset Community Center winter programs have been mailed and registration is underway. A wide range of classes and workshops have been planned and will begin the week of Jan. 10.

Some of the youth courses are babysitting, Dungeons and Dragons, cartooning, sewing, typing, puppetry, dance and movement courses, and gymnastics.

Adults may choose from exercise programs, dancercize, yoga, aerobic dancing, computer courses, writing, word processing, typing, cooking, crafts and much more.

For information call the Center daily from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. at 383-0088.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
THE TRIAL COURT
THE PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT
NORFOLK DIVISION
DOCKET NO. 82E0134-P1

To Rudolph A. Curelli of Cohasset in said County and to all other persons interested.

A petition has been presented to said Court by MARGARET A. CURELLI of Boston in the County of Suffolk representing that she hold as tenant in common an undivided part or share of certain land lying in Cohasset in said County and briefly described as follows: The land in Cohasset, Norfolk County, Commonwealth of Massachusetts, being shown as Lot 15 on a Plan of Lots, Linden Drive, Cohasset, Mass., developed for D.J. Buckley Co., dated September 1, 1955, Lewis W. Perkins & Sons, Engineers, recorded with Norfolk Deeds in Plan Book 210, Plan No. 187, to which plan reference is made for a more particular description of said premises, setting forth that he desire that all of said land may be sold at private sale for not less than one hundred forty-five thousand dollars and praying that partition may be made of all the land aforesaid according to law, and to that end that a commissioner be appointed to make such partition and be ordered to make sale and conveyance of all, or any part of said land which the Court finds cannot be advantageously divided, either at private sale or public auction, and be ordered to distribute the net proceeds thereof.

If you desire to object thereto, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham before ten o'clock in the forenoon on the twenty-sixth day of January 1983, the return day of this citation.

Witness, ROBERT M. FORD, Esquire, First Justice of said Court, this fifteenth day of December 1982.

STUDENT AID.

It takes more than brains to go to college. It takes money. For tuition, room and board, and books.

The Army College Fund is designed to help you get that money for college while serving your country.

If you qualify, you can join the Army College Fund when you join the Army. For every dollar you put in, Uncle Sam puts in five. Or more.

So, after just two years in the Army, you can have up to $15,200 for college. After three years, up to $20,100.

To get your free copy of the Army College Fund booklet, call or visit your local Army Recruiter. It could be the most important book you've ever read.

Four charged in CHS window smashing

Police have charged four Cohasset High School students and one former student with malicious destruction of property stemming from a Nov. 19 vandalism incident which resulted in 75 broken windows at several Cohasset schools.

Arrested and charged with malicious destruction of property at the Deer Hill School and the high school were Eric Christiansen, 17 of 82 Forest Avenue; William Cuff, 17 of 271 South Main Street; Andrew Spalt, 19 of 376 North Main Street, a former C.H.S. student; and 16-year old man, who is unidentified, a student at C.H.S.

Thomas Wright, 17, of 277 Fair Oaks Lane was charged with malicious destruction of property at Deer Hill School.

The arrests came after two months of investigation by Officer Clifton Jones.

Cuff, Wright, Spalt and Christiansen were arrigned in Quincy District Court Tuesday morning and pleaded not guilty to the charges.

They were released on their own personal recognizance and a pre-trial conference is

And more candidates on the horizon

Five file for selectman seat

By Mike Berger

Former Police Chief John DeBassio heads a list of five residents who plan to file nomination papers for selectmen.

In a telephone poll conducted by the Mariner DeBassio, Frank England, former School Committee Chairman, Diane Sullivan, Personnel Board Chairman Cliff Mitman, and Advisory Board member Jim Lagrotteria said they will seek election.

As a result of two special town meeting votes, three position seats are available for the April 9 Election.

Two positions hold three-year terms and one term is for one-year. In announcing their intentions, DeBassio said he would seek the one-year term. The others did not signify their intentions.

However, Fran Marks of the town clerk's office, said when nomination papers are submitted, candidates must signify if they are running for a three or one-year term.

Nomination papers will be available Monday and the deadline for submission to the town clerk is Friday, Feb. 25 at 5 p.m. Wednesday, Feb. 23 is the last day to take out papers.

Papers must be certified and accepted by the candidate by March 11. The town election is Saturday, April 9, one week following the annual town meeting.

In addition to calling the five candidates, the Mariner called 10 other residents whose interest in the position has drawn speculation from other town residents.

They are Chet Ellis of 33 Tower Lane; Richard Sylvia of 445 Beechwood Street; Lillian Murray; incumbent board chairman Henry Ainslie of 45 Reservoir Road; Donald Evans of 72 North Main Street;Burtram Pratt of 75 Ripley Road; Richard Leggat of 124 Atlantic Avenue; Doris Golden of 2 Bound Brook Lane; Pat Morrissey of 137 Beach St.; and Richard Avery of 22 Surrey Drive.

Here are individual comments.

Henry Ainslie — "I haven't fully made up my mind. I am still considering it."

John DeBassio — "I probably am running for a one-year term. I have no particular interest in a long-term situation. I will make a formal announcement soon."

Chet Ellis was unavailable for comment.

Cliff Mitman of 118 Beach Street — "I definitely am going to run." He was due to make his announcement this week.

Richard Sylvia — "I am very interested and am considering. But I would have to have the right job and enough time to do it." Sylvia recently sold his auto mechanics business and is Cohasset's member to the South Shore Regional Vocational Technical School Committee and a member of the Govt. Structure and School Facilities Committees.

Frank England of Old Coach Road—"All I'm saying now is I plan to run. I will have more to say in my announcement."

Jim Lagrotteria of 104 Howe Road said he is running and told the (Mariner) his announcement was to have been made Tuesday, Jan. 11.

Pat Morrisey — "I'm not quite sure. I will make up my mind in a week."

Diane Sullivan, 42, of 708 Jerusalem Road, will be running for a seat on the board of selectmen. Frequently in attendance at selectmen meetings,

Crowell prepared to fight for budget

By Patricia Anne Walsh

If Supt. Eugene Crowell and the school committee cannot agree on proposed budget cuts, Crowell said he may ask town meeting to override Prop. 2½.

Crowell estimates he can count on 400 votes, comprised primarily of school department staff and parents, to override Prop. 2½.

At Monday's session, the school committee got it's first look at Crowell's level-funded budget, with proposed cuts to follow at next week's session.

Under advisory committee guidelines and Prop. 2½, the school committee has a $3,791,284 operating budget. Increased salaries and other costs will require a minimum cut of $268,071 and up to $300,000 if there are "add ons."

A salary reserve of $39,903 has been included to pay for raises for non negotiated workers. This figures out to approximately a 6 per cent raise, although contracts with this staff has not been negotiated.

There will be no new programs; no expansion of existing programs, eg. computers; and no fixed assets for replacements, Crowelle said.

There will also be no long term improvements included in the budget such as repair of the Deer Hill kitchen roof at $15,000; Phase II of the Auditorium renovations $50,000; masonry and repointing $10,000; roof survey of all three schools $2,000; CHS Cafeteria kitchen floor $5,000; or alarm system $10,000 for a total of $92,000 he envisions needing. Letters will be sent to the School Facilities Committee.

He also said the surplus in the budget variously figured from $104,000 to 90,000 under utilities had been absorbed when the Advisory Board forced an $89,000 cut from his proposed budget last year.

This budget has been figured so as not to close the Osgood School, Crowell said, although he acknowledged closing the school might result in savings of $150,000 to $180,000. "We will drop enrollment by 60 pupils next year he estimated: nine in the high school, one at the Osgood, which shows the decline has leveled off there, and the remainder at Deer Hill.

He presented the administrative budget, saying he wanted at least $1,000 for services of Town Counsel. "I budgeted $2,000, he said," but I will probably propose a cut of $1,000"

Dennis warns on kerosene heaters

By Mike Berger

Building Inspector Bob Dennis has joined those health and safety officials across the country warning consumers about the threat of kerosene room heaters.

In an interview with the (Mariner) Dennis advised that wood and coal stoves should be inspected by him for a certification.

He said if there is a fire, fire insurance coverage will be voided if the stove is not certified and inspected.

Kerosene space heaters have recently been advertised for sale by many retailers. But there are many indications by health and safety officials that the heaters may be health hazards.

G. Timothy Johnszon, M.D. and a writer for the Chicago Tribune, N.Y. News Syndicate, wrote approximately three million kerosene heaters were sold in the country last year.

Although many manufacturers say the heaters are designed to minimize the danger of fire, the disadvantage is the fumes.

When the heaters burn fuel, they put out hot, smelly gases. These heaters, said Dennis, are not approved by the Massachusetts safety standards but are still sold in stores.

Dennis explained when the heater burns oxygen, if the flame does not receive enough oxygen, there is the danger of too much carbon monoxide; the result is the danger of suffocation.

Dennis said consumers should check the heaters to see if they are laboratory approved. If the label should say, "BS or FC" the consumer will know they are lab approved.

Johnson wrote that Consumer Reports magazine recently tested a variety of kerosene heaters and measured how much gas they gave off when used in an average sized room.

He said all the varieties gave off enough gases to be judged a serious health hazard to people, especially women who are pregnant, individuals with asthma and patients with cardiovascular disease.

Johnson also added the heaters, over an extended

McKinnon office hours

State Sen. Allan McKinnon (D-Norfolk/Plymouth) said a member of his staff will be available for office hours 9 to 10 a.m., Thursday, Jan. 20.

VoTech public hearing

The South Shore Vocational Technical Regional School Committee will hold a public hearing on the proposed fiscal 1984 school budget tonight (Wednesday, Jan. 12) at 8 p.m., at the Webster Street school, in Hanover.

All interested residents and finance committees are invited.

Early release day

Thursday, Jan. 20, will be an EARLY RELEASE DAY in the Cohasset Public Schools. There will be no afternoon Kindergarten sessions and other students will be dismissed according to the following schedule:

Buses will depart the Junior/Senior High School at 12:20 p.m.; Deer Hill School at 12:40 p.m.; and Joseph Osgood School at 1 p.m.

Lunch will be served in all of the schools.

This EARLY RELEASE DAY has been authorized by the Cohasset School Committee in order to allow staff members at the Junior/Senior High School, Deer Hill School, and Joseph Osgood School to take part in Curriculum Update Workshops.

Tax bills due

The average Cohasset taxpayer will see an average increase in taxes of between $7 and $9 for the first half of the 1982-83 tax bill. Tax bills were mailed out Dec. 30 and will be due Jan. 30. The tax rate is up 75 cents from $54.75 to $55.50, an increase of about 1.4 percent.

The slight tax increase came after the town was allowed to tax 1981 construction. This will add $209,643 to the town treasury for 1982-83.

Tax bills were mailed to property owners about three months late but were delayed because of errors in the town's 100 percent revaluation project and state approval of a tax rate prevented bills from going out earlier. Details on new construction in 1981 had to be located on revaluation documents.

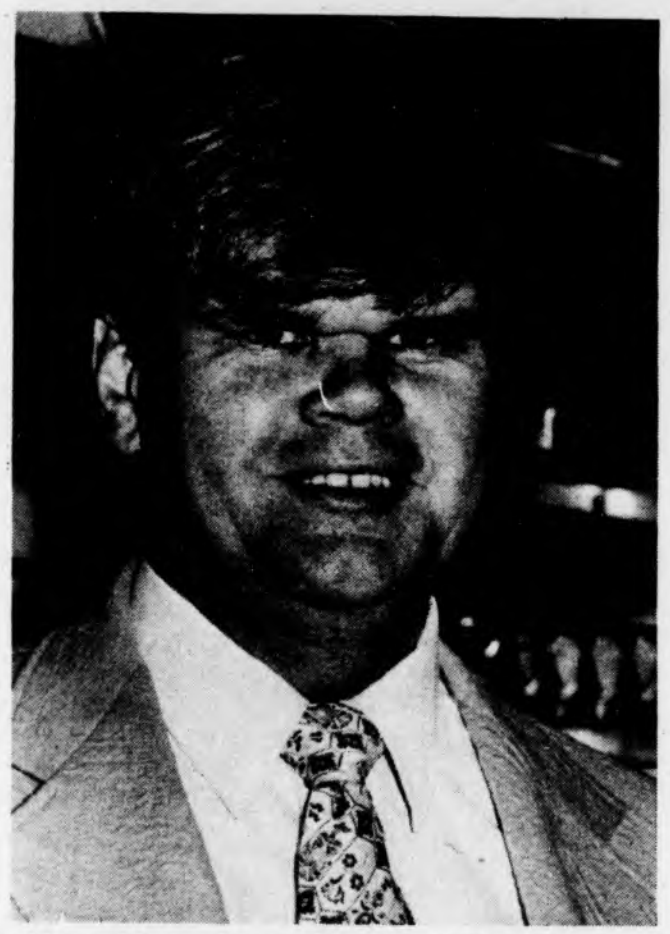
The state refused to let Cohasset send out estimated tax bills and ordered the town to hire an appraiser which could guarantee a satisfactory revaluation job. Town Treasurer Gordon Flint said he has had to borrow $4 million to stay afloat while he awaited tax payments. Loan payments will cost the town about $40,000 in interest payments. Since bills were mailed out Dec. 30, response has been heavy, Flint said.

Town meeting warrant

The warrant for the annual town meeting is open, and will close on Feb. 1.

It was incorrectly reported in last week's Mariner that the warrant opened on that date.

Selectmen announced two weeks ago the warrant would be opened immediately until Feb. 1 for submission of articles. Any article signed by 10 or more residents may be submitted to selectmen for inclusion into the annual town meeting warrant.



Open burning

Open burning in Cohasset will be conducted from Jan. 15 through May 1, 1983.

Permission to conduct burning may be received by calling Cohasset Fire Headquarters at 383-0260 on the day burning is to be conducted.

Residents are reminded that burning of leaves, grass, hay and stumps is not permitted.

Burning shall be conducted from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., and at a distance greater than 75 feet from any dwelling.

Meet Cohasset's new fire chief, Martin Dooley. Selectmen recently negotiated a contract with the former Hartford, Connecticut resident.

Permission to burn may be canceled at any time due to adverse weather conditions. Questions regarding open burning may be answered by calling the Cohasset Fire Department at 383-0260.

Water commission vacancy

Selectmen were notified that Water Commissioner Robert Jackson will not seek re-election when his term expires in April, 1983. Jackson wrote to selectmen last week about his decision not to seek re-election to the commission.

Competency evaluation

Dedham District Court has ordered a preliminary examination to determine if defendant John Tammaro is mentally competent to stand trial. Tammaro, a North End man, is accused of murdering 20 year-old Leslie Ann Haynes. He was charged with one count of murder and unlawfully carrying a gun in a motor vehicle. Tammaro pleaded innocent to both charges. This preliminary examination should determine if Tammaro should be further examined for competency, Asst. District Attorney Robert Banks said. Tammaro is being held in the Dedham House of Correction. No bail was set. A Jan. 25 conference is planned.

Cruiser investigation

Acting Police Chief Joseph Kealey is still continuing an investigation which is searching for a man who smashed a cruiser windshield on New Year's Eve. Teenagers attending a party at 34 Windy Hill Road called police to complain of several uninvited persons who were getting out of hand. Officer Robert Jackson arrived at the home of Anthony Carmado. A man left the house, smashed the cruiser windshield with a board and dashed down the street. Damage was estimated at $300 to the cruiser.

In what may be a related incident, a man, at approximately the same time, broke into a neighbor's home, stole the family car and drove through the garage doors and backed down the driveway. The man drove the car, apparently to West Corner and then returned to Windy Hill Road. The man ditched the car in a patch of woods and escaped on foot. Kealey said Officer Jackson is continuing to investigate and is close to issuing court complaints concerning a suspect.

New Postmaster sworn in

Edward Fonseca, Jr., 42 of Marshfield greeted several town officials, postal employees and well-wishers Friday as he was sworn in the town's postmaster. He succeeded Gerard Keating. Fonseca praised Keating and added, "I have some big shoes to fill and I learned a lot from a dedicated employee like Mr. Keating. He always provided leadership. I want to continue the good postal service and make it better. My thanks to Mr. Keating for his help." Officer in charge Steve Savicke, who managed the Cohasset office until Fonseca was appointed, will return to South Boston. A 1960 graduate of Marshfield High School, Fonseca served with the Air Force in Vietnam. He began his postal career in 1968 as a clerk in Cohasset and became postmaster of Brant Rock in 1972. He has held managerial positions in post offices in the Greater Boston area and was in charge of the Cohasset office from January to May of 1982 and recently managed the financial unit of the South Boston Postal annex. District Postal Manager Philip Sullivan said he was confident Fonseca will continue Keating's success in Cohasset and manage the operations efficiently but with an emphasis on excellent customer relations.

Sullivan also attends many board of health, appeals board and planning board hearings. She is a member of the Cohasset Community Center board of directors and the parents' committee. Sullivan was the former supervisor of finance for Mr. Donut of America.

Doris Golden of Bound Brook Court, a former school committee member, is still "open to consideration" regarding a campaign for selectmen. No decision has yet been made by Golden who was chairman of the school committee for five years.

Although he was asked to run for a seat on the board, Richard Avery said he is not considering that option. A member of the sewer advisory committee, Avery said there are enough good candidates running for the vacant seats and there is no need for him to enter the race.

Lillian Murray, an active participant in the senate campaign of Jack Conway, said although she considered running for selectman, she has had to discard that ambition. The 26 year-old daughter of Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray said she is too busy with school and work to include the duties of a selectman. She said she is not ruling out a future candidacy.

Richard Leggat, a proponent of the five-member board of selectmen, said he will definitely not run for a seat on the board. He added that he "hoped to encourage someone good to run" for that office.

Although rumored to be considering a race for a selectman's position, Burtram Pratt of Ripley Road denied he was in the running.

Another rumored candidate, Donald Evans of North Main Street, is on vacation until Jan. 16, and has made no formal announcement.

Other positions on the April ballot include one assessor for three years; two school committee members for three years; three trustees of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library for three years each; one member of the board of health and one water commissioner for three years ; one sewer commissioner for three years and one for one year (to fill a vacancy); one member of the planning board for five years; and one member of the recreation commission for five years.

Town armed for extension request on sewer

By Jane Lane

All technical information has been submitted to the state in preparation for Friday's meeting when the town will request more time to prepare an alternative waste disposal system.

Thomas Bracken, a special environmental attorney who is preparing the case for the town, has handed over all technical data to the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) and the attorney general's office.

That information will be the basis for the town's request for an extension of time in which alternatives to the $13.7 million Metcalf and Eddy central sewer plan can be explored.

Essential to the town's argument in requesting the time delay is an explanation of the previously-approved plan's deficiencies, according to Town Counsel Richard Henderson, who is assisting the environmental attorney in the case.

Because the town approved the central sewer program in 1980, it is imperative that Cohasset explain why that same plan is being rejected in favor of less expensive alternatives.

At a meeting last week with the sewer advisory committee, Henderson told Chairman Charles DeSantis the state must know why the previously-approved plan was rejected two years later in order to study cheaper alternatives.

"We have got to be meticulous," he told the advisory committee. "We have to analyze the Metcalf and Eddy report and show the state serious reasons why we need alternatives. We need sound, specific reasons."

Included in that packet of information to the state are letters from nine engineering firms which have expressed an interest in investigating alternative disposal systems for Cohasset.

Atty. Bracken said the interest shown by these companies will illustrate to the state Cohasset's sincerity in pursuing less expensive, but viable sewer alternatives.

The state has threatened to sue the town if it does not proceed with the sewering plan which had been approved by the EPA.

Requests For Proposals (RFP's) were sent last week to the nine firms by DeSantis. The companies have four weeks to reply to that letter. Each firm was requested to review Cohasset's disposal system and to acknowledge whether alternative and less expensive systems can be devised.

Atty. Bracken said in lieu of a previously-designed plan, the state must be shown "what likelihood there is of an alternative plan that is cheaper, but fulfills the federal regulations."

DeSantis said the nine interested companies "do not know Cohasset intimately" and have not worked in the town, but have expressed an interest in designing alternative systems.

"We can't give any specifics to the state on Friday," DeSantis admitted, "but we can tell the state we want an engineering firm to look at our situation and see if they can come up with something that costs much, much less, but works as well. If the attorney general is looking for a feasibility plan — that's what we are asking for. We are trying to get that feasibility plan."

Bracken said the town must show a good faith effort to move toward a viable solution — "so it does not appear you are dragging your feet."

The Boston attorney told the advisory committee members last week that Cohasset must convince the state that since the Metcalf and Eddy plan was developed, more cost-efficient plans have been devised.

DeSantis explained that Cohasset was not unusual in its attempt to explore alternative methods to a central sewer system. Other communities throughout the state have devised such systems. That is why Cohasset is looking to these "innovative and alternative" firms to create such systems.

Bracken said the letters from the nine engineering firms should contain evidence the companies have designed alternative systems in communities similar in topography and size to Cohasset. The more similar the problems, the greater the comparison can be made to Cohasset's sewering plight, he said.

In addition to exploring alternatives to a central sewer system proposed by Metcalf and Eddy, an alternative firm must also submit proposals for correcting the sewer discharge problem at the treatment plant, and establishing a timetable in which the pollution at James Brook will be eliminated.

Atty. Bracken said he has witnessed many communities, such as Cohasset, which have opted to explore reasonable sewer alternatives.

At the end of last week's meeting, Bracken said he felt the town had a good chance of convincing the state to grant the extension to find methods other than the central sewerage system.

DeSantis, Maxwell named to sewer commission

Selectmen voted to appoint Charles DeSantis and Maxwell Pounder to the sewer commission after listening to comments made by residents attending last week's meeting.

Sole commission member Joseph Gwinn nominated Richard Avery and Pounder to replace the two members who recently resigned from the commission.

Janet Daggett and Gerard Stanton resigned after town meeting's mandate to explore an alternative to the $13.7 million Metcalf and Eddy sewer plan.

Although Gwinn emphasized he had "no problem" with appointing DeSantis, a proponent of the town meeting article, he thought Avery would be a less prejudiced member. He also maintained that DeSantis was quite busy as chairman of the sewer advisory committee and in his employment as a commercial airline pilot.

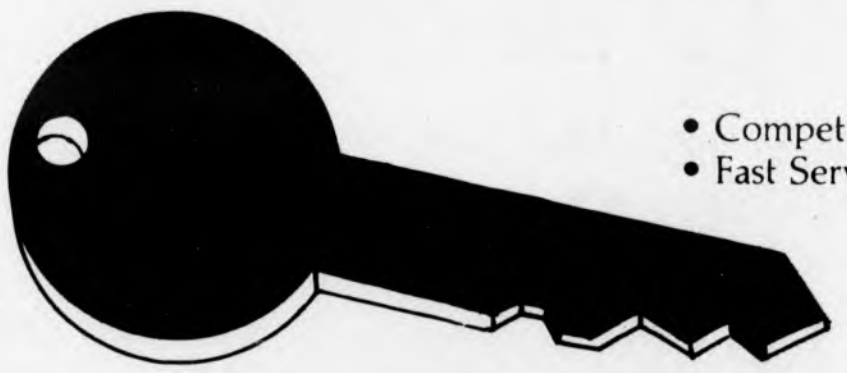
But two residents, Diane Sullivan and Clark Chatterton, urged selectmen to appoint DeSantis to the commission. They both noted that DeSantis worked long hours in his efforts to convince the town to explore altenative disposal systems, and his knowledge would be an asset to the commission.

Selectmen Henry Ainslie and Mary Jane McArthur initially agreed that DeSantis could "do the most for the town" as chairman of the sewer advisory committee and appointment to the sewer commission would be an additional burden to his responsibilities.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle nominated DeSantis, saying the town voted for his article during town meeting, and that he should be placed above the other residents requesting consideration for appointment to the commission.

Gwinn told selectmen he received letters from eight persons, who expressed an interest in serving on the commission. Based on the applicant's background, and his non-prejudiced position regarding Article 4 of town meeting, Gwinn nominated Avery and Pounder.

Pounder, who attended the selectmen's meeting, said he owned a small architectural firm in Boston and had worked with engineers on numerous sewer disposal systems.



He said the town has been told the soil conditions are not sufficient to devise alternative systems, but Cohasset voters have also been convinced it had approved a program that is not the most cost-effective and efficient.

"It is important we get a system that is efficient and cost-effective now and in the long run," he said.

Selectmen were unanimously in favor of Pounder's appointment, but were split on their decision for the second appointment.

Red Gate Lane resident Clark Chatterton said he felt it would be in the best interest of the town to appoint DeSantis to the commission, based on the "massive amount" of work he had completed while working on Article 4.

Dennis warns on kerosene heaters . . .

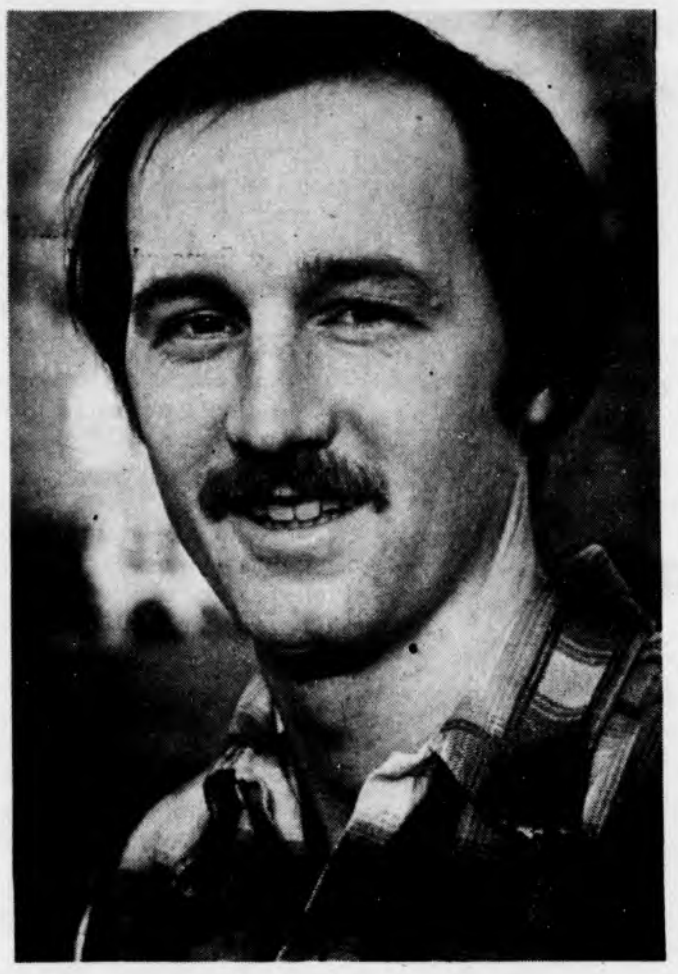
period of time, could be long-term hazards to healthy people. Gases get trapped in the home because of home insulation.

Both Dennis and Johnson said homeowners who own a kerosene heater should run it sparingly and place it in a well-ventilated room or in a fireplace where the flue may help carry away some of the gases.

Since he became building inspector in the fall, Dennis has inspected many stoves and chimneys. He gave a few hints to consumers about usage.

Stoves should be the proper size and should be located in a non-combustible hearth area and should be a proper distance from combustible materials. The distance depends on the material of the hearth.

Flue pipes should be tightly screwed because of the resulting fibration and the flue pipes should be the proper distance from combustible materials.



Chimneys should have a flue liner in it to reduce creosote buildup. To avoid creosote, soft and properly seasoned wood should be burned. Creosote buildup can be monitored by the temperature of the stove.

Stovers, burning over 300 degrees (Fahrenheit) will eliminate creosote but temperatures should not exceed 600 degrees.

Chimneys and flue pipes should be cleaned once a year.

Christmas wrapping paper and advertising circulars should not be burned and parents should be careful about allowing small children to play around the stove. A kettle of water should be kept on the stove which will give off steam and allow more moisture in the air so the air doesn't dry out.

Dennis has found in the last few months more people have applied for stove permits and asked for information on how to install them. They purchase the permit but never call back to have it inspected, a $10 fee which covers a permit and inspection.

Used stoves should be checked for cracks, rust and thin spots and when new stoves are purchased, consumers should be selective about the proper sized stove. A stove which is too large could cause creosote buildup; one too small could cause hot and uncomfortable temperatures and increase the danger of a fire. Stoves should also be inspected to see they that they are laboratory-approved.

Dennis, originally from Hingham, has lived in Cohasset for a year now. He graduated from Fitchburg State with a degree in Industrial Arts. He taught school in Westwood, specializing in architectural design for three years.

He then became a self-employed contractor and continues to work in his trade but only on the weekends and his projects are in other towns.

His goal is to maintain Cohasset as a beautiful town and ensure buildings are put up to code, are aesthetic and maintain the historical tradition of the town.

His other goal is to ensure construction is safe for future howeowners. He finds the most difficult part of the job is zoning and interpreting the town bylaws correctly.

Riding Club meets

The Cohasset Riding Club is sponsoring the first event of its winter schedule, Friday, Jan. 14. Hingham photo-journalist, Leonard Tagg, will present a slide show and talk on the Lippizan Stud Farm of Lippiza, Germany.

The program will be held at the Cohasset Community Center at 7:30 p.m. Admission will be $2. The members of the Cohasset 4-H Club will hold a brief business meeting following the program.

The next program scheduled is February 4 at the Community Center. It will feature eventing films by noted instructor and competitor, Bill Woods.

The Cohasset Riding Club welcomes new members, whether or not they own a horse. Interested persons should call Betty Cisneros of 312 King St.

Sixty Plus Club

Cohasset Sixty Plus Club will meet Thursday, Jan 20 at the Unitarian Parish House. Social time will be from noon to 12:45. There will be a short business meeting, followed by bingo games, door and other prizes.

The club's new vice president because of the illness of Bernard Fallon is Sheila Kelly.

A five-day trip to Inverurie, Bermuda, is planned for March. Call 545-3349 for reservations.

Jeremey Bagley, 6, a member of the artist in residence playgroup. Jeremey's in Mrs. Price's first grade.

☐There is a new member of our community and he was almost a New Year's '83 baby! Mr. and Mrs. Donald Davis (Donna Sargent) of 14 Elm Court had their baby boy on Jan. 3 at South Shore Hospital. Congratulations!

☐The passengers that were aboard the Nantucket Ferry last Friday had an unexpected treat. Our gymnastic team, enroute to a match against Nantucket, performed some of their routines out on the open deck (with a full wind blowing and chilly temperatures seemingly going un-noticed)...one lady managed to snap a few shots. On the return trip one couple wanted an encore and was most anxious to find out how the team did. The girls won their match (which was shown on cable television that evening) and enjoyed Nantucket hospitality at the same time. One last note...if you ever want a "deal" or, a "bargain" follow those girls! They certainly made fine purchases and at record low prices.

☐Jake and Joan Powers had a nice New Year's Eve, and a warm one too...they were in Florida to "ring out the old and ring in the new" and had a grand time.

☐Amanda Leone, daughter of CHS football coach John Leone, was a celebrity on the Dave Maynard morning show a few weeks ago. She gave Dave a present for Toys for Tots and, upon request, his favorite saying ("piece of cake"). Everyone loved it!

☐It may seem hard to believe, but several men were spotted playing golf last Saturday, Jan 8. I'm sure after reading about it, many more wish that they had, right, Peter and George?

☐Nancy Anderson had a memorable trip to Laramie, Wyoming. She went to visit her daughter Jean and husband Joe (Hagan) and their three children. Nancy left here the day after Christmas and the weather was beautiful...there was the famous blizzard raging when she arrived in Denver. Joe had to park three and one-half hours away from the airport, then walk to find Nancy in the huge crowd that was locked in there. When Nancy and her baggage were finally located, they had to walk back to the car (Nancy in her high heels as friends advised her she would be more comfortable in the plane) and then drive for seven hours to get to Laramie! Nancy reports that Cohasset does a much better job snow plowing than they do in Denver. Who would have thought it?

☐Philip Arbury is a happy boy, riding like the wind on his brand new bike. He claims it's one of the best presents he's ever gotten, and he just loves it.

☐Chris Laugelle hurt his knee recently and will be incapacitated for a while. Here's hoping you're up and about in record time, Chris.

Shifi Jordan

☐Petersen Realtors of 26 South Main St., has a new staff member, Shifi Jordan, G.R.I. Shifi came to the U.S. 15 years ago and was involved in real estate investments in this country and overseas for several years. With experience in the Travel and Advertising Businesses, Personnel Services and later Photographic Modeling, Shifi has been actively listing and selling real estate on the South Shore for the past three and one-half years. Each year she has sold over $1,000,000 in volume. A resident of Cohasset for the past seven years, her real estate expertise encompasses the entire South Shore.

scheduled for Feb. 3.

The juvenile was released on personal recognizance and his case was continued to Jan. 24.

The arrests came after a search for a group of town vandals who smashed 75 windows at C.H.S., the junior high wing, Deer Hill and Osgood Schools.

School officials estimated the damage at $5,000.

Acting Police Chief Joseph Kealey said in November police had a few suspects in the case, a group of in town residents. Kealey said the window smashing was first completed at Deer Hill and continued to the high school.

He praised Officer Jones for his continued investigation into the case.

Kealey said Tuesday he has no reason to "believe or disbelieve" the students were involved in the vandalism of seven of nine school buses Jan. 3.

Between sunset Sunday, Jan. 2 and early Monday morning Jan. 3 "professional" vandals cut ignition wires on seven of nine school buses parked on Route 3A owned by mechanic Charles Pape.

School Supt. Eugene Crowell had the town-wide fire alarm sounded to notify students classes had been called off.

Kealey said that investigation is still continuing.

Auto body shops to get Class II licenses

Selectmen told a group of auto body repair shop owners that their 1983 Class II licenses will be issued.

Several disgruntled shop owners attended last week's meeting to express their discontent with selectmen's intention not to renew the licenses until after the firms submit financial statements.

Selectmen explained that under the Massachusetts General Laws, the used car dealers' license may only be issued if selling cars is the principal portion of their business. In order to determine that, selectmen would have to review detailed financial statements submitted by the local companies. Therefore, it originally looked as though the renewal of the Class II licenses would be withheld until the review was completed.

But at the outset of last week's meeting, selectman Mary Jane McArthur said town counsel had advised the board it was proper to temporarily renew the licenses to the shop owners. But a detailed questionnaire will be mailed to them July 1 in which the owners will have to answer numerous questions relating to the state laws.

The owners would have to reply to this detailed form within two and a half months, she said.

Hold up reported at Papa Gino's

Police are investigating a report of a holdup on the night manager of Papa Gino's Tuesday night. Two men armed with a sawed off shotgun and a handgun tried to hold up the Papa Gino's night manager as he made the evening's bank deposit. Acting Police Chief Joseph Kealey said one of men wore a ski mask and the other stood in the shadows.

Police said the employee managed to drop the money in the deposit box at Rockland Trust before being confronted by the two men. The attemped robbery occurred in Cushing Plaza.

Crowell to fight for budget . . .

Bus transportation costs will increase by perhaps $20,000, but may be partially offset by combining $7,000 for transportation for athletes with the commuting transporation.

Steve Hart's special need budget showed a drop of $2,500 because of new Chapter 607 which requires the State Dept. of Ed. to pick up the costs of DMH mentally retarted patients over 21 years of age but an increase of $2,000 for tutoring.

Crowell has proposed that the school committee meet every Monday for the next several weeks to discuss the budget. At Monday's session, two advisory committee representatives were unable to attend because of prior commitments.

Crowell said they were notifed of the Jan. 10 session and expected to attend future budget meetings.

The '82 legislature

It's only human nature that as we watch the two-ring circus, we mean the legislature, perform, we first notice the wild animals, we mean the political personalities. Bill Bulger outrages us...Alan Sisistky mystifies us...Allan McKinnon inspires us.

Only months and years after a legislative performance, we mean session, do we discover little legislative droppings that curiously tend to have a way of increasing our taxes.

This year's session produced plenty of its share of outrageous behavior, as we and other chronic hand-wringers have noted. But it also produced some very significant and historic legislation — legislation that ought to be analyzed on its own merit (or lack thereof) and without reference to the personalities and the rituals that produced it.

So, a few highlights of the 1982 session, and what, as we see it, voters and taxpayers can expect to ensue from the actions taken.

...The so-called Tregor legislation in which the taxpayers of the state bailed out the taxpayers of the capital city essentially by purchasing Hynes Auditorium. This legislation as passed was preferable to some of the bizarre versions of it that were proposed prior to passage. But if you grant that it was intolerable for Boston to continue indefinitely without proper public safety — i.e. that somehow Cohasset had to bail out Boston — it remains an unfortunate characteristic of this legislation that it created a brand new state boondoggle — the Convention Authority. That's one we'll be funding for ever and ever! Better, we'd say in retrospect, to have out and out mugged us on Cohasset Common and given the money to Boston and its pols than to have created a darn agency the better for bilking us in the indefinite future.

...The Bottle Bill. This is one we supported, and our overriding consideration was visual: get those cans and bottles off our streets and lawns.

Jane Lane did an excellent story on the bottle bill in last week's Mariner, the gist of which was "John Q. Public voted for it and now John Q. Public is going to pay for it." That'll probably be quite true for a while. The beverage industry is mad as the devil about the bottle bill, and they probably won't be able to resist the temptation of saying to Mr. and Ms. Public: "See what you made us do!!"

So the bottling industry can be expected to make the debut of the bottle law maximally nasty and inconvenient. They can be expected to refuse your empties if you haven't sterilized and blessed them. And while they are at it they will stick you with a price increase, hoping you'll blame the bottle bill, not them.

But when all such silliness is said and done, the beverage industry depends on your patronage for its existence, and we are optimistic once the industry's profound annoyance has been expressed, the bottle law will be made to work smoothly. And if you're old enough to remember Marv Throneberry (he of the hapless Casey Stengel Mets), you're old enough to remember that a returnable bottle system worked pretty well once...as it will again.

Another important decision made by the 1982 legislature was the permanent legalization of Sunday shopping. This law will undoubtedly function within the constraints of the adage that every action government takes produces both winners and losers.

Winners in this case are likely to be merchants on the New Hampshire border, college students and

Cheery morning at the McDonough's

By Claire McDonough

"Did you wake Jay?" the Dragon asked Larry.

"Sure. I woke him at least eight times. He's snoring again."

We all sighed. "Look," I told Larry who was inhaling the fumes from a cup of coffee. "I don't feel like going over the stairs. I'll give you a dollar if you'll try again."

"I'm too tired to dodge if he wakes up punching," Larry replied. "It's worth $5 to wake him with the end of a broom."

We settled on $3.

When I returned to the kitchen after blow drying my hair, I found Jay and Larry glaring at each other.

"Do you know what he called me?" Larry asked indignantly.

Jay looked up with great dignity. "It's a well-known fact, generally accepted by the world wide scientific community, that an individual cannot be held responsible for anything he says or does within five minutes of having been awakened."

"Really?" Larry snarled. "I have a few things I want to tell you first thing tomorrow morning."

They resume glaring.

Waking Jay has always been a problem. Whatever goes on in his dreams is clearly more interesting than the workaday world that awaits him at dawn, and he will lie, cheat or fight to avoid answering the clarion call back to reality.

I recall one occasion while he was still in high school. I had called over the stairs several times and was several times assured that he was "almost ready." Since none of the assurance were followed by "getting ready" noises, I was skeptical. Finally I decided to investigate, and dragged my protesting body (I, too, resent mornings) over the stairs.

Jay was curled in a fetal position, eyes shut tightly against the rising sun.

"Jay," I whispered sweetly, "get up."

"I told you, I'm putting on my shoes!" he yelled, eyes scrunched even more tightly.

My voice approached the registers only dogs can hear.

"You get your body out of that bed this instant! What would happen if we all decided to stay in bed in the morning? The Communists would take over, that's what. Furthermore..."

He opened one eye and observed me intently. Encouraged, I continued.

"Do you know what Thomas Aquinas had to say about duty? About doing the proper thing at the proper time? To say nothing of Duns Scotus! And what about Thomas Paine and Sam Adams? Where would the American Revolution be if they had lolled around in bed instead of making speeches?"

The desire to end my diatrabe won out over the urge to snuggle deeper and he sat up.

"Do you know," he asked, "that when you talk the bottom part of your mouth goes up and down but the top doesn't?"

Jay is getting married in June. I know the mother of the groom is supposed to wear beige and keep her mouth shut, but I really must give the bride one word of earnest advice.

Please, Sharon, have the wedding in the afternoon.

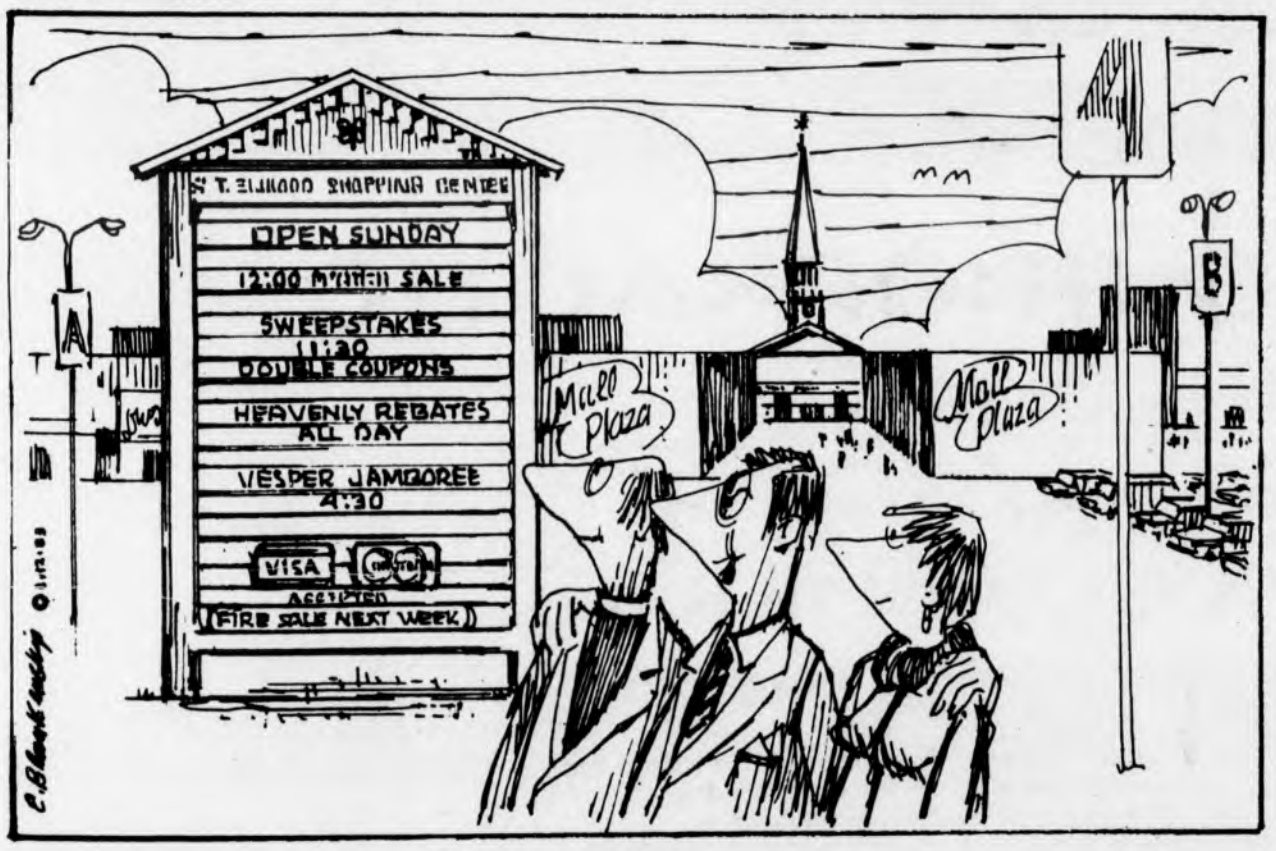
Selectmen briefs . . .

LANZA SIGNS CONTRACT

Selectmen received a signed copy of the employment agreement between the board and newly-appointed executive secretary Mark Lanza. The assistant Yarmouth executive secretary will begin his new duties in Cohasset Jan. 17. He signed a contract with selectmen that begins on that date and concludes June 30, 1984.

NEW DOG POLICY

Selectmen adopted a policy which grants the dog officer the power to make an investigation into an animal complaint, and issue the proper punishment. If there is a request to appeal the dog officer's order, then selectmen will hold a hearing with the animal's owners. In the past month, there have been three hearings held by selectmen regarding enforcement of the town bylaw which requires all animals to be kept on their own property. Now, if a complaint is made to the dog officer regarding violation of the town bylaw, the officer may order the restraint of that animal. If the owner wishes to appeal that decision, then selectmen will schedule a public hearing. By adopting this policy, selectmen are simply reinforcing the intention of the town bylaw, they said.



SELECTMEN TO CHOOSE CANDIDATES

Selectmen will review 12 more applications for police chief and select two additional finalists to interview.

They had narrowed the field of final candidates to eight persons, including three officers from the Cohasset Police Department. Acting Chief Joseph Kealey, Lt. Charles Stockbridge and Sgt. Richard Barrow will be interviewing for the position.

Tuesday, Selectmen planned to choose two additional finalists to bring the total number of candidates to 10.

School committee briefs . . .

EX-MEMBERS GET PLAQUES

Former School Committee members Patricia Walsh and Frank England, ex-Chairman, received plaques for their service Monday night. Former Chairman, Irene Brown "could not come at the last minute" Crowell announced.

RABBI THANKS STUDENTS

School Committee Chairman Diana Kornet read a letter from Rabbi Yellen, thanking the students of Cohasset for their letters of appreciation after they had visited his temple in Chestnut Hill with their teacher, Virginia Burbank. He was most impressed with their "sensitivity."

CROWELL PRAISES PAPE

Crowell publically thanked Charles Pape for getting the vandalized buses into operation, and the PSO for their telephone chain during the recent crisis. The committee suggested he draft an operational policy to deal with any future similar occurrences.

LUNCH PROGRAM IN BLACK

Patricia Wunschel displayed her lunchroom balance sheets to the school committee. Member John Langmaid figured that by the end of the school year her surplus might reach $16,000. Crowell cautioned that some of this might have to be used to replace the kitchen floor.

NEDROW WANTS IMPROVED IMAGE

Member Joseph Nedrow urged the School Committee to improve their image at the Goals Workshop. To the public "we look like a bunch of stumblebums," he said.

HEALTH COORDIDNATOR RAISE PROPOSED

Supt. Eugene Crowell proposed raising Health Coordinator Michael Gill to the rank of a Department Head with a $2,400 raise starting in September. Gill rejected the Health Coordinator job in Scituate. The School Committee took the request under advisement.

The '82 legislature . . .

others looking for part-time work at the overtime rate the new law requires of businesses open on Sundays, and the Commonwealth as a whole, which is bound to gain business and revenue now lost to "border states."

Biggest losers may be the small, high-priced convenience stores that have had the "sabbath market" pretty much to themselves till now. Larger stores may lose as well if longer hours and larger overhead do not produce enough extra business to cover extra costs.

We're for the new law for the simple reason that in one small way it gets the government out of the market place and gives folks back their freedom of choice. As to the argument that Sunday shopping will drive one more wedge into the crumbling edifice of the family, we are moved but not convinced.

It just seems to us that putting family first in this complicated world takes more guts and determination than can be bowled over by the mere legalization of Sunday shopping. Our culture contains countless distractions from what really matters. With the advent of nearly year-round football, we see Sunday shopping no detrimental factor in family life except as an excuse for those who need one.

In conclusion we note that Sen. President Bulger recently held his very first press conference in five years. In it he spoke somewhat convincingly of the legislature's accomplishments in 1982. We would observe that Bulger's own behavior in ignoring the press for five years very much parallels that of the institution he represents: when a grown man's puerile behavior obscures his real accomplishments he has no one to blame but himself. That's true as well of a body of grown men and women.

Nedrow, Gjesteby debate school priorities

School Committee member Joseph Nedrow challenged member Martha Gjesteby's priorities this week when he stated Gjesteby represented a growing segment of the town population which does not have children in school and "whose priorities are not the children."

Gjesteby, whose youngest child graduated from CHS recently, denied Nedrow's claim, saying that curriculum continued to be her top priority.

She then pointed out goals which she presented to the committee in May, 1982, as being: involving the community in curriculum review; having clearly written teacher evaluations; creating an administrative plan for dealing with declining enrollment; the implementation of a non-smoking policy; instituting clearer monthly budget reports for the committee.

Also, the creation of a more comprehensive school calender; instituting summer reading lists follow-up in the fall; the utilization of bell curve grading.

Nedrow said his goals were: better relationships with the advisory committee and the reactivation of the school facilities committee.

Last May school committee members suggested several possible goals, and then postponed the discussion of goals until September, when Nedrow drew a chart illustrating the relationship of the school committee to other town officials, teachers, staff and parents.

The committee held a goals workshop on Jan. 3.

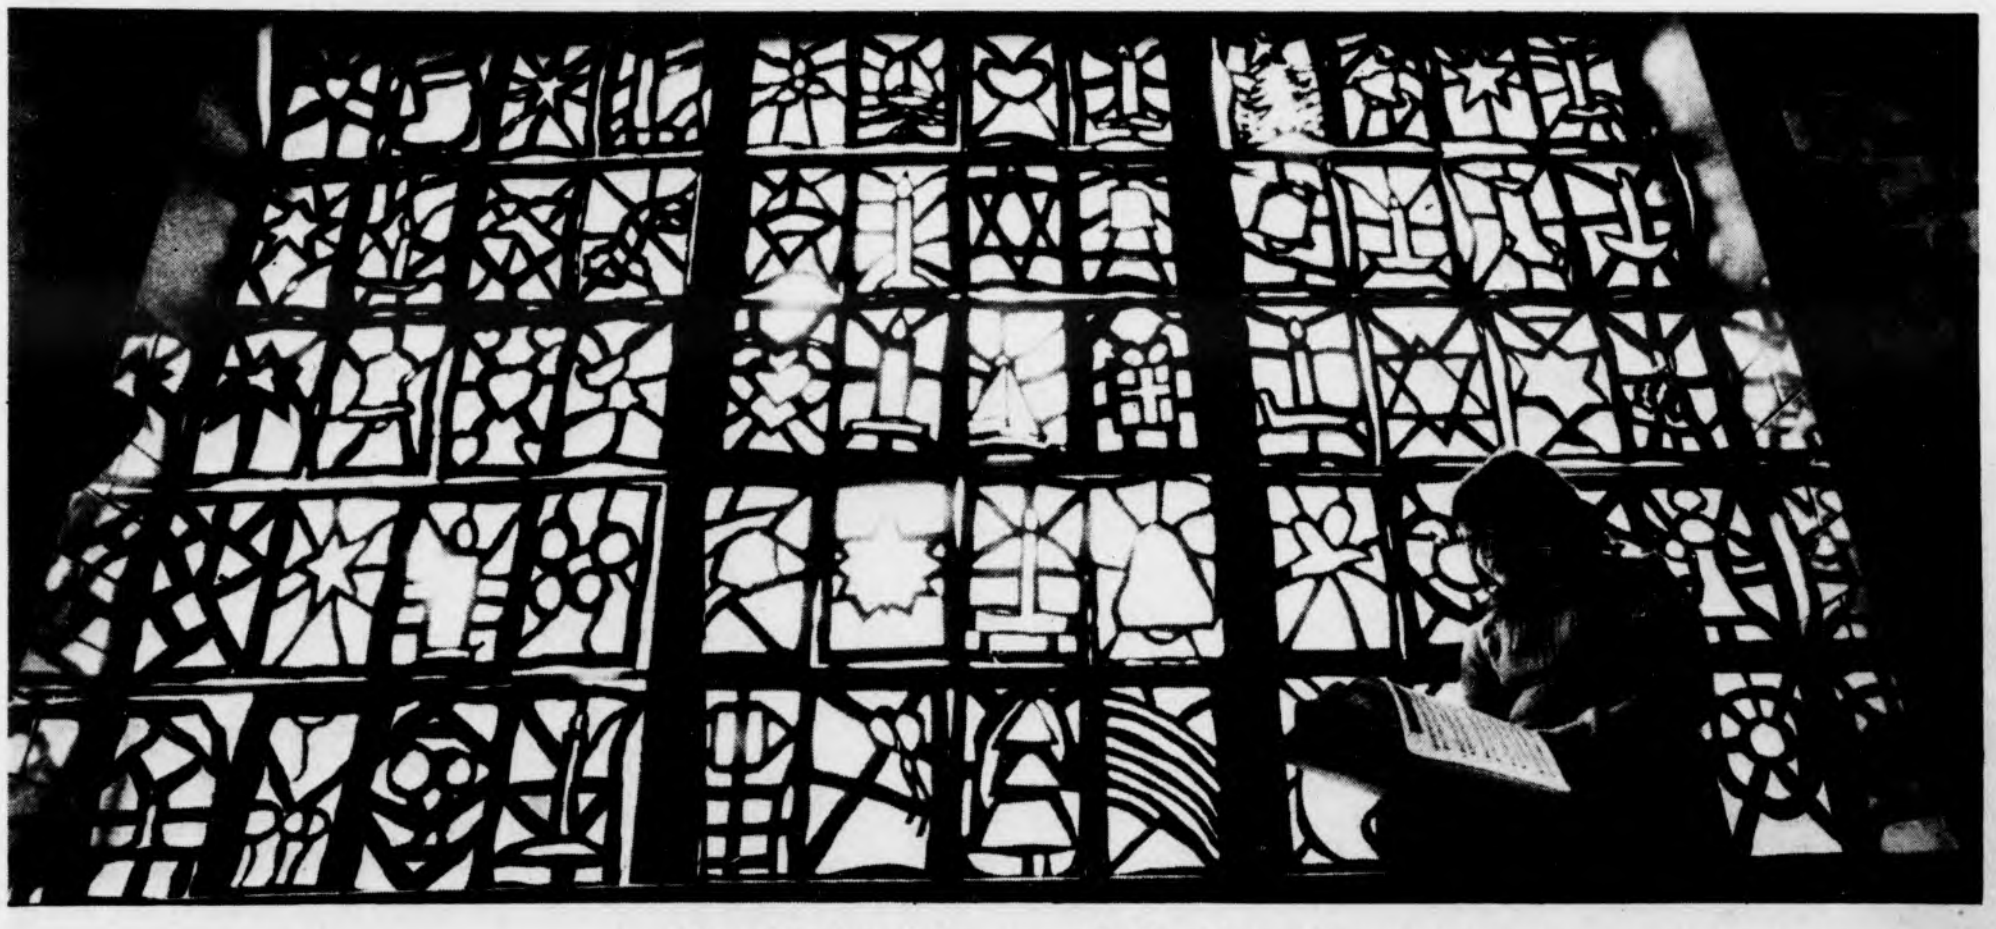
Walking the dogs

By The Rev. Edward T. Atkinson

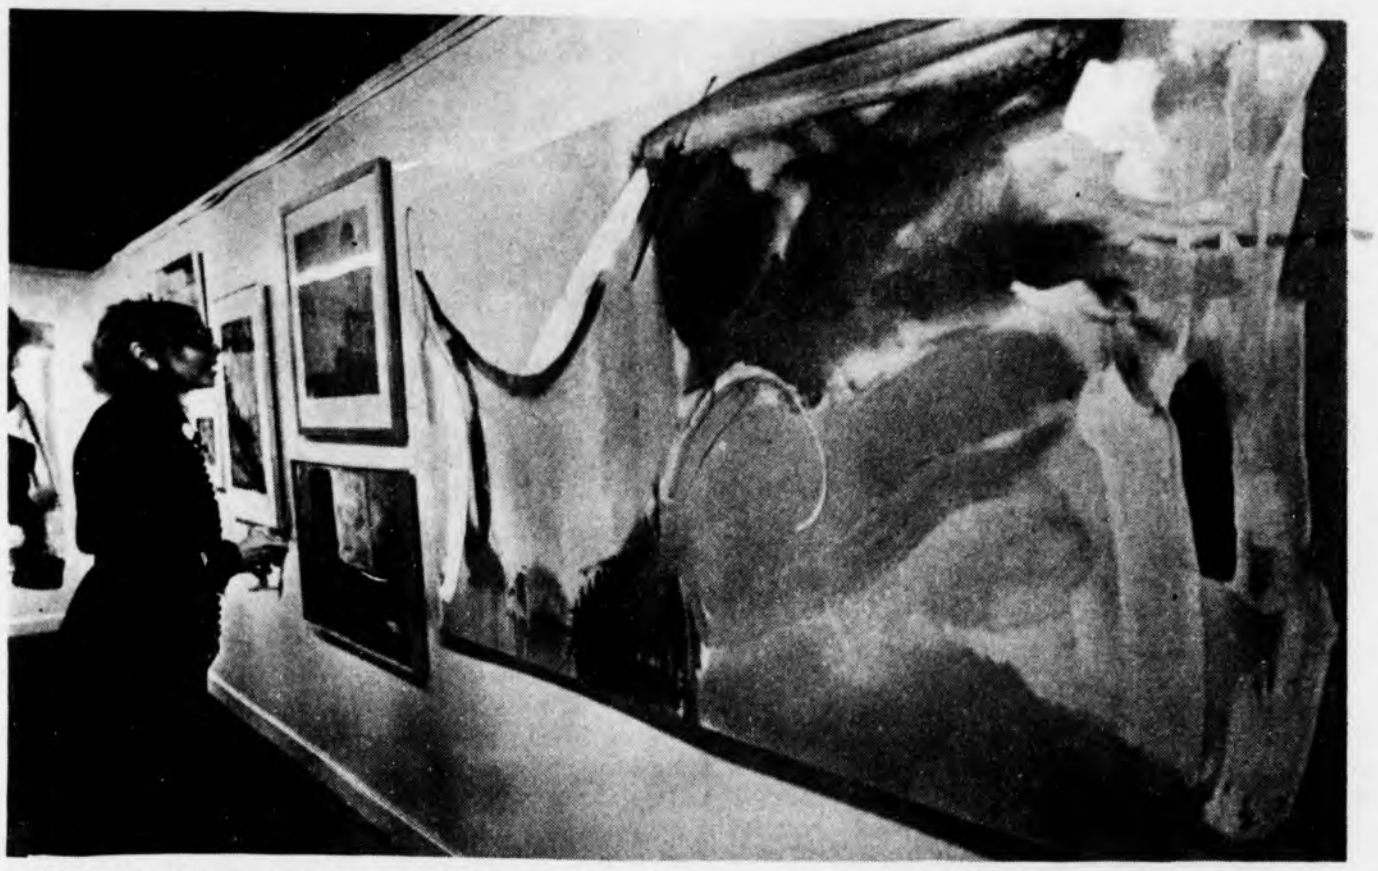


One of my favorite pastimes is to take my dogs for a walk down by Government Island near my home. They are small dogs, West Highland White Terriers, but as is common to the breed, they are quite aggressive and afraid of nothing including picking a fight with a dog five times their size.

Their master, on the other hand, is afraid of a number of things including large dogs so as you can imagine these walks have on occasion proven to be a sure formula for disaster. Hence, whenever in the vicinity of other dogs it has been my practice to haul my pugnacious little friends tightly in on their leads and literally drag them past an area of potential mischief.

Knowing of the number of times that my pleasant strolls to the harbor have turned into a forced march filled with terror my wife recently presented me with a copy of Barbara Woodhouse's popular book "No Bad Dogs." With great anticipation I quickly opened the book to a chapter on, "Dog Fights and Ignoring Other Dogs," whereupon these words practically leapt off the page, "It is a fatal move to tighten your lead as another dog approaches..." Of course, the point was obvious. Tightening the lead signals the dog that you are afraid and places the dog on guard. Loosening the lead signals the dog that everything is all right and puts the dog at ease. The very next day I tried it, and yes, it worked.

My "Hounds of Heaven" have served to remind me of a principle as ancient as the Yin and Yang of Eastern religions and as modern as the scientific law that for every action there is an equal and opposite reaction. By pulling back in fear the possibility of a fight was increased. By letting go the possibility of a fight was decreased and my fear diminished.



Life is often like that. Struggle with a problem and it worsens. Step back from it and the solution may come into view. Try to remember a name and the memory is blocked. Relax and often the name will pop into your mind. Chase an animal and it will run away. Sit quietly and many times it will come to you. Impose your help on another person and reap resentment. Work side by side with that person and you may gain a friend. Whether in training a dog or resolving a conflict with a neighbor or seeking an end to the arms race one must not pull back in fear, but rather be willing to reach out in trust. According to Matthew Jesus once said, "He who finds his life will lose it, and he who loses his life for my sake will find it." To live fully one must not withdraw in fear and self concern, but must be ready to lose himself or herself for the sake of love. Having won wide acceptance of the idea that there are "no bad dogs" should we not be willing at least to examine the possibility that there are "no bad people"?

Arthur Knight to speak at Historical Society

By David Wadsworth
Cohasset Historical Society Curator

The Cohasset Historical Society will present an evening of dining and informative entertainment Wednesday, Jan. 26 in Trueblood Hall at the Unitarian Parish House, Cohasset.

That evening's program will open with a catered dinner at 6:30 p.m. and will continue with a guest speaker.

The public is invited.

Tickets are $6.50 and may be reserved by calling Mrs. E. Lawrence Parker at 383-0773 or the Society's Lothrop House at 383-6930.

Reservations must be made no later than Friday, Jan. 21. Following dinner, the guest speaker will be Captain Arthur M. Knight of Cohasset.

Captain Knight's subject will include a history of the maritime industry of this area.

The speaker is president and director of the Mystic Steamship Corporation, a director of the Boston Towboat Company, a member of numerous maritime organizations, and is a past president of the Boston Marine Society.

Captain Knight's knowledge of the seafaring world is comprehensive and includes many areas of interest to students of maritime history.

He has been active in Boston's maritime industry for many years, served in the U.S. Navy during World War II, and is a former member of the Naval Reserve.

Captain Knight holds a Naval Commendation Medal for the rescue of the crew of a patrol aircraft during a hurricane near Bermuda. His maritime experience includes service both at sea and on the nation's inland waterways, Captain Knight brings with him an extensive knowledge of the maritime history of the Boston area, going back to the era of the great Clipper Ships designed and built by Donald McKay.

The Historical Society's Jan. 26 dinner meeting promises to be both informative and entertaining to all who are interested in learning about a first-hand glimpse into seafaring life and its history.

Our repair policy hasn't changed; we'll still fix your phone. As long as it's one of ours.

There's good news about telephone repairs: no news.

New England Telephone lines and equipment will still be maintained at no additional charge.

How do you get repairs?

The first step is to call a New England Telephone Repair Center. If you need repairs on a home phone, call Residence Repair at 1 555-1611; if you need repairs on a business phone or phone system, call Business Repair, 1 555-1515.

Our repair people will discuss your problem with you, and determine whether it's in the phone or the line. If a simple replacement of the phone is indicated, they'll direct you to a nearby New England Telephone Service Center (formerly Bell PhoneCenters) or other locations where you can exchange your broken phone, at your convenience, for a working model. Or they'll ship a telephone to you. Replacements will be provided subject to availability.

If a visit to your home or business by a repair technician is required, they'll schedule one for you.

What about line repairs?

New England Telephone will still make all telephone line repairs. So your service will be as dependable as ever, no matter where you buy or lease your telephones.

What if your phone isn't one of ours?

This policy hasn't changed, either. If your phone isn't leased or purchased from us, you'll have to take it back to the store where it was purchased, or determine its manufacturer's repair policy.

What's next?

A recent ruling by the Federal Communications Commission has affected how you'll get service or telephone equipment from New England Telephone.

But despite these changes, New England Telephone will still be your local company. We'll be here, working harder than ever to see you through any coming changes. And doing our best to see that you barely notice any change at all.

But to do our job right, we need to stay in touch with you. So let's talk. If you have any questions, call us on our "Let's Talk" number 1 800 555-5000. We've got the answers.

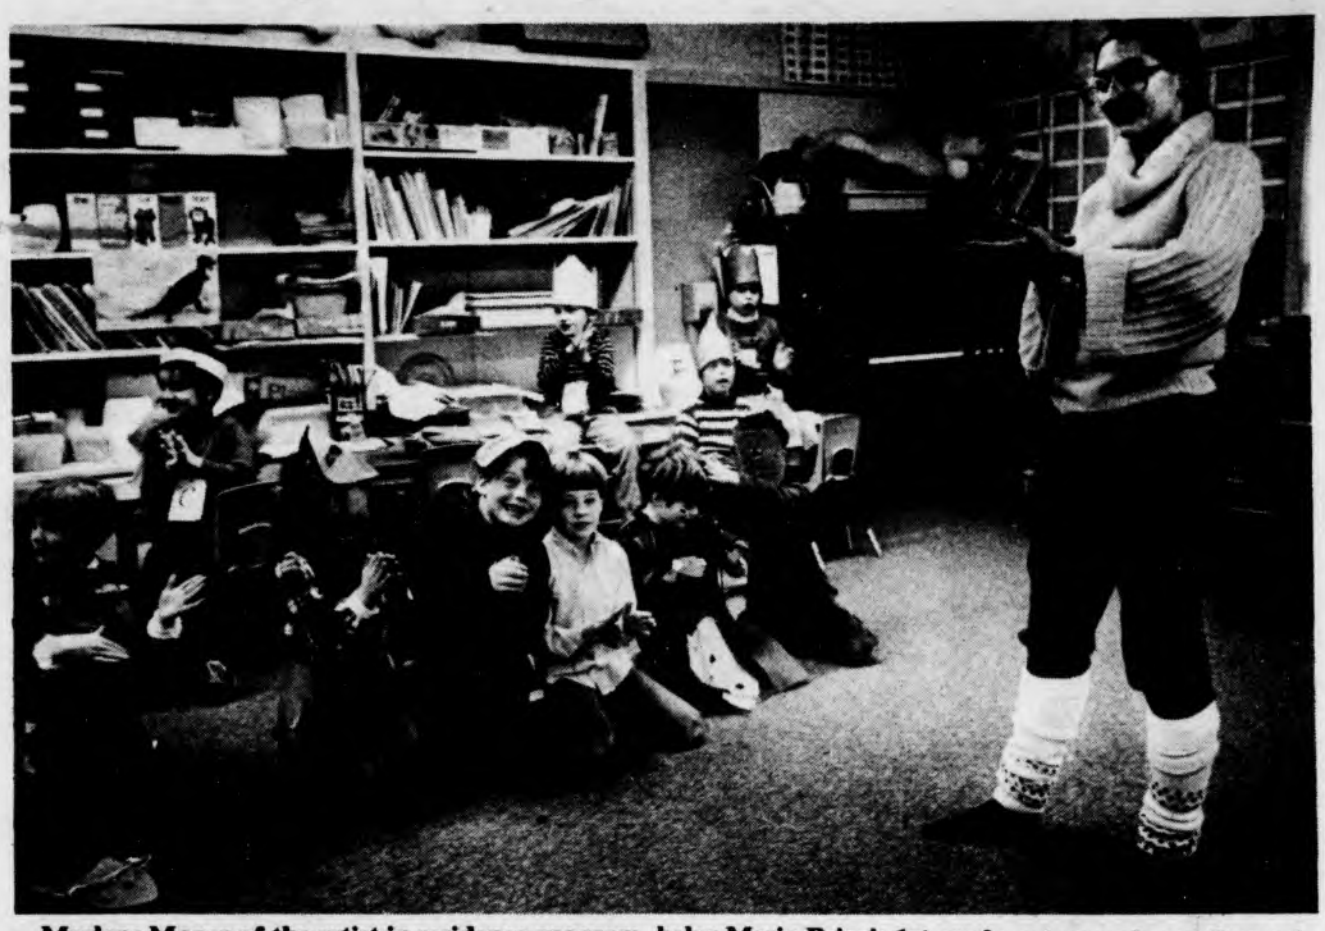
Drama workshops underway at Osgood & Deer Hill

By Karin Bartow

Beginning Jan. 5 the Just Around The Corner Company has been Artists-in-Residence at the Osgood and Deer Hill Schools.

Boston-based Just Around The Corner Company is a professional theatre group that produces original plays for children.



For seven weeks in January and February students from both schools will participate in drama workshops led by company members. In addition, two groups of 20 students each from the upper grades will work intensively with company artists to develop their own play and perform for the schools and community.

Cohasset elementary students will also have an unusual opportunity to observe the actors at work during a two week rehearsal period at the schools.

They will be rehearsing "Orpheus," an audience participation play adapted from the Greek myth. Directing "Orpheus" is Richard McElvain, who holds a Master's Degree from Boston University's School for the Arts, and is a member of Actors Equity Association. McElvain recently appeared as Bob Cratchit in "The Christmas Carol" at the Charles Playhouse in Boston.

Marlene Moyer and Penny Perel will be conducting classroom workshops at Osgood (three per class) and Deer Hill (two per class). Moyer is founder and director of the Company and has eight years experience teaching drama in a variety of settings. She has a theater education degree from the B.U. School for the Arts.

Perel, who has a Master's of Education from Tufts University, has also performed extensively with the J.A.T.C. and is appearing in "Royal Paste" and "Paper Circus" at Boston's New Ehrlich Theater.

Marlene Moyer of the artist in residence program, helps Marie Price's 1st grade put on a play at Osgood School.

SCHEDULE

Osgood workshops: week of Jan. 3, 10 and 17.
Deer Hill workshops: Jan. 10, 12, 14, 17.
Company-in-residence, Osgood: week of Jan. 17.
Company-in-residence, Deer Hill, week of Jan. 24.
Core group work, Deer Hill, Jan. 24-Feb. 14.
Performance of "Orpheus," Deer Hill, Jan. 28, 1-2:30 p.m.
Evening performance of core group play, Feb. 17.
All-day festival, at Deer Hill, both schools, Feb. 18.

FIRST GRADE WORKSHOPS

At the end of the first day of workshops with first grade classes, Moyer and Perel met with teachers to discuss plans for the final two sessions. The theme of these workshops is animal stories and fables. Students made costumes and props and brought the stuffed animal toys to life. One girl made herself into a watch; another, a macho man, with huge muscles; another became a dolphin, rocking back and forth on the floor. The students shared their new identities with other classes.

During the second and third workshops, Moyer and Perel planned to do rhythmic games (going on a lion hunt) where the children would experience going through an imaginary physical environment using creative movement.

They planned to tell the lion and mouse story using sound effects. By having the students imitate the sounds, they emphasize listening skills.

Concluding the workshop, students would make up and act out their own "just so" stories (how the zebra got his stripes, etc.) and act them out for other classes.

Follow-up suggestions included writing the story, making a story book — with groups of students writing a scene, or making a mural, poster board picture or collage for display.

On Friday, the first grades planned to put on a production of the "Velveteen Rabbit" with costumes and props they would make themselves. Teachers felt the students reacted enthusiastically after the first day.

HOW I GOT INTO ACTING

Deer Hill students were introduced to the players of the J.A.T.C. company Friday when the group presented individual sketches concerning how they became interested in acting.

In impromptu scenes, the actors "acted out" how a record player brought theater and music alive for one; another enjoyed reading aloud in school; one saw "Peter Pan" and immediately fell in love with theater; and director Richard McElvain got started with a tape recorder and family actors.

McElvain answered questions from students and discussed some aspects of theater — the setting, how to tell a place when there's no scenery, the purpose of a play and role of narrator.

He then led the student group in writing and acting out their own short play involving lost smurfs wandering in an enchanted forest who eventually find their way home by way of a friendly tidal wave.

There are as many reasons to get The Globe as there are days of the week.

Yes it's Sunday and you've laughed through the comics. Enjoyed Boston's best sportswriting. Pored through our magazine. Caught up on the complete regional and national stories.

Now what will you do the rest of the week? For openers, we'd suggest putting The Globe in your hands Monday so you'll know how the rest of the world spent their day of rest.

Come Tuesday, you can open a bigger business with "Business Extra." A special section devoted to the people, industries, facts and figures that make New England's business world turn.

Wednesday, you'll get a golden opportunity to cut corners with pages of money saving coupons, budget hints, recipes and all you need to serve it up right, in the Food pages.

Thursday, there's every reason to check our Calendar. With The Boston Globe's leisure magazine you'll have the complete goings on in and around Boston for the week.

You'll find "At Home" the place to be on Friday, with ideas for decorating, improving, repairing and enjoying.

Saturday has a plus all its own. "Sports Plus." The official word on the winners and the losers. Plus in-depth stories on the action on and off the field.

Ahhhhh Sunday. It wouldn't be the same without The Boston Sunday Globe.

See, just like the world, The Boston Globe doesn't stop between Sundays. Every day, The Globe provides quality, comprehensive coverage of the happenings from around the world. As well as timely features and the entertaining and informative columnists you've come to know.

We'll bring it all to you fresh each day. And that makes one more good reason to get The Globe all the days of the week.

HOCKEY

The CHS Varsity Hockey team improved it's record to an overall 3-1-2 record by defeating league opponents Rockland and Abington in matches last week.

The Skippers defeated Rockland 10-1 with seniors co-captain Don O'Neill and John Casey each scoring a hat trick.

Senior Dan Bowen netted two goals and made two assists while seniors co-captain Rich Evans and Mike Julian scored one a piece.

Cohasset outshot Rockland 37-23 and took a 5-1 two period lead.

Senior Mark Brown and Junior Mike McNeill shared the goal tending duties for the Skippers.

The team also edged by league opponent Abington 4-3.

The Skippers took a 2-1 lead in the second period with single goals from Bowen and Don O'Neill.

Abington then came back in the third period with a goal to tie the game 2-2.

The Skippers then took over when Junior Joe Hoffman scored and Evans netted the game winner.

Abington scored its third goal with 30 seconds left to play. Cohasset will face the Hull Pirates Saturday night at 6 p.m. at the Winter Gardens.

GYMNASTICS

The CHS Gymnastics team edged past Duxbury 92.9 to 90.8 in a recent league meet.

Senior co-captain Karen Eckberg was the all round winner with 26.65 points.

Eckberg took first in the floor excercises with a 7.35 and first on the beam with a 6.15.

She also placed second on the uneven bars and tied for second on the vault.

Junior Nancy Walls placed second behind Eckberg in the floor excercise and also tied for second on the balance beam.

This years squad which finished undefeated at 10-0 last year for the league championship, lost only one senior to graduation.

Coming back strong for the Skippers are co-captains Senior Karen Eckberg, junior Richelle Sargent, and junior Nancy Walls, an allstar on the beam, and two year all star freshman Susie McMahon.

Other key gymnasts are junior Katie Duffy, sophomore Julie Sechen, freshman Susie Tehranian and seventh graders Marybeth McNamara, Alice Bowdoin and Lisa Clapp.

The team's next league meets are Monday at Norwell and home against Rockland Wednesday, Jan.19.

BOYS BASKETBALL

The CHS Boys Varsity Basketball team lost a close 59-56 game to league opponent Abington last week.

It was a two-point game throughout most of the four quarters. However the Skippers were unable to score on their last possession.

Freshman point guard Tony Bogarty led all scorers with a game high of 20 points while junior forward Dave Barcomb chipped in 12 for Cohasset.

In other game action last week the team fell 56-46 in a league match against East Bridgewater.

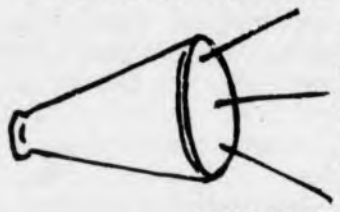
Bogarty played a strong game for Cohasset scoring 12 points with six assists and several steals.

Senior Dan Anderson played a fine defensive game while scoring 9 points and senior co-captain Jack Maloney netted 8 points.

The Skippers, 3-5, face the Hull Pirates away this Friday night.

GIRLS BASKETBALL

The CHS Girls Varsity Basketball team fell 61-47 to league opponent Abington last week.



Abingston, undefeated, took the game over with four minutes left, scoring 10 consecutive points while the Skippers were unable to score.

Senior forward Beverly Mullaney took the game high scoring honors with 20 points. While senior co-captain Gia Barresi chipped in with 13 points.

In other league action last week the girls improved to 5-3 with a victory over East Bridgewater, 36-28.

Sophmore point guard Janet DiGirolamo finished as the game highscorer with 13 points while Barresi and Mullanay scored 8 each and sophmore Tracy Fitzpatrick netted 7 points for Cohasset.

The girls travel to Hull Friday night for another hopeful victory.

Community Update Program on Sexually Transmitted Diseases for all interested parents and high school student, high school auditorium, 8 p.m.

SENIOR CLASS MUSICAL DIRECTOR NEEDED

Student School Committee Representatives, Justine Hoffman and Paul Johnson told the school committee last week that they need a director for the annual Senior Class musical play. Any interested adult should apply to the High School Principal, Richard Streeter.

Supt. Crowell says the pay for the director is approximately $550-$750 depending upon experience. Students say no one has applied as yet, although the position was to be posted last July.

If they don't get a director there will not be a Class Play. They said last year's director, Beth Goff, is not available because she is moving to Florida.

CHAPERONES NEEDED

Adults are needed to volunteer as dance chaperones, so the high school classes can raise money. Any interested adult should leave their name at the high school office.

SEXUALLY TRANSMITTED DISEASES PROGRAM

A community update program on sexually transmitted diseases will be held Wednesday, Jan. 19 at 8 p.m. at the High School.

The presentation will include a slide show and discussion updating the audience on the latest information regarding sexually transmitted diseases including: herpes genitalis, gonorrheae, syphilis, scabies, etc.

Elizabeth Penney from Dr. Nicholas Fiumara's Center for Communicable Diseases, Massachusetts Department of Public Health, will lead the discussion.

All interested parents and high school students are urged to attend.

The Community Health Education Advisory Committee and the Health Education Coordinator feel there is a community need for more information on this topic.

NOW meeting

South Shore N.O.W. (National Organization for Women) will hold its first meeting of the year Monday, Jan. 24 at 7:30 in the Cushing Room of the Rockland Trust Company, Cushing Plaza, Rte. 3A, Cohasset.

Taking its title from Susie Orbach's "Fat is a Feminist Issue," an international best seller that has helped to free women from feeling obsessive about food, the program will explore the connection between self image and a healthy attitude about food.

The program will be led by Lisette deMiranda of Life Arts, a psychotherapist with a women's perspective, who has found a new approach to compulsive eating.

She will help participants to explore ideas that women hold on a conscious and unconscious level about thinness and fatness. At the same time women work together on the technical side, learning new ways to approach food and hunger.

All NOW meetings are open to the public. For further information about NOW, write to South Shore NOW, Box 78, Accord Station, Hingham, MA 02018.

Dramatic Club to present 'Dangerous Corner' March 3-5

The Cohasset Dramatic Club's winter show for this season will be the English playwright J.B. Priestley's 1930's murder mystery "Dangerous Corner."

Director Judy Holmes has announced the names of actors and actresses chosen for this three-act play which calls for a cast of seven characters.

Sydney Browne of Wollaston will play the role of Maude Mockridge, a novelist. Sydney was recently seen on the Town Hall stage in last winter's production of "A Man For All Seasons."

Andrea Dassori of Hingham will portray Olwen Peel, publisher's secretary. Andrea was seen in last season's performances of the English comedy "Table Manners," the Club's 1981 fall show.

Sarah de Lima of Cohasset will be Freda Chatfield, a housewife. Sarah also was a cast member of "Table Manners," and along with other participants of that play, appeared in the club's entry in last spring's Brandeis Theater Festival.

In the role of Betty Whitehouse, another housewife, will be Jane Turner of Weymouth. Jane is appearing in her second consecutive Dramatic Club production, having had a major role and making her theatrical debut in this fall's Dramatic Club presentation of "Scenes From American Life."

Another veteran of "Scenes From American Life" is Joe Coyle of Scituate, appearing in "Dangerous Corner" in the role of Charles Stanton, publisher. Joe also was seen in last spring's club production of "Strange Bedfellows."

Carl Slotnick of Cohasset made his theatrical debut at the Town Hall in the club's 1981 spring performance of "Night Must Fall." In "Dangerous Corner," Carl plays the character Gordon Whitehouse, the husband of Betty and brother of Freda.

Derek Holmes, another veteran of last year's "Table Manners," will portray Robert Chatfield, head of a publishing firm and husband of Freda.

Director Judy Holmes herself is best known locally for her frequent directing activity with the Hingham Company of Wayts and Players.

The play "Dangerous Corner" concerns itself with the recent demise of yet another member of the small group of friends who form the cast of characters of the play.

The authorities believe that Martin, the deceased, died by his own hand, but his friends are not as certain.

Spurred on by their own growing curiousity, those present on stage relentlessly pursue the truth; the story never told at Martin's inquest.

It is an accidental gunshot offstage in the first act which started off the train of speculation regarding Martin's death, and another accidental shot in the third act leads to a surprise ending to this classic English drawing room mystery.

Production Manager for the Cohasset version of "Dangerous Corner" is Betty Miessner, Stage Manager will be Elizabeth Eaton, Scene Designer is Wayne Miessner, and Lighting Effects will be by Charles Wheelwright.

The Dramatic Club's performances of "Dangerous Corner" are scheduled for Thursday to Saturday, March 3-5 at the Cohasset Town Hall.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS THE TRIAL COURT THE PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT NORFOLK DIVISION

DOCKET NO. 82E0134-P1

To Rudolph A. Curelli of Cohasset in said County and to all other persons interested.

A petition has been presented to said Court by MARGARET A. CURELLI of Boston in the County of Suffolk representing that she hold as tenant in common an undivided part or share of certain land lying in Cohasset in said County and briefly described as follows: The land in Cohasset, Norfolk County, Commonwealth of Massachusetts, being shown as Lot 15 on a Plan of Lots, Linden Drive, Cohasset, Mass., developed for D.J. Buckley Co., dated September 1, 1955, Lewis W. Perkins & Sons, Engineers, recorded with Norfolk Deeds in Plan Book 210, Plan No. 187, to which plan reference is made for a more particular description of said premises, setting forth that he desire that all of said land may be sold at private sale for not less than one hundred forty-five thousand dollars and praying that partition may be made of all the land aforesaid according to law, and to that end that a commissioner be appointed to make such partition and be ordered to make sale and conveyance of all, or any part of said land which the Court finds cannot be advantageously divided, either at private sale or public auction, and be ordered to distribute the net proceeds thereof.

If you desire to object thereto, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham before ten o'clock in the forenoon on the twenty-sixth day of January 1983, the return day of this citation.

Witness, ROBERT M. FORD, Esquire, First Justice of said Court, this fifteenth day of December 1982.

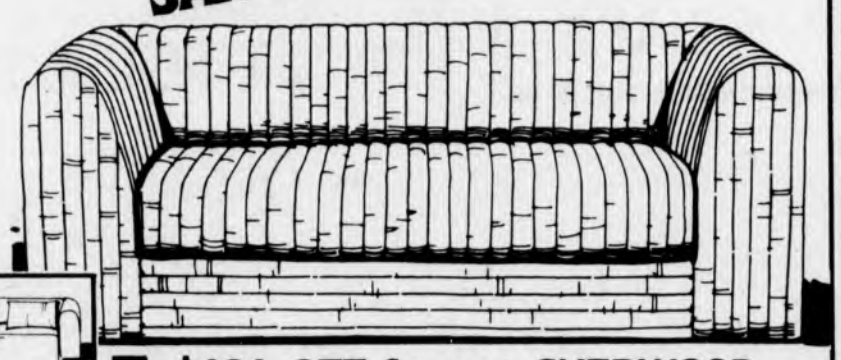
around town

☐The teachers in Cohasset are a happy lot after the SAT scores were released last week. The students had the highest scores on the South Shore, a real feather in everyone's cap.



☐Tom Wigmore has found a way to cure the mid-winter blahs. He is planning a vacation in Florida in March which is sure to make him feel like a new person upon his return.

☐Good news for Cohasset. Bruce Cameron isn't being relocated as he thought might happen with his new job promotion. Bruce, who is active in many different clubs for our youth and is on the Board of Directors at the South Shore Music Circus is here to stay. He and his wife, Lois, are delighted that they are able to remain and Jason's customers are happy too...he's the best paper boy we've ever had.

☐It's time to start practicing your running. Roy Fitzsimmons has announced that the annual Road Race by the Sea will take place the last Sunday in March. The race is one of the most popular in the state and gaining momentum every year. Wouldn't it be wonderful to see a Cohassetite come in first?

By Joan Pinkham

It was party time on Ferry Hill when congenial neighbors met to linger over dinner at a table overlooking the South River. Once again Lori Thomae cajoled her busy young friends into parting with some of the recipes which made it such a delicious meal. Here, for want of space, are just two of Donna Mahaney's appetizers.

STUFFED MUSHROOMS

1 lb. mushrooms
1 pkg. breakfast sausage (patty type)
1 egg
Pepper
Remove stems from mushrooms and chop. Mix with sausage, egg and pepper. Stuff cups with mixture. Bake at 350 for 30 min.

PINWHEELS

2 pkg. frozen spinach, cooked and drained
1/2 lb. feta cheese
2 slices American cheese, diced
1 T dry dill weed
4 dashes onion powder
1 egg, beaten
20 slices white bread, crusts removed and rolled thin
3 T butter, melted
Mix spinach with cheese, dill, onion powder and egg. Blend. Butter bread and spread 2 tsp. of mixture on bread. Roll up and cut into halves. Place seam down on lightly greased cookie sheet. Brush tops with melted butter and bake at 400 degrees for 12-18 min.

When it's party time at your house, do you find yourself in a turmoil, wondering if anybody will show up, whether or not you have enough food, the right wine, the right mix of people? Apparently we're not alone. Barbara Kraus worries about her bathroom, of all things. She writes: "When I put 8 o'clock on the invitation, that's when my husband thinks he should take a shower. When the first guests arrive, it looks as though Attila the Hun has just left." Others worry about starving guests. Well, no one would go away hungry with Patricia Dunkel's

SWISS BACON PLEASERS

1 pkg. refrigerated crescent rolls (8 rolls)
3 slices (6 oz.) natural Swiss cheese
3 slightly beaten eggs
3/4 c. milk
1 T instant minced onion
4 slices bacon, crisp cooked, drained and crumbled
1 T dried parsley flakes
Separate dinner rolls into four rectangles. Press 2 rectangles onto bottom and 1" up sides of well-greased and floured 8x8x2" baking pan. Place 2 of the cheese slices over dough. Combine eggs, milk and onion. Pour half of milk mixture over cheese in pan. Sprinkle with half the bacon and parsley flakes. Repeat with remaining ingredients in a second 8x8x2" pan. Bake at 425 degrees, 15 to 18 min. Cool 5 min. Cut into 2" squares. Serves 32.

Hostesses who cook and clean for a week and worry over whether the guest towels match, can't understand why their husband's only concern is where everyone will park. Surely nothing else matters when guests sit down to Lori Thomae's

SAVORY LAMB STEW

5 lb. lamb cubes (buy boned leg of lamb, have butcher take off fat and cut into cubes).
1/2 c. oil (may be part olive oil)
Sauce: 3 large onions
5 garlic cloves, crushed
7 to 8 fresh, peeled, seeded tomatoes
1½ T salt
1½ tsp. crushed red chili pepper
1½ tsp. turmeric
1½ c. raisins soaked in sherry enough to cover for 8 hours.
Put lamb in broiler pan until lightly browned (keep turning). Chill in refrigerator and remove accumulated fat.
Sauce: Brown chopped onions and garlic in a little oil and saute lightly. Add 7 to 8 tomatoes and bring to boil. Add salt, chili pepper and turmeric and simmer for few minutes. Place lamb and sauce in casserole. Bake covered for 1½ to 2 hours at 350 degrees. Baste if necessary. Add raisins and sherry during last 10 min. Serve with rice pilaf. NOTE: 2 large cans tomatoes, with small amount of juice may be substituted for fresh tomatoes. Serves 12.

Landscape design class

"You have just inherited a 200-acre parcel of land with a 20-acre lake and $25,000,000 from your rich uncle. Your assignment — to landscape the property with certain stipulations, number one is creating an island."

The solution to such a problem would be — either hire a landscape architect or enroll in the South Shore Art Center's newly created Design for Living course, an introduction to landscape design.

At the first meeting at the center, 103 Ripley Road, Cohasset, Saturday, Jan. 22, instructor Mary Smith will hand her students such a hypothetical assignment and for the next couple weeks students will work to develop site plans for this parcel of land.

"By having everyone initially work on the same exercise, I can introduce them to the principles and tools of landscape architecture," Mrs. Smith said. She wants to make her students aware that landscape architecture is more than just selecting plants. It is a way of creating a feeling with an exterior environment.

Students enrolled in the course are asked to bring with them a particular problem they would like to solve. After the initial project, students will work on solutions to their specific problems. Some may have whole yards they want to design; others may have more specific areas such as the front yard or an unsightly driveway.

The course, Mrs. Smith said, will make students conscious of first creating a feeling with the outdoor space, that the design and composition of the area comes first followed by the selection of specific plants, shrubs and trees.

People tend to want to focus on the specifics first, she contends, rather than develop an overall design for the space.

She will introduce the students to site analysis, making plot plans, drawing scale plans, doing overlays and developing a model for an area. The models help people to actually visualize what the end result will look like.

Mary Smith of the South Shore Art Center works on a landscape design plan.

The students in the course will help to critique one another's work. And this free exchange among the class participants should be most beneficial.

At the last class, Mrs. Smith plans to bring in another landscape architect to review the work done by the students. Having a specific presentation should aid the students in developing their final models.

Mary Smith brings to this course much experience. As a landscape architect with a graduate degree from Harvard's School of Landscape Architecture, she has assignments for both residential and commercial property.

She is working on the design plans for the Boston Harbor Marina. Her work as a landscape watercolorist gives her an experienced eye for creating visually pleasing outdoor environments.

Those interested in registering for the class which meets for eight consecutive Saturdays from 1 to 3:30 p.m. at the Center, should call the Center at 383-9548.

Children's art workshops

Creative minds are encouraged to explore the fun of art through the South Shore Art Center's children's art workshops.

Designed to stimulate young minds, the courses introduce the students to sketching, drawing and painting from nature in a variety of media and emphasizing color, design, observation and imagination.

The young artist series is held afternoons and evenings at the center at 103 Ripley Road, Cohasset. Children's Art Workshop I, taught by Lisbeth Wyman, a public school art teacher, is designed for youths six to eight years old, and Workshop II, taught by Susan Rodgerson, an award winning exhibitor, is for children nine through 12 years old.

For the high school age there are two evening courses, Mixed Media Workshop and Portfolio Preparation Projects. Taught by Susan Rodgerson, the Mixed Media Workshop combines painting, drawing, print techniques and collage in projects geared to teach color and shape relationships in both abstract and objective works.

In the course Portfolio Preparation Projects, instructor Marjorie Vining, free-lance illustrator and graphic designer, will have students develop specific illustration projects which can be used in a portfolio. The class is based on the pre-college course taught by the instructor at the Rhode Island School of Design.

The Young Artists Program is funded in part by the South Shore Playhouse Associates. For further information call the Center at 383-9548.

Photography courses

A picture tells a thousand words, but good pictures don't just happen, they are created.

The South Shore Art Center's photography courses are designed to instruct students in creating good photographs, using their cameras creatively and learning the principles of darkroom procedures.

Explore the creative world of photography at the center, 103 Ripley Road, Cohasset. For class schedules and information, call 383-9548.

Beginning photography, taught by John Goldie III, an award winning photographer, emphasizes darkroom techniques and explores the aesthetics of photography. The course will begin with camera techniques and a field trip for shooting pictures followed by developing and printing and finish with matting procedures and critique of work.

Intermediate photography, also taught by Goldie, concentrates on sequences and projects toward developing a finer print. Advanced students in this course will explore tone-line separation, solarization and high contrast prints.

A third photography course, taught by Paul Fortin, a free-lance photographer, lecturer and reviewer, focuses on shooting techniques and compositon. Students will explore various subjects — portraits, sports, people, landscape — using both black and white and color film.

The Center's darkroom is also open to students on a two-hour basis. A flat fee covers eight weeks use of the room and the chemicals.

Student reps discuss goals with school committee

Justine Hoffman and Paul Johnson, student representatives to the School Committee, want to see improvements in the student advisory system. They discussed their goals with the Committee last week.

Hoffman is Student Council President and Vice President of the Senior Class. She was recently accepted, under early admissions, to Boston College.

Johnson, Senior Class President and Student Council Vice President hopes to attend MIT.

Peer Counseling with upper classmen assisting new students and AFS students is "going well," Johnson reported. Twelve pupils are also tutoring students having academic difficulties. However, they want improvements in the system of selecting teachers to be class advisors, because students need helpful advice on running proms and in other activity scheduling.

They want teachers selected by the principal who have a motivation to be advisors. Otherwise, "both the teacher and the class lose out," said Hoffman.

Senior Class advisors are paid approximately $161. Committee member Joseph Nedrow asked, "Isn't it appropriate to pay the advisors for other classes?"

The students said they have "a lot of communication with Mr. Digirolamo," the assistant principal, but feel they need to meet more with Principal Richard Streeter and make him better understand their points of view.

They also need to communicate difficulties experienced by students with individual teachers.

Board Member John Langmaid proposed an anonymous teacher evaluation form that could be filled out by students and dropped in the teacher's mail box. Supt. Eugene Crowell suggested the matter could be discussed privately with him.

They want help from the PSO and adult volunteers which is more suited to their needs. The PSO is a "super group" said Hoffman, but we have asked them for help a couple of times, for dance chaperones and to help organize, and we haven't gotten help from them. Students do not want the PSO to run dances and take the profit, because they need such funds for their class treasuries, the students said. The representatives were told to put their expectations in writing.

Adult volunteers are neded to be dance chaperones.

An adult is also needed to direct the annual Senior Class musical. Beth Goff, who directed the production last year, is moving to Florida as soon as she sells her house. Crowell said the Class Play director would be paid approximately $550 to $750 under contract.

YOUTH JOB OPPORTUNITY PROGRAM

During the past few years the Recreation Department through its Job Opportunity Program, has placed approximately 80 Cohasset youth on part-time, intermittent jobs.

In a continuing effort to place youth on jobs of all types, the department is asking any businesses or individuals who have a need for part-time workers to call the Recreation Office at 383-6791 to file their worker requests.

Once a job is filed with the department, the employer will be given names of individuals who have applied for jobs that fall under the guidelines of their request. From these names, the employer may select any individual(s) whom they feel will best suit their needs. All compensations will be worked out between the employer and employee.

Cohasset youths seeking some form of part-time employment may also call the Recreation Office for a job application. Upon completion of the application, the youth will be placed on file as a candidate for possible job referral.

PATS PEAK SKI TRIP

The Recreation Department will conduct a ski trip to Pats Peak, N.H. Saturday, February $1. The cost for this trip will be $25.50 per person which includes transportation and lift ticket for the day. For those interested in a ski lesson, the cost will be $4 additional ($29.50). Rental of equipment will be $9 for the day and will be paid separately at the mountain.

If interested please call the Recreation office at 383-6791 as soon as possible, as confirmation must be made by Jan. 31.

The bus will leave from the Town Hall at 6:30 a.m., and return about 6:30 p.m.

GUITAR LESSONS

Guitar lessons will begin shortly for beginners. Anyone eight years-old or over who is interested, call the Recreation Office.

CHAIR CANING-FIBER RUSH

Classes will begin soon for chair caning and fiber rush classes Thursday mornings at the Town Hall. A few openings remain in each class. If interested, call the Recreation Office.

Community Center offers karate classes and more

Karate, which has been offered for several years at the Community Center of Cohasset will be upgraded and expanded this season.

Bob Blaisdell has established a branch of his well-known Karate Academy at the Center. Students will progress to certified patch and belt levels, and will be trained for competition. The course will include basic exercises, break falls, break aways, self-defense techniques and other Oriental secrets.

Classes will be divided according to age or grade. The course will be intensive and professionally run by qualified insructos.

Classes will be limited to size and registration will be on a first-come first-served basis.

Safety is a top priority in this program. Discipline demanded in the class is essential. Call the Center at 383-0088 for details on class times and registration instructions.

OTHER WINTER PROGRAMS

Many other popular programs will also continue at the Center this winter. They include: bowling, gymnastics, jazz, creative movement, aerobics, Dungeons and Dragons, computers for the novice, calligraphy, investments and CPR.

The Center is offering many new programs for children beginning with Classical Ballet taught by Margaret Barlow. The class is Tuesday afternoon for Grades 1-3. An advanced jazz class has been added, taught by Claire Berman Thursday evenings.

Cartooning with Marsha Serofin is offered Monday afternoon and should be a great program and lots of fun for children, nine through 16 years-old.

Paula Gartland will teach a "Babysitting Readiness" course Monday from 6 to 7 p.m. Paula is also teaching children's typing Thursday from 6 to 7 p.m. This is a good training course for the computer keyboard. Nancy McLaughlin and Jane Long are collaborating on a sewing class for girls in Grades 4-6. Pat Boylan's "Puppetry" course emphasizes performing with the children's original puppet creations.

High school students should take special interest in the new SAT preparation course in both English and Math. Two intensive five week sessions are offered, two nights per week. Individual attention is stressed.

For adults, additional fitness classes have been established: "Aerobic Dancing" with Margaret Barlow, and "Dancercise" with Beca Lamb. Joanne Sheppard's "Fitness for Fun" continues to be a big hit.

Several new business courses are available: "Adult Typing," an intensive typing preparation course with Paula Gartland, and two courses taught by Kate Johnson, "Everyday Writing" and "Word Processing."

The Center is also offering a new approach to computer literacy. Don Leary will teach Basic on the Timex - Sinclair 1000. Students must have the small micro-computer to facilitate class discussion and home practice. After this five week course you will know Basic Language, understand home computer applications, and have your own equipment to utilize.

"Stenciling" with noted Cohasset stenciler Nancy Clapp will meet Tuesday evenings. Clare Clark will teach quilting (also Tuesday evenings) and Matthew Nelson will teach how to make exquisite forged silver jewelry Wednesday evenings.

Come to Jane Chatfield's course on Monday mornings for an education on all phases of Antiques. Robert Chatfield will teach about another interesting investment, "Rare Coins," Tuesday evenings.

Consult your Winter Program for more exciting courses being offered at the Cohasset Community Center or call 383-0088, daily from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Other dates to mark on your calendar are Tuesday, Jan. 18, 7 to 9 p.m. for Stuart Ferency's workshop on "Solar Heating — Past, Present, Future."

The center is pleased to offer the Disney movie, "Bedknobs and Broomsticks" at 4 p.m. at the Community Center Jan. 22.

Auto insurance goes up

The average driver motorist in Massachusetts will pay an increase of about $11 for auto insurance next year.

For good drivers, the rate will drop, especially in Cohasset. The decrease depends on the type of coverage purchased and driving record. Those drivers with more than a three years good driving record will see rates drop three percent or $5.

Senior citizens will see no increase or decrease, but for those with three years of experience the rates will rise five percent or $16.

These are the rates for those motorists with mandatory coverage.

For those motorists with full coverage, experienced drivers will see a $3 decrease, senior citizens, a $1 increase, and for drivers with three years or less, six percent or a $37 increase.

MARINER CLASSIFIEDS worked for her...they can work for you too!

Jan 10, 1983

Dear Mariner,

You're wonderful! My oyster ad in your Marshfield paper sold within hours to a Hanover woman. I hardly had time to check to see if my classified appeared before the phone started ringing.

Thanks for great service!

Despite savings if closed

Osgood School gets a reprieve

By Patricia Anne Walsh

School Superintendent Eugene Crowell feels keeping the Osgood School open next year is more important than saving as much as $180,000.

Crowell acknowledge closing the Osgood School would save $150,000 to $180,000 including the reduction of a principal and secretary, but gave the following reasons for not proposing it to the School Committee.

First, Crowell said it would be difficult to fit 517 students into a school designed for 400. He predicts an enrollment of 248 students in grades 4-6 in the Deer Hill next year. Eight years ago, the cafeteria and auditorium spaces had to be used for classes. If the schools were consolidated, the library and computer room might have to be sacrificed for classrooms. He also cited the need for special needs instruction space such as adaptive physical education.

Second, he supports the primary-intermediary school split, and added the town approves of the warm, friendly atmosphere of the Osgood, which gives the students a tremendous start.

Third, he feels strongly the personnel right now are best suited at their present levels.

Fourth, he said the Osgood may lose only one student this year, and demographers predict a mini-baby boom in the late 1980s and early 1990s. "It would be embarrassing to close the Osgood and lease or sell it, if there is a need to open it again."

Crowell presented the Osgood budget of $572,477, an increase of $32,512 over last year. He said the bulk of the increase was in contracted salary increases.

Crowell and School Committee Chairman Diana Kornet declined to give the press the list of proposed systemwide cuts of $300,000 which has been distributed to the committee.

Crowell also did not release the list of utility and maintenance surplus which may total over $100,000. He said he wants to present the information over the next several budget meetings in public, "rather than see it in the press."

Crowell said his recommended cuts were "reluctantly" proposed and suggested the committee prioritize them as they discussed the budget.

He proposed the elimination of one clerical aide at Osgood, who reaches 65 this year, at a saving of $7,359.

Principal John Creamer, who has previously opposed eliminating this position, reminded the committee that this person services children when the half-time nurse is not in the school.

It was suggested that volunteer help might be needed to replace the aide.

A half-time Kindergarten teacher, who also serves as a half-time aide at Deer Hill, has given verbal notice that she will not return next year because of pregnancy, Creamer said. The current one-and-a-half positions will be filled next year, however, with three sections of Kindergarten projected for a total enrollment

State, local officials huddle on sewer alternatives

The state will take into consideration a request to delay implementation of the Metcalf and Eddy sewer plan.

Environmental Atty. Thomas Bracken, hired by selectmen to assist Town Counsel Richard Henderson in the town's efforts to delay the $13.7 million sewer plan, attended a meeting with representatives of the selectmen, board of health, sewer commission, sewer advisory committee, and former sewer commissioners Janet Daggett and Gerard Stanton.

Bernard Salvador attended the session as a representative of the fishermen in Cohasset.

Assistant District Attorney Ann Rogers conducted the meeting. The state was represented by Brian Jeans and Alan Slater of the Division of Water Pollution Control (WPC); William Gaughan and Glen Gilmore, both of the WPC regulatory branch; Ron Lyberger of WPC water construction; and Robert Cady of WPC construction grant division.

In their half-hour presentation to the state. Atty. Bracken and alternative plan proponent Charles DeSantis, explained why the town was seeking an alternative to the previously-approved sewer project.

Bracken detailed the town's numerous technical and legal difficulties with the state-approved Metcalf and Eddy plan.

DeSantis argued the Metcalf and Eddy report had used only board of health records to indicate the town's need for a central sewer system. This was the engineering firm's single factor which indicated the town's "basis of need" for the extensive sewering project, he said.

DeSantis said a physical house-to-house survey of the current systems would have been a more accurate indicator of the need for such a system.

There was little discussion during the presentation by Atty. Bracken and DeSantis, according to sewer commissioner Joseph Gwinn, who attended the meeting.

There was extensive discussion when representatives of the state agencies discussed the town's requirement to clean up the water at James Brook.

According to the consent decree granted the

England, Mitman, DeBassio announce candidacies

Frank W. England of Old Coach Road, Bond Manager for Aetna Life and Casualty of Boston, is a candidate for a three-year term of office on the Cohasset Board of Selectmen at the April 9 election.

In a press release, England said he can offer leadership, planning, and administrative organization to the board of selectmen and promised to provide fair and equal treatment of municipal employees at all levels if elected.

Planning at all levels of government will be an important campaign issue. "As a selectman," England said, "I will encourage the board to plan for meetings; to anticipate needing town counsel's advice or perhaps input from the Mass. Municipal Associa-

Clifford Mitman, Jr. chairman of Cohasset's Personnel Committee, has announced his candidacy for a three-year term on the Board of Selectmen.

Mitman sees the increase from three to five members on the Board as an opportunity for the Selectmen's office to do more planning for future town needs.

He believes that the addition of two people should also allow the Board to work more closely with other town departments and committees — to get more input from them, and to provide better direction and coordination.

Mitman is serving his second term on the Personnel Committee. He is also a member of the Grievance Committee, along with the selectmen. "My experience on the Personnel Committee has helped me to get to know many town employees, and to understand Former Cohasset police chief John A DeBassio will seek a one-year term of office on the Cohasset Board of Selectmen at the April 9 town elections.

DeBassio cites over 20 years of experience in law enforcement service as both an administrator and a police officer as two of his major qualifications for selectman.

"I take some measure of pride in my performance as chief of the Cohasset Police Department," DeBassio stated in a press release.

"That performance and the progress which I made was possible, at least in part, by the attention to duty and active participation of police department personnel, along with the open communications which

Bow Street loitering

Selectmen discussed with Acting Chief Kealey the teenage loitering on Bow Street. The chief said he has talked with almost all residents on that street about the possibility of erecting a No Parking sign from the Cook's home to the summer residence. He has been unable to contact the summer resident to see if he would comply with the posting of the signs.

The signs would be used to deter the teens from parking and loitering in the Bow Street neighborhood. If their cars were parked in a No Parking designated area, police could ticket all illegally-parked cars or arrest the drivers if they don't leave.

Chief Kealey said the police are patroling the area frequently and "moving them out and often." He said this method has been successful in reducing the loitering in the residential neighborhood.

Selectmen said the police should continue this practice before traffic signs are posted.

Bottle Bill regulations

State Representative Mary Jeanette Murray has been able to obtain copies of the Regulations for the implementation of the "Bottle Bill."

Murray said, "The regulations may be obtained in the Selectmen's offices."

There have been many questions regarding these Rules and Regulations. Representative Murray has distributed the regulations to those who have requested them.

Bloodmobile Jan. 31

The Cohasset chapter of the American Red Cross will conduct a Bloodmobile Monday, Jan. 31. It will be held at the Unitarian Parish House on the Common from 2:30 to 7:15 p.m.

Everyone in good health between 17 and 65 years-old are urged to attend.

Beach stickers

Selectmen discussed transferring beach stickers to the recreation department, rather than the police department. Acting Chief Dealey told selectmen he has always opposed the police department serving as the location for issuance of the beach stickers. Using 15-17 different officers for this duty, which sometimes includes overtime especially during the busiest time of the year, costs the town thousands of dollars for non-police work, he said.

Selectman Chairman Henry Ainslie agreed that issuance of stickers never belonged in the police station, and said he agreed with the idea of transferring it to the recreation department.

Recreation director John Worley said his department seemed to be the natural place where beach stickers should be issued. He said he receives numerous calls throughout the year from residents seeking the car stickers.

Selectman Mary Jane McArthur said the board of health recently decided not to issue dump stickers. The beach sticker would be used as an all facilities sticker, she said. But a future issue has to be discussed soon, she said, which addresses the concern of many residents who never go to the dump, but have to have a beach sticker, and vice versa.

'A Man for all Seasons' replays Sunday

By David Wadsworth

Cohasset Dramatic Club's production of Robert Bolt's award winning play "A Man For All Seasons" will be presented in full color videotape in the Unitarian Parish House, at 3 on Sunday, Jan. 23.

One of the most popular of recent Dramatic Club productions, "A Man For All Seasons" played to standing room audiences on two of its three performance nights at the Cohasset Town Hall last season.

The February 25 performane was videotaped and will be shown in its entirety at the Club's forthcoming presentation. The public is invited to attend.

Last year's performance was directed by Rosanne Ring and featured Ben Duffy of Hingham as the play's leading figure, Sir Thomas More. A cast of 14 members of the local club completed the list of characters. Authentic 16th century style costumes were used, and the play's incidental music was chosen from among the numerous musical compositions written by King Henry VIII of England.

"A Man For All Seasons" is a play made up of kings and cardinals, of nobles and common men shown with all the majestic panoply of the Royal Court of the English Tudor King Henry VIII. It is the remarkable and true story of the 16th century martyrdom of the eminent English intellectual and churchman Sir Thomas More, persecuted and finally executed for his religious beliefs during the chaotic reign of "Great Harry", King Henry VIII.

School budget debate

Advisory committee members Paul Neelon and Jacqueline Dormitzer may be due for some special treats from School committee lobbiests Dick Conley and Joseph Nedrow.

Conley and Nedrow hope to strengthen their case for an expanded school budget, particularly as it relates to maintenance funds for buildings, through direct appeal to the advisory liaisons and perhaps some lunches in Boston.

"Paul Neelon sometimes has legal business in the building where I work," Nedrow said. Nedrow said he had already proposed to Neelon that they meet for lunch sometime. He guessed it might be time to "hurry up" that lunch.

Nedrow, who is one of 470 persons registered with the Secretary of State as a professional lobbist or "legislative agent" said real estate values are maintained by having good schools.

Clam bed openings

The Board of Health received notification Jan. 13 regarding the opening of clam beds in the Cohasset-Scituate S-4 area.

The waters and flats of the coast of Cohasset in a southerly direction from the entrance to Little Harbor to Strawberry Point located in Scituate Neck; but excluding the waters and flats of Cohasset Harbor including its tributaries inside or west of the stone breakwater and a line drawn in extension thereof to the highwater mark on the northerly side of the harbor, except the waters and flats of that portion of Cohasset Harbor and Bailey Creek east of a line drawn from the northerly extremity of the said breadwaters to the house now or formerly occupied by Mr. William Martin near the westerly extremity of Bassing Beach and continued in a straight line across Bailey Creek to the shoreline of Cohasset.

Kindergarten registration

Children who will be five years-old by December 31, 1983, may register for Cohasset Kindergarten classes entering in September.

A birth certificate must be presented at the time of registration if one is not on file at the Cohasset Town Hall.

Registration will be held at the Joseph Osgood School Jan. 24 to Jan. 28 from 9 a.m. until 3 p.m.

SAT scores

School Superintendent Eugene Crowell is elated with the latest Cohasset student results of the Scholastic Aptitude Tests taken last year.

Out of 28 school systems south of Boston, Cohasset students' SAT scores averaged 469 on the verbal portion of the test and 504 on the mathematics section. These combined results were 80 points above the national averages of 426 verbal and 467 math, and nearly the highest on the South Shore.

Ninety-five percent of the senior class took the tests in 1982.

Crowell said the better scores on the test can reflect a high socio-economic nature of the community, but added the concern of Cohasset residents for the quality of the town's educational system has created a good school system. "It's a whole community effort, starting with student interest in education and it's gratifying to have the support in the community. It shows we have good kids."

Democrats to caucus Feb. 5

Registered Democrats in Cohasset will be holding a caucus at Cushing Plaza Saturday, Feb. 5, at 2 p.m. to elect delegates to the 1983 Massachusetts Democratic Convention.

The Convention, which will be held in Springfield on April 9, will adopt a Party Platform.

Cohasset will be electing four delegates and two alternates, equally divided between men and women, to send to the convention. The apportioned number of delegates has been allocated on the basis of a formula giving equal weight to the Democratic Party registration and the average vote for Democratic candidates in the last general elections for Governor and President.

Chairman Donna McGee will call the caucus at the Cushing Room. The caucus is open to all registered Democrats, persons ineligible to register and media representatives. The only persons eligible to participate in any portion of the caucus are those who are registered Democrats in the ward or town as of December 30, 1982. There will be no absentee or proxy voting.

Candidates for delegate and alternate must also be present and give his or her written consent to be nominated and that nomination must be seconded by two persons present at the local caucus.

All ballots will be written and secret. Those candidates receiving the greatest number of votes on the first ballot will be elected.

Each candidate will be allowed to make a two-minute speech and to distribute on his/her behalf one sheet of paper listing qualifications and ideas.

Slate-making is allowed, but no special preference shall be given to slates. There is no quorum requirement for the caucus.

There will be no admission or expense charge at the caucus, although donations may be solicited.

Discrimination on the basis of race, sex, age, color, creed, national origin, religion, ethnic identity, philosophical persuasion or economic status in the conduct of the caucus is strictly prohibited.

Challenges to the delegate selection process can be filed in writing with the Complicance Review Commission, c/o The Massachusetts Democratic State Committee, 11 Beacon Street, Suite 426, Boston, Massachusetts 02108 no later than February 7, 1983.

Metcalf and Eddy plan in 1980, the town would have to eliminate the pollution at James Brook by October, 1984, or lose 20 per cent of the federal funding for the construction of the sewer project.

According to Gwinn, WPC representative Jeans doubted the town could meet the deadline while it pursued alternative plans.

Henderson also noted that if the town followed the voters' mandate of Article Four, Cohasset would probably lose the 20 per cent funding if voters decided to return to the original plan after seeking alternatives and missing the deadline.

DeSantis asked the state to grant Cohasset four to six months in which to propose a position according to the alternative engineering studies now sought.

He said the town will be able to implement a better schedule than with the Metcalf and Eddy report, if alternative and innovative plans are proposed.

If a less expensive plan is adopted by the town, Cohasset would not need large amounts of federal assistance, DeSantis said.

According to Gwinn, assistant D.A. Rogers told DeSantis that if the state grants the six month extension, and then the town later decides to return to the original Metcalf and Eddy plan, Cohasset stands to lose about $2 or 3 million because it did not meet the previously approved October 1984 deadline.

Gwinn said if the town loses the federal construction grant fund, Cohasset residents will end up paying $3-6 million for implementation of Phase One of the Metcalf and Eddy plan.

That depends on whether the voters decide to return to that original Central Sewering project.

It will be double the town's share of Phase One costs, according to the Metcalf and Eddy plan.

Gwinn proposed Cohasset begin immediately to implement the Metcalf and Eddy project at a cost of $40,000 per month to the town.

After six months and $240,000, voters will decide whether to continue with the state-approved plan, or adopt an alternative plan.

This would act as insurance for the town not to miss the October 1984 clean water deadline, and the town would not lose the $3 million federal grant if it decides to re-adopt the Metcalf and Eddy study, Gwinn said.

Another factor which was explained during the discussion was an alternative engineering study which will cost the town about $75,000 to $100,000, Gwinn said.

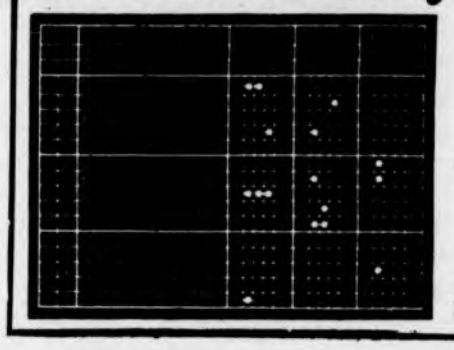
Although DeSantis requested the state should fund the alternative engineering proposal, Atty. Rogers said the state had already paid for the Metcalf and Eddy plan, and it would not be possible under state law to fund a second plan for the same town.

Selectmen said they would have a problem finding sources of financing for either the Gwinn proposal, or the alternative engineering plan sought by Desantis.

Sewer commissioner Gwinn also noted that with any plan, the town still needs to upgrade its sewer plant. According to the Metcalf and Eddy plan in 1980, it would cost $4.5 million to build a new sewer plant suitable to the needs of the new system.

Gwinn estimated it would cost the town about $13 million now to upgrade the plant according to state standards.

Health Board focus on hazardous material



The Cohasset Board of Health announces that it is appointing a Hazardous Material Committee. The Committee is formed to report to the Board of Health.

The Board feels there is a need for a committee to prepare and become informed in case of need; to advise the Board of Health of hazardous materials which have a potential to affect the health of the citizens; to coordinate with state agencies in the management of hazardous materials; and to act as an information center to the town through the Board of Health.

The Committee will consist of the Hazardous Waste Coordinator and a representative of each of the following departments: fire, police, health, conservation, water, highway, civil defense, and planning. Also, three concerned citizens of the town. The committee is charged with: preparing a plan of response to spills of dangerous substances, and keeping the plan updated and involved citizens active; educating themselves through available workshops; inventorying hazardous materials and their method of storage in town; inventorying what hazardous materials pass through the town; and formulating a plan to protect the groundwater of the town.

Also researching a by-law regulating hazardous materials; keeping updated on all legislation governing the use and storage of hazardous materials; and being prepared to undertake other charges by the Board of Health as may occur.

Advisory chairman predicts budget cut of $300,000

In a preliminary review of the town's fiscal status for next year, Advisory Committee Chairman Jean Cotton predicted about $300,000 may have to be pared from the budget.

The chairman told Advisory Committee members last week that although most department budgets have been level funded for next year, certain items which the town has no control over may cause the total budget to exceed a two and one-half percent increase.

Fixed budget items such as health insurance, pension funds and the town's debt service, will contribute toward this estimated budget increase.

Cotton emphasized that this is a rough estimate, but as of last week there seemed to be about $308,401 which may have to be trimmed elsewhere in the budget to meet the state mandate of a two and one-half percent overall budget increase.

These estimates do not include the school and fire department budgets, Cotton said. Nor do they include state aid and revenue appropriations.

Although the budgets submitted to the committee for its review have been level-funded, there are numerous capitol outlay requests from many departments, she said.

A brief review of the requests indicate several of the items should be included as special articles in the town meeting warrant, and not within the annual budget, Cotton said.

Each department submitted its budget to the advisory committee with an additional separate sheet containing requests for capitol expenditures. Cotton said there are requests for things such as a $50,000 truck which would more appropriately belong in the town meeting warrant.

The anticipated increase, Cotton noted, was made after her review of prepared departmental budgets. But the advisory committee has not yet reviewed, amended and recommended these budgets. The budget picture could be greatly altered after the committee makes its recommendations, Cotton added.

The Fire Department budget has not yet been submitted to the committee, according to member Jim Latrotteria. The new chief is working on the finances, but is attempting to purchase some equipment from a central purchasing service.

The chief was recently appointed, and because of his attempt to utilize central purchasing, the preparation of the budget will be delayed, he explained. Lagrotteria praised Chief Martin Dooley for huis work on next year's budget although the new chief has only been in town two weeks.

The committee reviewed several of the smaller department budgets at its meeting last week.

The committee voted to recommend the following budgets: $51,287 for Town Accountant personnel services and $4,500 for expenses; $21,611 for Assessors' personnel services; $500 for Sealer of Weights and Measures personnel services, and $350 for expenses; $50,000 for the Special Retirement Fund; $6,500 for Self-Insured Unemployment; $51,908 for Tree and Park personnel services; and $21,750 for expenses; $100,801 for Highway Department personnel services; and $54,482 for expenses; $40,000 for snow removal and $2,300 for the Highway Municipal Garage.

The committee recommended $15,627 for cemeteries personnel services and $1,545 for expenses; $1,475 for veterans' graves; $47,162 for treasurer-collector personnel services, and $6,486 for expenses; $18,691 for Town Clerk personnel services, and $1,011 for expenses; $3,205 for personnel services for Election and Voter Registration, and $6,047 for expenses; $125 for Town Moderator; $325 for Advisory Committee personnel services, and $225 for expenses.

The committee recommended $85 for the Cohasset Common Historical District Commission, and $85 for the Cohasset Historical Commission.

Capitol outlay requests were reviewed by the committee, butwere not voted on last week.

Among the items requested by the various departments are: $24,000 for a winch truck and to replace the cable on the old winch truck for the Tree and Park Department; $40,000 for a catch basin cleaner and snow plow for the Highway Department, and $450 for a metal detector for the cemeteries department.

The advisory committee was scheduled to review the Sewer Department and Board of Health budgets, Tuesday, Jan. 18.

School Board bickering

With sorrow we note yet another episode of bickering between School Committee Members Joseph Nedrow and Martha Gjesteby (see last week's Mariner). Last October the issue of contention was Mrs. Gjesteby's open letter to her colleagues questioning the wisdom of automatically filling vacated positions in an era of shrinking school enrollments. Mr. Nedrow called that letter "uncalled for, unprofessional and a disservice to the town."

This time the alleged issue grew out of a "goals workshop" the school committee held January 3. Mr. Nedrow has ridiculed Mrs. Gjesteby and her goals, stating that she is the mouthpiece for residents "whose priorities are not the children."

Mr. Nedrow should either wash his mouth out with soap or keep it very shut. What is particularly offensive about his invective both in October and now is his presumptuous and effrontuous assumption that he has the ability to divine and define Mrs. Gjesteby's intent.

If you read the Mariner with regularity you know we take strong stands and criticize public officials when we deem it our duty to do so. But we stay away from anything remotely connected with intent or motive. We do so for the decisive reason that we have no way of knowing a public official's intent, and without knowledge the only proper course is silence. So from time to time we fault our public servants for what we see as the consequences of their behavior, but we leave theological questions to One who is qualified to handle them.

Mr. Nedrow, on the other hand, seems to think he has Mrs. Gjesteby's exact number. He seems to "know" that because Mrs. Gjesteby's youngest child has now graduated from Cohasset High School, she serves on the committee merely to be a mouthpiece for those who care not for children.

Bull feathers, Mr. Nedrow, and it's a pity we can't use the expletive we mean. If we believed what you say about Mrs. Gjesteby we'd as soon believe that no grandchild can be left with his grandparents for fear he'll be bartered for some Geritol. Such a silly notion flies in the face of everything we know about middle-aged men and women...and about Martha Gjesteby.

Mrs. Gjesteby for her part makes no bones about her feeling toward Mr. Nedrow, but unlike Mr. Nedrow, she has the decency not to publicize those feelings into vituperative public statements. Even so, it must be said that her error — the imputation of motive — is not unlike that of her arch-rival. So she may have offended Mr. Nedrow, and that may have given rise to his "imputations of motive."

What is crystal clear is that none of this serves the school children of Cohasset. Proposition 2½ is now exactly 2½ years old. Enormous work is yet to be done in assessing its long-term impact on the quality of education the town is able to offer its next generation. School committee members who, as it would seem, dislike one another, can only dissipate their energies castigating one another. They do not serve the needs of the youth of Cohasset.

We have little doubt that Joseph Nedrow and Martha Gjesteby are two intelligent, well-educated individuals who intend well. But as long as they are bickering they are not in our view serving well. It is time for both of them to presume, as we presume, that they each serve on the school committee in order to benefit the children of Cohasset. It is time for them to settle their differences over policy amid mutual respect...for the good of the children of Cohasset.

Growing food in Cohasset

Letters

To the Editor:

This year I returned to Cohasset for the Christmas season after 10 years out of the state.

Cohasset Environmental Action and the Greater Boston Environmental Communication Council were active entities because of my efforts.

As a Cohasset hometown boy, somewhat grown up, I would like to offer an ecological perspective to the community of my youth.

Cohasset is a wonderful oak forested and green-lawned community with a breathful ocean atmosphere and much granite.

However, the lack of bountiful gardens and treecrops, specifically winter wheat and Chinese chestnut, is particularly noteworthy for remedy.

While Massachusetts imports 95 per cent of its food, its potential is so much more. Buying much food via a cheap food policy may seem like a good idea, but cheap money buys cheap food, often sprayed with chemicals and grown on demineralized soil.

If a wide spectrum of finely ground rock mineral flour, such as might come from granite ground to a #20 mesh size, were spread at a rate of two tons/acre over the town, then where oak trees grew or grow, Chinese chestnuts could be started. In 10 years this could provide a steady ton/acre of sweet potato-tasting nuts that can be eaten as a staple energy food without injury to the liver as with most other nuts.

Human septage is best processed into a stable, humus composition along with plant carbon sources and applied along with rock flour to level garden terraces to grow wheat which can provide optimum levels, in a small area, of chlorophyll, vitamin A, vitamin C, and good, non-liver injurying proteins. These food nutrients in the rejuvinated cereal grass comprise 70 per cent of the cost of the traditional diet.

Someday you could get really sick with a nuclear nightmare and good food will be unavailable. You will really wish you had planned ahead to capture the sun's ultimate gift through the noteworthy Cohasset environment.

'Grandma's Kitchen'

To the Editor:

While walking in downtown Cohasset today I just fell in love with a painting in the window of Kit and Kaboodle called "Grandma's Kitchen" by Donna Green.

It brought back memories of my childhood and I could almost smell the cookies as they came from the oven. I'm bringing this to your attention because I believe she is a very gifted artist and deserves recognition.

Selectmen briefs . . .

POLICE CHIEF INTERVIEW

Selectmen reviewed several more resumes for the position of police chief and added two more candidates to be interviewed.

The board will begin the interviews Tuesday, Jan. 18 at 7:30 p.m. Three persons were scheduled to be interviewed by selectmen that night.

A second round of interviews will begin at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Jan. 20. The final two candidates will be interviewed on Tuesday, Jan. 25. Selectmen will interview eight persons for the position.

Among the men being considered for the job are three local police officers, Acting Chief Joseph Kealey, Lt. Charles Stockbridge, and Sgt. Richard Barrow.

During last week's session, selectmen reviewed several resumes and chose two candidates from the group. Selectmen decided to keep all non-resident candidates anonymous, but publically reviewed each resume.

One candidate chosen last week by selectmen is a 35 year-old police sergeant in a western Massachusetts town. He holds a master's degree in criminal justice from Clark University and is president of his department's police association.

He was a patrolmen for nine years and is a past liaison between the police and the local youth commission. He has assisted the police chief in preparation of the department's budget, and writes a bi-weekly newspaper column on highway safety.

The second candidate is 42 years old and has a master's degree in public administration from Northeastern University. He is currently a senior lecturer in the social science programs at Northeastern.

He was a police officer in a nearby town for five years, prior to his occupation as an educator.

OTHER ACTION

Because Acting Chief Joseph Kealey missed a salary increase when the department was granted a pay increase last fall, selectmen voted to increase the acting chief's salary to $24,306, retroactive to September, 1982.

In other action, selectmen voted to hire John Sadler to paint eight rooms in town hall at a total cost of $3,160.

Selectmen awarded additional insurance to police and fire personnel for a low bid of $4,988 from McIntyre, Fay, and Thayer. This insurance would cover liability for costs not covered by workmen's compensation if a firefighter or police officer is injured.

Selectmen appointed Dr. C. Michael Bliss as the board of health's representative to the sewer advisory committee. Maxwell Pounder, a recent appointee to the sewer commission, was also named to the advisory group by selectmen.

The Poet's Corner

Hole in the Hill Gang

'Twas the winter of '82, the month cold December,
Ask any old-timer and he'll surely remember,
When the "Hole in the Hill Gang" rode through the state,
Amuck on wild lame ducks, hell-bent to legislate.
They mumbled and fumbled and pretended child's play,
As they looted the State House, and then sped away,
Crying, "Hurry up, hurry up, the Duke's on his way!"

There was Fibber McGee and Bully Boy Bligh,
And the Kingpin, of course, with a leer in his eye,
And Dopey and Grumpy and Nasty and Lout,
And the rest of the dwarfs with their hands all held out.
What a rumpus they made as they hiked up their pay,
Whisking judgeships and power and Massport away,
Crying, "Hurry up, hurry up, the Duke's on his way!"

"Can do!" laughed the Kingpin, and said, "Raise your hand,
"Do you solemnly swear to support my next stand?"
While Fibber and Bully Boy worked to release,
All the political loot their gang's palms had greased.
Oh the widows and orphans prayed for the day
When the "Hole in the Hill Gang" would gallop away,
Crying, "Hurry up, hurry up, the Duke's on his way!"

Well, the dust's finally settled and the gang's feeling hurt,
That no one appreciates their piratical spurt,
"You get what you deserve," explain Nasty and Lout,
"Put garbage in the State House and the smell will leak out."
And Fibber and Bully Boy have nothing to say,
While the Kingpin shreds papers that could point his way,
Thinking, "Cover up, cover up, the Duke's on his way!"

Now the widows and orphans pray for the day
When the "Hole in the Hill Gang" will gallop away,
Crying, "Hurry up, hurry up, the posse's on its way!"

Nostalgic View From the Top

"A Nostalgic View from the Top!" is a poem written by the residents of the Ripley Road Nursing and Retirement Home.

New Years meant Church or tobogganing with friends 'til two a.m.
A lot of snow and parties
And leggings that button up the side.

Bonnet and dress to go to the beach
Water wings and a bag of something
Like tomatoes and bread and butter
Or milk, nine cents a quart.

We were there when the 1938 hurricane hit
It was bad in Providence
It flooded the bank vaults.
We ironed out certificates back then
And in '41, Pearl Harbor put many husbands back to work.
In 1916 pregnant ladies died.
No serums to combat the flu.
No particular name - just the flu.
In tents we nursed the sick.
I remember mother being worried about me.

Some of us worked
For the Red Cross
And the Sandwich Glass Museum,
For Jordan Marsh,
For law firms and doctors,
In family businesses.

I bet my customers still miss my invisible mending
Being the only weaver on the South Shore.

We helped bring up our 15 brothers and sisters,
And learned responsibility very young.

We loved to ride bicycles,
Not the high seaters!
We're not that old!

Mostly we raced in our
Romand sandals to catch the trolley
At the top of the hill in Bloomers and stockings.

The Snow Storm

Twas the night 'fore a snowstorm,
the weathermen said,

Filling New Englanders with familiar dread.
"A real Nor'easter," they said with a scare.
"Better be ready! Better prepare!"

The shovels were left by the doorsteps with care,
In hopes that the snowdrifts would not be too near.
And all through the town there arose such a bustle,
As folks near and far prepared with a hustle.

The markets were crammed with shoppers in fear,
Stocking up milk, cigarettes, candles, beer.
Sales in shovels and snow boots were high,
As panic set in with the storm so close by.

"Looks like a blizzard," the weathermen said.
"Stay inside! Do not drive! Lock your doors!
Go to bed!"
The Guv — good old Duke — was ready in wait,
Snug in a turtleneck like '78.

A slick fleet of snowplows stood with filled tanks,
Ready to battle the four-foot high banks.
Parties were cancelled; plans rearranged.
On advice from the weathermen, dates were all changed.

They followed their radar and plotted their maps,
And said one or two feet would fall on our laps.
But just as we should have been hit by the storm,
Our weathermen discovered the air was too warm!

They came on the air, "Well, it won't be so bad folks."
We all should have known. Was this one of their jokes?
The snow we'd expected had all turned to rain,
At least on the South Shore — Oh what a pain!

We woke the next morning, not even an inch!
The shovel sat quiet, not used in a pinch.
And out on the lawn, all muddy and icky,
We heard a loud cry, "Why'd I listen to Dicky???"

January 1983: Cohasset campaigns for selectmen seats underway

It's happening ...

Historial Society meeting

The Cohasset Historical Society's mid-winter dinner meeting with guest speaker will be held at Trueblood Hall, Unitarian Parish House, Wednesday, Jan. 26. The public is invited.

A pot roast dinner will be served at 6:30 p.m. catered by the Dorothy Bradford Chapter, Eastern Star, Hingham. Reservations may be made by calling Constance Parker at 383-0773 or the Society at 383-6930 no later than Friday, Jan. 21.

The meeting will be the final opportunity to purchase raffle tickets for the Historical Society's 1983 Cohasset Heritage quilt. The quilt is a fine example of quiltmaking and depicts numerous scenes from historical Cohasset. It was made by members and friends of the Historical Society. The winner will be chosen and announced after dinner.

Guest speaker for the evening will be Captain Arthur Knight. Captain Knight's extensive experience in the maritime world qualifies him to speak with first-hand knowledge of his topic, "A Thumbnail History of the Maritime Industry."

Among his many maritime affiliations, Captain Knight is Vice Chairman and Trustee of the Massachusetts Maritime Academy Foundation, a member of the Foreign Commerce Club of Boston, and member of the Board of Governors of the Maritime Association of Boston.

In 1976 and 1980 he was a member of the Executive Committee of Operation Sail.

White elephant sale

The Amateur Gardeners of Cohasset will meet Jan. 25 at 12 noon. in the Cushing Room, Rockland Trust Co., Cushing Plaza.

A white elephant sale will be held. Please bring any unwanted plants or planters.

Hostesses will be Carol Zimmerman and Marge Ingram and co-hostess, Edna Finegan.

'Sweetheart Ball' Feb. 5

The Saint Anthony's Sociables proudly announces its "First Annual Sweetheart Ball" with the Rene and Maria Rancourt Orchestra at Kimball's by-the-Sea Inn, Saturday Feb. 5. There will be dinner and dancing, floor show and door prizes.

For further information call 383-0700, 749-7379, 383-0659.

'Bedknobs and Broomsticks'

The Cohasset Community Center will present a children's movie, "Bedknobs and Broomsticks" Saturday, Jan. 22 at 4 p.m. at the Center.

There will be a small admission charge.

The movie will last until approximately 5:30 p.m. Call Joyce Hoffman at 383-0088 for further information.

Bible study group

A Bible Study Group will be held Friday, Jan. 21 at 7:30, at the home of Fred DeMute in Hingham.

Father Konstantinos Mendrinos of the Panagia Greek Orthodox Church of Cohasset will be on hand to lead the discussion concerning the Gospel according to St. Luke, 18:35-43, which will be the reading for Sunday, January 23 at the Panagia Church (Pope Memorial).

The study will focus on how this Reading and the Liturgy of the Church relate to everyday situations. All those who are interested in this discussion group, and in learning of the relevance of the Bible teachings to their lives are welcome to call the Panagia Church, 383-6380, for further information.

'Frosty Frolic' at Hugo's

The Board of Directors of the Cohasset Community Center is sponsoring a winter dance, "Frosty Frolic" Friday, Jan. 28, from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. at Hugo's Lighthouse.

Entertainment will be provided by an outstanding local Cohasset group, the Identity Crises, for dancing pleasure.

A nominal fee is being charged for this festive evening that helps support the Center and the many programs and events offered throughout the year.

Tickets will be mailed. Extra tickets are available at the Center, call 383-0088.

Community update program

The School Health Department will sponsor a Community Update Program on Sexually Transmitted Diseases Wednesday, Jan. 19 at 8 p.m., in the Cohasset Jr./Sr. High School auditorium.

The presentation will include a slide show and discussion updating the audience on the latest information regarding sexually transmitted diseases including: herpes genitalis, gonorrhea, syphilis and scabies.

The speaker will be Elizabeth Penney from Dr. Nicholas Fiumara's Center for Communicable Diseases, Massachusetts Department of Public Health.

All interested parents and high school students are urged to attend.

Michael Gill, Cohasset High School Health Coordinator, said the Community Health Education Advisory Committee and the Health Education Coordinator feel there is a community need for more information on this topic.

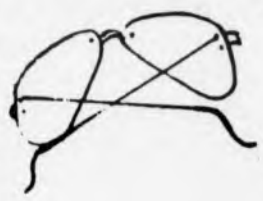
This program has been scheduled many weeks in advance in order to avoid any conflict with other school and community functions. Gill said, "I realize that this is the night before Jr./Sr. high school semester exams are scheduled to begin, but hopefully, this will not prevent any interested students from attending for an hour or so."

S.S. Conservatory concert

A concert by members of the brass faculty at the South Shore Conservatory of Music will be presented in Cox Hall at the school, off 19 Fort Hill Street, Hingham, Sunday, Jan. 23 at 3 p.m.

The trio includes A. Douglas Wauchope (trombone), Llewellyn Humphreys (french horn) and Jonathan Knight (trumpet). All three are professional artists and active free lance musicians in the Boston area.

Doug Wauchope is the director of the Brockton branch of the Conservatory and conductor of the junior group of the Summer Wind Ensemble. He has performed with the Boston Symphony, the Boston Pops and the orchestras of the Boston Ballet and Boston Opera among others.



Lew Humphreys has played with the Pro-Arte Chamber Orchestra, the Portland Symphony and with the Opera Company of Boston to name a few.

There are as many reasons to get The Globe as there are days of the week.

Yes it's Sunday and you've laughed through the comics. Enjoyed Boston's best sportswriting. Pored through our magazine. Caught up on the complete regional and national stories.

Now what will you do the rest of the week? For openers, we'd suggest putting The Globe in your hands Monday so you'll know how the rest of the world spent their day of rest.

Come Tuesday, you can open a bigger business with "Business Extra." A special section devoted to the people, industries, facts and figures that make New England's business world turn.

Wednesday, you'll get a golden opportunity to cut corners with pages of money saving coupons, budget hints, recipes and all you need to serve it up right, in the Food pages.

Thursday, there's every reason to check our Calendar. With The Boston Globe's leisure magazine you'll have the complete goings on in and around Boston for the week.

You'll find "At Home" the place to be on Friday, with ideas for decorating, improving, repairing and enjoying.

Saturday has a plus all its own. "Sports Plus." The official word on the winners and the losers. Plus in-depth stories on the action on and off the field.

Ahhhhh Sunday. It wouldn't be the same without The Boston Sunday Globe.

See, just like the world, The Boston Globe doesn't stop between Sundays. Every day, The Globe provides quality, comprehensive coverage of the happenings from around the world. As well as timely features and the entertaining and informative columnists you've come to know.

We'll bring it all to you fresh each day. And that makes one more good reason to get The Globe all the days of the week.

CHS STUDENTS AND TEACHERS GOING PLACES

This spring and summer, four groups of Cohasset students and teachers will venture far from the South Shore and Cohasset.

John Raccuia will chaperone the eighth grade trip to Washington D.C. Lois Cecsarini is planning a student trip to Spain. Antoinette Jillson and Jo Ellen Wood will escort a group to England. And George Fortin is organizing a group bound for France.

Several of these trips still have openings.

Parents interested in learning more about the trip plans are invited to attend a meeting Thursday, Feb. 3 at 7:30 p.m. in Room 107 at the high school.

Details of the trip will be discussed with parents of students already enrolled, and available openings will be subscribed.

The high school representatives to the PSO have planned this gathering. Joan Shockman is the coordinator for this event. Call her at 383-6366 for further details.

Matt Kuhn, 11, addresses a question to M.L. Carr, via Ch. 4's Lou Tilley. The Deer Hill School looks on.

CRUISER INVESTIGATION SOLVED

Investigating Officer Robert Jackson and other Cohasset officers believe they have solved the smashing of a police cruiser windshield on New Year's Eve.

Teenagers attending a party at 34 Windy Hill Road called police to complain of several uninvited persons who were getting out of hand. When police arrived, a person left the house, smashed the cruiser windshield with a board and dashed down the street. Damage was estimated at $300 to the cruiser.

Tuesday Acting Police Chief Joseph Kealey announced a complaint has been taken out for a 16 year-old Cohasset male juvenile. He has been summoned to Quincy District Court Feb. 8 to answer a charge of malicious destruction of property, i.e. a police cruiser windshield.

Kealey said the summons came as a result of an ongoing investigation and interviews of local youths who were in the area that night.

In what may be a related incident, police continue to investigate the incident of a man who at approximately the same time, broke into a neighbor's home on Windy Hill Road, stole the family car and drove through the garage doors and backed down the driveway. The man apparently drove the car to West Corner and then returned to Windy Hill Road. The man ditched the car in a patch of woods and escaped on foot.

COAL STOVE FIRE

An overheated coal stove left a Cohasset family at 60 Doane Street homeless Friday afternoon as firefighters battled a smoky fire. The victims were John and Ellen Cogill who escaped unharmed.

Fire Chief Martin Dooley said firefighters were called at 3:15 p.m. and left the scene at 7:10 p.m. Damage was estimated at $2,000 to building structure and $2,000 in house contents.

The Cogills had permits from both the fire and building departments. Dooley said the fire was caused by a hot stove; a high heat situation which led from the wall to the chimney. Building inspector Bob Dennis said a metal thimble collapsed which allowed the heat to build up in the pipes.

Dennis said the fire could have been prevented with a thermometer to monitor the heat and perhaps an improved masonry job.

Dooley believes the Cogills are staying with friends until the house is repaired. Firefighters worked to cover windows with plastic and hammered plywood to holes in the side of the house in preparation for Saturday's snowstorm.

NEW ADVISORY BOARD MEMBER

Fred Koed of 92 Pleasant Street, was appointed by the Troika (Selectmen Chairman Henry Ainslie, Advisory Committee Chairman Jean Cotton and Town Moderator William Weeks) to serve the balance of a three-year term ending in 1984.

WATER DEPT. STATE GRANTS

The Board of Water Commissioners have announced the award of a $502,410 state grant which will be used to pay department operating expenses.

The funds will be paid annually in installments of at least $14,000 through 2012. The initial payment will be paid retroactive to 1979, coinciding with the construction funding of a new water treatment plant.

The funds will be transferred to the Water Revenue accounts to pay for the department's operating expenses. Water Dept. Supt. Ben Curley said the grant will be a boost to level funded budgets.

The Water Commission praised Curley, Paul Ross of SEA Consultants, state Sen. Allan McKinnon and state Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, for their efforts in obtaining the grant.

Deer Hill students loosen up with theatre workshops

The theatre residency with the Just Around the Corner Company got underway at the Deer Hill School last week with classroom workshops conducted by company teacher, Josh Conescue.

Conescue led all classrooms in the first of two sessions devoted to drama. He concentrated on teaching the kids how to be "loose." He reassured the students that at first everyone, "feels dumb and kind of silly," but after some experience that feeling goes away.

He had classes "loosen" up by shaking and stretching out; and then by imitating moving through something, such as molasses and space; then talking really fast and then very slow. The workshops concluded with various mini-acting roles.

Conescue left each group of students with a voluntary assignment for their second workshop, taking place this week. They were to write a myth about how a "picture box" works. The "TVs" in the myths were not to be fancy, only black and white sets, and only channels 4, 5 and 7 with no knowledge of electronics. He suggested they think of they myth as God related and about how and what type of message might go out.

Most students, either individually or in pairs, were working on the assignment which they will act out with Conescue this week.

An actor with the JATC until last year, Conescue has done Masters work at Leslie College in integration of arts and education.

Marlene Moyer and Penny Perel completed their workshops with the Kindergarten and second grades last week at the Osgood School. The Kindergarteners' sequential workshops were similar to the first grades; the children explored the animals of fairy tales and make-believe.

Second graders created their own plays based on a circus theme and on the third day of workshops, acted out their original mini-plays in self-made costumes.

Karen Dieruf and Aleks Wierzvicki, members of the Just Around The Corner company, ready Deer Hill students for an impromptu mini-drama at their introductory assembly.

The JATC actors will be in residence at the Osgood School this week, Monday through Thursday. Classes will visit the "rehearsal hall" (gym) twice each to observe the company's re-working of their musical play, "Orpheus." A performance of this original participatory play will be presented at the Osgood School for all students Friday from 1-2:30 p.m.

Two core groups — 20 4th and 5th graders and 20 6th graders will be formed this week for work with JATC teachers the following three weeks. Other students will assist in a core group play with music, costume and set designs.

The JATC Company will be in residence at Deer Hill the week of January 24 and will give a performance of "Orpheus" on Friday, January 28 at 1 p.m.

'Shakespeare's World' coming to CHS in Feb.

A chance to become better acquainted with one of the greatest writers of all times will be offered to area residents when the Boston Shakespeare Company performs "Shakespeare's World" Friday, Feb. 4 at 8 p.m. at the Cohasset High School auditorium.

The company has returned from a national tour and will bring to life a unique collage of characters, plots and themes.

Scenes from the lively and bawdy comedies, delicate romances and well known tragedies will be performed by four professional actors who have joined the company from theatres throughout the United States.

The Boston Shakespeare Company is a resident, professional, classical, repertory company based in Boston. Members perform in the company's new thrust stage theatre at 52 St. Botolph St. It is a major cultural and educational resource which has toured New England and other parts of the United States for the past eight years.

They "bring Shakespeare out of the dusty library shelves and into the lives" of those attending, said one resident after attending a recent performance.

The program will be funded in part by the Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities. It is being brought to Cohasset by the Arts Enrichment Committee of the Parent School Organization.

Reserved tickets are available with a discount for groups of 20 or more. For information or tickets, call 383-6567, 383-0349, or 383-0527.

HOCKEY

The CHS varsity hockey team defeated league rival Duxbury and the Hull Pirates to boost their record to 4-0-0 for first place in the South Shore League.

Last Tuesday night the Skippers defeated Duxbury 3-0 in an outstanding effort.

"It was the best game we've played as a team in two years," said Coach Tom Burnell.

Senior co-captain Don O'Neill recorded a hat trick scoring a goal in each period with assists from seniors John Casey and Rich Evans.

O'Neill's last goal was scored with four seconds remaining from a Joe Hoffman assist.

In other league action last week the Skippers defeated the Hull Pirates 8-4 in a rough, hard-hitting match.

Coach Burnell said it was close for a while but a few power plays put the game away for Cohasset.

Senior center Dan Bowen earned a hat trick and co-captain Don O'Neill netted two goals with two assists. Defensive men Rich Evans and Kevin Quilty and forward John Casey scored one apiece. Casey also dished out four assists.

Seniors Don O'Neil, Rich Evans, Dan Bowen and John Casey are now placed as the top four scorers in the South Shore League.

The squad travels to Hanover Wednesday night to face the 2-0-0 Hanover Indians and Saturday they play the Rockland Bulldogs, away, at 5 p.m.

GIRLS BASKETBALL

The CHS girls basketball team was defeated twice last week by league opponents Rockland and Hull.

In Rockland, the Skippers were downed 50-44 by the Bulldogs despite a two point lead at the end of three quarters.

Sophomore point-guard Janet DiGirolamo netted 14 points for Cohasset.

Coach Bill Fallon felt his team put up a good fight but lost a tough one.

Friday the girls traveled to Hull and were defeated 45-38.

The team overcame a 15-3 first quarter to take a 22-21 half-time lead.

Captain Gia Barresi led Cohasset with 16 points. Sophomore Janet DiGirolamo chipped in 11 points for the Skippers.

Friday at 6:15 p.m. the team, now 5-5, hosts league opponent Norwell.

WRESTLING

The CHS wrestling team was recently defeated 39-21 by league opponent Rockland.

Senior captain Paul Igo, 100 pounds; junior Kevin Keller, 128 pounds; and junior Billy Sargent, 157 pounds, all pinned their opponents.

Sophomore Rick Rourke beat out his opponent with a 10-8 decision in the 114 pound class.

In non-league action, the Skippers were downed 51-18 by Marshfield. Recording pins for Cohasset were freshman John Froio, 107 pounds, sophomore Rick Rourke, 114 pounds, and eighth grader Liam Standford, 134 pounds class.

Junior Kevin Keller put up a good fight in the 128 pound class but lost in a 15-9 decision.

Thursday at 7 p.m., the squad travels to Norwell for a league match.

BOYS BASKETBALL

The boys varsity basketball team dropped two games to league opponents Rockland and Hull last week.

The Rockland Bulldogs (8-1) defeated the Skippers (63-52) despite a two point Cohasset lead at the half.

Freshman point guard Tony Bogarty led all scorers with 16 points.

Last Friday, the Skippers faced the Hull Pirates and were defeated 63-52.

Friday night, the boys face the Norwell Clippers on home court at 7:30.

ATHLETE OF THE WEEK

Senior goalie Mark Brown made 16 saves in a key hockey victory over league rival Duxbury last week, also recording his first shut-out of the season.

Coach Tom Burnell feels Brown has been doing extremely well in net and said his shut-out came at the most opportune time, against the toughest team.

Seahawks hockey kids split four

In the only action reported for conference play this week, the Seahawk Youth Hockey program managed only a split of the four games in which they participated.

The Bantam C's edged Marshfield 3-2 as John Hoyler, Rick Sparrow and Greg Humberdt registered goals.

The Pee Wee B's lost to Weymouth 5-3. Pat Glennon, Paul Norton and Peter Buckley scored the goals while Buckley, Norton, Erik Steverman, and Damon Sparrow were credited with assists.

The Squirt A's shut out Plymouth 2-0. Allison Salvador and Scott Peacock notched the B's goals while Paul Frey had the only assist. Kevin Mulcahy earned a "Mr. Zero" patch in his first goaltending effort.

The foyer often allows a decorator or designer to expand upon a theme found in adjoining rooms. Because it is usually rather small, the foyer offers a chance to be dramatic and extravagant. For instance, if there are elements of Chinese influences in a contemporary living room, why not splurge on a small oriental rug for the foyer? A quality wall covering may also be considered. The size of the foyer will limit expense on these items while their placement at the front door will assure maximum exposure to all who enter the home.

Accessories can make or break the effect of even the smallest area. The image you present to others is important and your home reflects your taste and style. As the peole you can talk to, BOUND BROOK PAINT & HARDWARE *invites you to stop in Mon-Wed 8-6, Thurs & Fri till 8:30, Sat till 5 and see us here in N. M.L. wows the kids at Deer Hill . . .

By Mike Berger

Boston Celtic forward M.L. Carr—diplomat, philosopher, discipliniarian and comedian visited Deer Hill School Friday. His main message to the children and Cub Scouts was to eliminate the "petty things in life."

What petty things?

"Like waking up Kevin McHale or Larry Bird on the plane while they're trying to sleep or putting gum under their seats."

"Remember the petty things in life and give respect to one another," said Carr.

M.L. (Michael Leon) and his friend, Lou Tilley, a Channel 4 sportscaster, came to Deer Hill as part of their outreach program to communities and after a request by Linda Farrag for Cub Scout Pack 38.

Farrag arranged Carr's visit to Cohasset with Allan Miller, Channel 4 Sports Producer. Tilley said M.L. has agreed to visit several communities and Cohasset was chosen because "we haven't been in the area before."

Carr said he enjoys visiting children because of their inquisitiveness and his belief that discipline and respect begin in the early ages.

Before the television crews focused on the Deer Hill School children, Carr delivered a message about respect for teammates, ie. other students and the importance of teamwork. He stressed that children should think first before giving thumps on the head, sticking gum under a seat; waking up other people or playing tricks; to have consideration and respect for another person.

"Give a little respect. Remember if everyone is going to work together, everybody has to be concentrating. Give a little respect. Don't do the petty things," Carr said.

Carr and Tilley fielded several questions from the audience before picking five or six children to be interviewed for the 5:30 p.m. Channel 4, "Live on Sports" program.

Carr enjoyed the questions and noted how happy he was to see that children were interested in the success of the Celtics at an early age.

The children enjoyed Carr's enthusiasm and comedy. One youth asked if Carr ever considered performing as a comedian?

Carr responded, "Johnny Carson had to start somewhere. Why not in Cohasset?"

He later quipped, "I can see it now — The Bob Hope of the east. But wait, there's only one comedian on Channel 4. That's Bob Lobel."

Here are some of the questions to Carr and his responses.

Several children wanted to know how many points he has scored in his career and how many rebounds he has pulled down.

Carr said he doesn't pay attention to statistics because his role with the Celtics is focused on defense, assists, helping the offense and rebounds, and playing the fundamentals of the game well. His best basketball game was 36 points and 18 rebounds.

When asked how old he was, he responded, "32 but my next birthday I will be 31."

M.L. Carr

When one youth asked what was the hardest team to play in professional basketball, Carr said, "Philadelphia." Immediately the children acknowledged the intense rivalry between the Celtics and Philadelphia and realized the Celtics must beat Philadelphia in the playoffs to have a good chance at the league championship.

The audience screamed, "Let's get it back Celtics." (The Channel 4 and Stop and Shop theme). This message was later repeated and rehearsed for a closing television shot.

Carr said he began thinking about basketball when he worked as a caddy on a golf course. A golfer told him he was growing so fast, he would be better off playing basketball.

"When I first started playing for a school team, I was the worst guy on the team. But I kept working at it" Carr said.

He said basketball is probably harder on the body than football because of the constant pounding. In his career, Carr has suffered two broken bones, one on his left foot and one on his right leg.

When asked for his prediction how the Celtics will do in the playoffs, Carr said, "It will be a piece of cake."

He later told the Mariner the Celtics have improved as a team from last year because of the addition of Quinn Buckner, a guard, and the improvement of Danny Ainge.

One youth asked what team he would enjoy playing for, if it were not for the Celtics, "Probably the Red Sox and I'd sign as a free agent," Carr said.

Carr predicts he will play for the Celtics for another year or two and will switch his career to either television sports reporting or work with an athletic shoe company.

Carr said he enjoys working with his teammates and "would like to go out on top."

One child asked what M.L. stands for and Carr replied, "Love, Work, Play, Good things."

One child asked if he ever thought about becoming a coach. He replied there are too many ups and downs about the job and didn't think he would ever become a coach.

Carr said he doesn't have any pre-game superstitions but former Celtic great John Havlicek did. "He would always hang his clothes in the same place and always shoot a layup before the pre-game warmups were over."

"Tiny Archibald always hits two free throws and Maxwell (Cedric Maxwell) always goes to the bathroom. But I don't have any," Carr said.

The toughest part of basketball, said Carr, is missing my family and children on the road.

One final question was does he get along with the press.

"Yes, I do, because I respect that they have a job to do. Win or lose, that's their job. But if they don't respect my job, then watch out."

Cohasset Squirts drub Whitman-Hanson

Coach Barry Resnick's Squirt A's romped past Whitman-Hanson-Kingston 9-2 as Jon Mahoney blasted in five goals and then edged previously unbeaten Plymouth 4-3 on Jeffrey White's unassisted tally.

Billy Lincoln, Chris Sullivan, White, and David Orpen netted the other scores in the initial contest while assists were registered by White (2), Keith O'Connell, Bobby DiVito (2), Michael Richardson (2), Mark Resnick, and Sean Noonan.

Resnick, Mahoney and Lincoln were the additional goal-scorers in the latter affair while assists were credits to Brian Pompeo (2), Richardson and Resnick.

At the So. Shore Art Center

In order to encourage additional enrollment in its winter term, the South Shore Art Center has delayed the start of four courses by one week.

Courses for the winter term are due to begin the week of Jan. 17, but the first meeting of Basic Drawing, Portfolio Preparation, Intermediate Photography and Figure Painting begin the week of Jan. 24.

Students must register in advance for any of the classes by either coming to or calling the center, located at 103 Ripley Road, Cohasset, 383-9548.

Virginia Moore's Basic Drawing will begin Monday, Jan. 24 at 7:30 p.m.

The course includes the study of composition, structural form and tonal values, using charcoals and working from still-life.

Portfolio Preparation Projects, a Saturday morning course for high school students, is scheduled to begin Saturday, Jan. 29. The delay was made because of a conflict with SAT testing on Jan. 22. Marjorie Vining will work with students to develop specific illustration projects for portfolios.

Paul Fortin's Intermediate Photography is now scheduled to start Monday, Jan. 24 at 7:30 p.m. Students will photograph various subjects and critique one another's work in aesthetics, composition and approach.

The fourth is Clement Micarelli's Figure Painting, scheduled to start on Wednesday, Jan. 26 at 7:30 p.m. Students will work from a live model to learn anatomical landmarks, use of color, light and shade, tonal relationships and composition. Oils are preferred but students may use their own choice of medium.

WINTER WATERCOLORS

The South Shore Art Center has put together a special one-day Winter Watercolor workshop, Saturday, Jan. 29 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Award winning watercolorist Virginia Avery will take students out into nature on a winter day and work on painting techniques, materials for cold weather painting and the proper clothing to wear.

Clothing is an essential ingredient for successful painting outdoors in winter. The artist needs a feeling of freedom and comfort to pursue his or her work while needing proper protection from the elements.

Those interested in the one-day workshop should call the Center at 383-9548. The snow date is Saturday, Feb. 5 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

VOLUNTEER AWARDS

Thirteen South Shore Art Center members whose combined total of volunteer service totals over 250 years, received recognition for their contribution to the arts facility.

Those members who have served the art center for 15 or more years were presented with the First Annual Awards for Volunteer Service by the center's acting president, Sheldon Ripley.

The awards were made possible by the Elizabeth Reddie Memorial Fund. Reddie was an active member of the center for many years.

Each recipient received a Certificate of Merit for outstanding volunteer service and will have his or her name placed on a plaque which will be permanently hung in the Center.

Receiving awards from Cohasset were Joseph Burbank, Kerstin MacNeill, Millard MacNeill, Mercie Nichols, Valerie Rever, Denise Ripley and Tom Lucas, who was an original charter member of the Center.

Those from Scituate receiving awards were David Walsh and K.A. Calnan. Certificates were also given to Virginia Moore, Hull; Berj Kailian, Weymouth, Constance Flavell Pratt, Norwell, and Dorothy Laney, Duxbury.

The Center's current executive director, Margaret Dillon, expressed her appreciation for all the volunteer hours of these people and by all the center's volunteers. "It is the volunteer staff that makes this center function and these awards were long in coming to those who have put in so many years of service," she said.

of 70 students.

Sixty-three students are projected for grade one; there are 61 students enrolled in the present Kindergarten. The budget calls for three first grade teachers. The present fourth first grade teacher will be transferred to the second grade where the total number of students is estimated to be 82. They will be divided between three self-contained classes and one open space class.

One of the proposed budget cuts, albeit at the bottom of the administration's list, is a second grade teacher. Landmaid said he was mentally assigning it a number 3 (last resort).

Three grade three classes are slated; one class of 29 in open space and two self-contained classes for the remaining 43 students.

Another proposed cut is $200 from the $500 budgeted for library books and materials at Osgood. Two-hundred dollars was also proposed to be cut from teaching supplies, not including textbooks.

Crowell also suggested cutting $65,000 from all schools for utilities.

A cut of $2,000 from Special Education contracted services was also proposed. Hart noted that a half-time position had previously been eliminated from the Osgood budget for special needs.

The committee discussed the administration's idea of cutting $3,500 for SRA testing and have it done every two years instead of yearly. Gjesteby opposed doing so. She said the tests were used by teachers and staff members in a positive way to spot weaknesses in students and curriculum.

Member Joseph Nedrow felt it might be possible to test in alternate years. Kornet did not feel it would be educationally sound to do so at the primary level. Landmaid said once testing funds were cut, they would be difficult to reinstate.

Budget discussions will continue with discussion of Deer Hill Monday, Jan. 24.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS THE TRIAL COURT THE PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT
Norfolk Division
Docket No.83F0027E1

Estate of HELEN L. KETCHUM late of COHASSET in the County of NORFOLK to the Attorney General of said Commonwealth

NOTICE

A petition has been presented in the above-captioned matter praying that the last will and codicil of said decedent be proved and allowed and that DAVID D. KETCHUM of Ipswich in the County of Essex and DAVID E. PLACE of Cohasset in the County of Norfolk be appointed executors named in the will without surety on the bond.

If you desire to object to the allowance of said petition, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before 10:00 in the forenoon on February 9, 1983.

In addition you should file a written statement of objections to the petition, giving the specific grounds therefore, within thirty (30) days after the return day (or such other time as the Court, on motion with notice to the petitioner, may allow) in accordance with Probate Rule 2A.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS THE TRIAL COURT THE PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT NORFOLK DIVISION DOCKET NO. 82E0134-P1

To Rudolph A. Curelli of Cohasset in said County and to all other persons interested.

A petition has been presented to said Court by MARGARET A. CURELLI of Boston in the County of Suffolk representing that she hold as tenant in common an undivided part or share of certain land lying in Cohasset in said County and briefly described as follows: The land in Cohasset, Norfolk County, Commonwealth of Massachusetts, being shown as Lot 15 on a Plan of Lots, Linden Drive, Cohasset, Mass., developed for D.J. Buckley Co., dated September 1, 1955, Lewis W. Perkins & Sons, Engineers, recorded with Norfolk Deeds in Plan Book 210, Plan No. 187, to which plan reference is made for a more particular description of said premises, setting forth that he desire that all of said land may be sold at private sale for not less than one hundred forty-five thousand dollars and praying that partition may be made of all the land aforesaid according to law, and to that end that a commissioner be appointed to make such partition and be ordered to make sale and conveyance of all, or any part of said land which the Court finds cannot be advantageously divided, either at private sale or public auction, and be ordered to distribute the net proceeds thereof.

If you desire to object thereto, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham before ten o'clock in the forenoon on the twenty-sixth day of January 1983, the return day of this citation.

Pets and their people have a lot in common

By Lois Martin

Now let's deal with this calmly.

You and your dog have a lot in common and that's that. I've been saying this for years and I'm not alone. People who watch pets and other people have spotted these similarities.

You know perfectly well I'm not accusing you of getting into the trash, or swiping tennis balls or pulling sheets off clotheslines. Who am I to accuse, after all, on the basis of rumor alone.

What I'm saying is...if you put seven dogs in a room and seven dog owners in the same place, chances are good you could match them up.

It would take a bit of time, of course. Personality is the primary factor. So you'd need to know the seven people or the seven dogs as a starting point.

I've never met a dog I didn't like. I've met at least 12 I couldn't stand but it was never because of the dog. It was because of his personality.

You take the standard poodle. Now this is going to be tricky because the hackles on the backs of all standard poodle owners in town are already on end.

That's the way it's been with me all my life with standard poodles. We've never hit it off. When I was a tender 15 I worked as trusty little chambermaid in a summer resort. Part of my duties were to turn down beds at night for the important guests, who talked very differently from me.

No problem. Happy to do it. Until I discovered a couple upstairs within my realm of responsibility had brought with them two, not one, but two excessively large and confident standard poodles. I, having come from a cocker spaniel family (more on that type later), didn't view myself as seeming suspect. But apparently in the eyes of a standard poodle I looked exactly like Ma Barker when I went in to turn down those sheets. Not to mention making the beds afresh in the morning or swiping up the mid room foyer.

Those poodles hounded my heels and far more of my being than I could protect with a feather duster.

The thing is the dogs' owners snapped and growled a lot too. I used to wonder how they'd have a swell summer there by the ocean because they simply didn't trust people enough to relax.

Over the years my mind has given vent to the possibility that some of the bloodhound temperament intermerged with the standard poodle might result in a less harried animal. But since I had no counter recommendation for the owners, I scrapped it.

I love yellow labs. I've known quite a few and have always been friendly with their owners. My favorite was "Belle," a lab who belonged to a family from Montana.

Beagles...owned by people who have rural appreciation, uncluttered sense of right and wrong, simple, straight forward. They come when you call them. Run off somewhere when you don't. Crosby Ladd had a beagle. That's enough to commend both man and dog.

The words "Doberman Pinscher" make me want to shinny up a telephone pole fast. I know our animal control officer has two. But that's the point. She controls them. Not the other way around.

Sometimes dogs and masters seem to have overlapped protection/loyalty with fear. So that you've got to show your own kennel papers to get out of your car.

And they're tall, those dogs, and their little teeth seem to have been brushed with a whetstone.

They have my respect, but from a distance.

Mongrel. That's a kinder word than many applied to dogs whose parentage is linked to a warehouse.

The mutts I've known are kindly, friendly, savvy, able to survive more than the more protected lap dogs who take dog boots in winter for granted.

I like the unidentified dog and their owners, who are often more humble than they ought to be. They can be less confident of their own importance, more likely to shrug off good naturedly what they decide is their lot in life.

A sheepdog. I've wondered if maybe that might be closer to my kind of dog than some others. I'm not given to drooling but I've noticed the sheepdog is everywhere and clumsy, the first to want to be included in everything and the last to get down from the couch if he thinks you have a lap.

The St. Bernard has a mission but he sometimes doesn't remember what it is. People who own them are committed, to causes that may outlast the dog.

Another potentially loathsome statement: If I want a dog, that's what I intend to have. Not a toy. I can pause to chuck the chin of a Pekinese or a cockapoo or any other toy, like I'd straighten the shoulder strap on a Barbie Doll.

But I want character and I guess I've come to believe that emanates more from larger dogs. (I never said I was without false assumptions...each of us bases these notions on experience alone).

One time in a weak moment I agreed to take care of a great, great Great Dane for a week while its family went away. The animal was heartbroken, bereft at being boarded away from those whom he'd foresworn to watch over all his life.

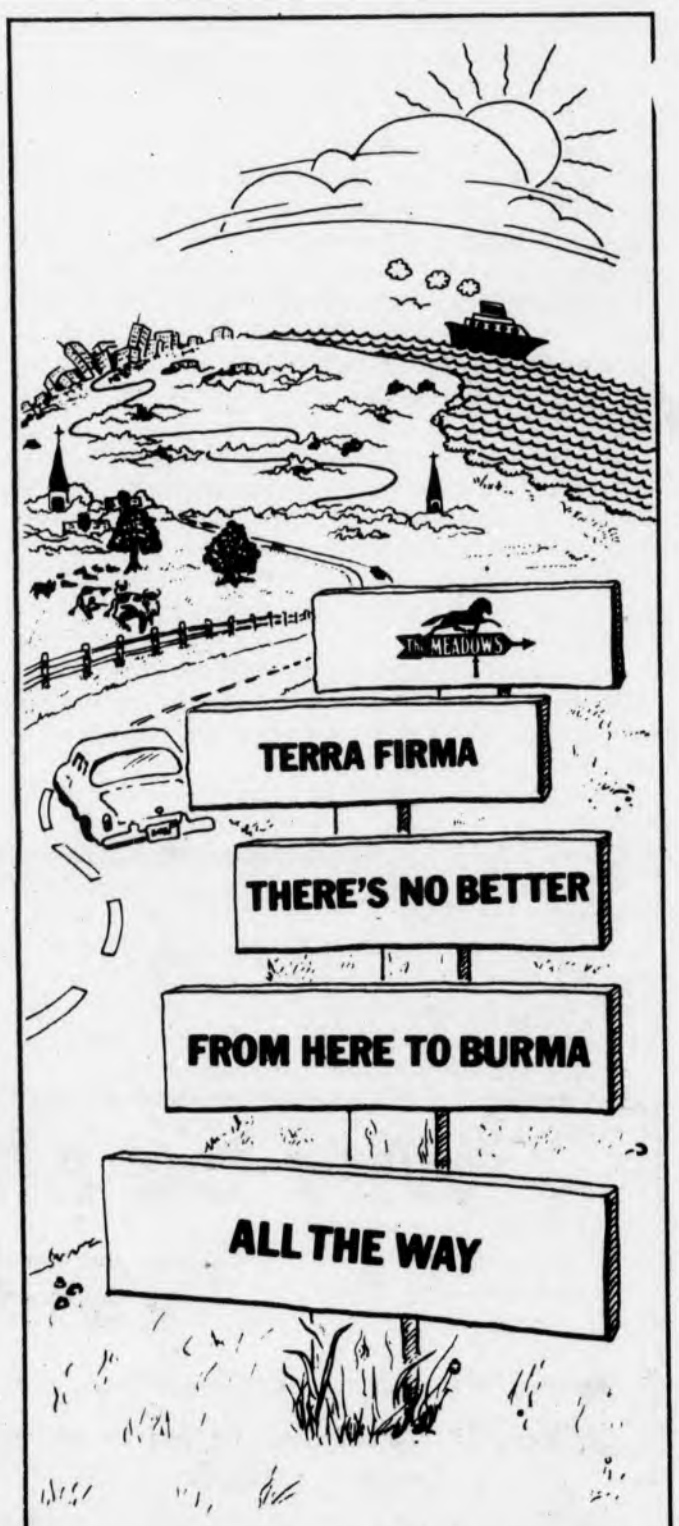
He bayed at the sun, howled at the moon, moaned in the fog, till a neighboring woman asked how long the street would be harnessed with my malcontent guest.

I was on the dog's side. Who among us hasn't been lonely, afraid, disheartened. I told her he was the starter set for my new kennel.

Owners of the Weimaraner or greyhounds jog, I think. They're sleek and skittish, kindly under the surface of shy/aloofness.

In the 40s and 50s the spaniel was the rage. We had Rusty those years. His idea of a swell time was to ride in the car with his ears blowing toward the rear license plate and his tongue somewhere near the front seat.

He was never particularly well trained, the mailman said, but he was reliable. He'd love you no matter what. When the chimney caught on fire, he'd flee with you. When you wanted to sit down, so did he. Whatever plans you made were fine for him, no advance notice needed. The similarity didn't escape me then or now.



But in more recent years I've had goldens. And you know they are...golden retrievers.

There was Duffy, a gentleman from Virginia, who graced our home, smiling benevolently at guests so long as he lived. The soul of uncritical patience, he rode in the passenger seat of the car while a teenager practiced his to and fro in the driveway.

One of your better outfielders, he was never quite able to resist stealing balls he'd retrieved nor ones he'd found near tennis courts.

I'm going to get me a dog as soon as possible. I'll recognize my type when I look in those eyes. I won't see fear. I'll see trust. That doesn't mean I'll be looking at a dodo. I'll simply see an intelligent being who's got golden or auburn hair, has trouble learning not to jump up on people with wet paws, who's ready to live a lot and who will not, under any circumstances, intimidate young chambermaids.

Living in the country is even better than it used to be. Lots of new comforts have been added—as you'll soon see when you visit The Meadows in Hingham.

This fine group of attached single family homes offers the spaciousness and fine construction of yesteryear with conveniences grandma never even contemplated. There are kitchens with sunny breakfast bays . . . lots of fireplaces . . . vaulted and tray ceilings . . . large private courtyards . . . 2-car garages . . . swimming pool, whirlpool, tennis courts and a clubhouse. The location, on wildflower-strewn meadows in the lovely town of Hingham, is idyllic.

Two and three bedroom homes range from $155,000 to $210,000 during our opening period. The furnished models are open every day from 9 to 5. Take Exit 14 from Route 3 and follow Route 228 toward Hingham four miles, turn right on Free Street one mile to our entrance. Call (617) 740-1500 for an appointment.

The selectmen's race heats up . . .

Frank England . . .

tion before putting an item on the agenda which can't be decided because of too many missing pieces."

England said in his press release that selectmen do function on many complicated levels of town government. "However," he said, "I don't think we have to reinvent the wheel in Cohasset. We're not unique. Other towns have had our experiences and I'm not afraid or unwilling to call selectmen from other towns to ask how they handled a particular issue. I'm prepared to do my own research."

Regarding the utilization of town counsel, England said, "There's been a long-standing rumor floating around town which in essence claims, 'In Cohasset, town counsel is town government.' "

"I feel selectmen for too long have run to town counsel for bits and pieces of advice, before they have personally done any research into a particular area. That puts town counsel in the uncomfortable position of making decisions for the selectmen, decisions the board should be making itself."

England added, "In my own line of business, I continually advise contractors not to send their attorneys to address a town board or committee. 'Go yourself, because you are your own best negotiator and intermediaries can cloud the issue.' Most situations do not require an attorney, they require common sense and good communciations. Selectmen should use the town counsel as a legal advisor, not as a decision maker."

On delegation of duties, England says, "In the '80s, selectmen are going to find it necessary to give up their day-to-day powers in order to reserve time and energy towards making good policy."

On other boards and committees, "In times of crisis, selectmen should provide a steadying hand on the wheel," England said. "For instance, last year when the assessors got in trouble, the selectmen should have stepped in and offered assistance as well as guidance. More importantly, they should have been on the spot before the trouble began, and should have been instrumental in helping the assessors to avoid it."

England added, "Citizens expect leadership to emanate from the selectmen's office. Selectmen should look ahead and approach town affairs from the long-range, as well as from the day-to-day point of view. As administrators they must be able to anticipate trouble and plan to forestall crises."

In towns without charters, selectmen are the financial heads of the town, England said. "Their signatures must appear on every warrant, every contract, every financial paper; consequently, that makes it very important for selectmen to know exactly what they're signing."

England views the town meeting warrant as an important responsibility of the board of selectmen. "It's their warrant. They should be knowledgable of every article in the warrant and be able to make intelligent, well-researched recommendations on every article that goes before voters."

England said he also sees an important function of the selectmen as being lobbyists on Beacon Hill, through the selectmen's Massachusetts Municipal Association and through in-person appearances at various hearings.

"Action taken by state government can and does have as much and perhaps even more impact on local tax rates than do the actions of the selectmen, finance committees or town meetings combined," England said. "We must become recognized and known town officials on Beacon Hill. We can no longer afford to find out about the effect a bill will have 'after' it has passed."

As a former Cohasset school committee member (two terms), England feels his committee experience and experience as chairman of that committee will be an important asset to the newly-constituted five-member board of selectmen.

England is a graduate of Syracuse University with a BS degree. He is a veteran of the United States Army.

John DeBassio . . .

were established within the community."

DeBassio added that many of the reasons which prompted him to resign the office of police chief are also the reasons which prompted his candidacy for selectman.

"Specifically, a number of personal and ethical considerations come into mind," he said, adding that he would further elaborate on those issues during his campaign for election.

He said he has a vested interest in the continued "reorganization and the progress of the police department as both a resident of the community and the former chief of the department.

"Good programs and police policy should not change because of a change in departmental leadership," DeBassio said. "Selectmen must negotiate all of their contracts in good faith. In my particular case, the board was reluctant to fulfill its commitment or recognize the importance of the recruitment issue.

"In choosing to recruit on the basis of their own personal and vested interest, they effectively passed over my administrative recommendations, creating a situation in which I could not function ethically."

DeBassio added, "Under the terms of my employment contract I was responsible for the reorganization of the police department and was led to believe, and fully expected, that I would receive the cooperation and support of the board. It was not forthcoming."

DeBassio said his election to office "would allow me the opportunity to complete, in a larger and more public measure, the programs which were undertaken and presently remain incomplete, within the police department."

As a selectman, he would support meaningful changes in collective bargaining procedures for police and other town departments; law enforcement training and requirements; the adoption of written operational policies and procedures for both police and fire departments; the upgrading of recruiting standards; and a realistic salary schedule for all public employees.

While Cohasset police chief, DeBassio created and then implemented a town-wide licensing procedure program; and also created a policy manual for the police department which the selectmen reviewed last spring, but did not implement.

DeBassio, who resides on Norfolk Road with his wife, Ginny, is director of corporate security at Foxboro Company. He supervises security at 15 local plants and nine national plants, as well as 100 sales and service centers and training schools throughout the country. His family and his employer are supportive of his candidacy.

DeBassio has credits towards a master's degree in criminal science. He is a graduate of the F.B.I. National Academy in Quantico, Virginia. He has served as an instructor of criminal law at Massasoit Community College, Stonehill College and Northeastern University.

During his 18 years with the Brockton Police Department he served as commander of the drug unit and anti-crime unit. For two years he served as administrative assistant to the Brockton Police Chief.

While DeBassio said he would not preclude running for a three-year term in 1984, he feels a one-year term would allow him to accomplish some firm policy, while educating peers on the board with regard to the civil service process, recruiting policies and town bylaws.

Clifford Mitman . . .

how town departments operate," Mitman says. "As Selectman, I would encourage the same sort of participation and openness that has characterized the Personnel Committee in its dealings with employees."

A native of Pennsylvania, Mitman graduated from Mercersburg Academy; he has a Bachelor's degree from Yale University and an MBA in Finance from the University of Pennsylvania's Wharton School. He served for three years in the U.S. Navy.

He is presently vice president of Powers, Perrin, Forster and Crosby, international consultants to management, where he is a specialist in the areas of employee compensation, personnel policies and organization. His business experience in dealing with diverse groups of people — managers and employees — would, Mitman feels, be valuable in the job of selectman.

A resident of Cohasset for 14 years, Mitman has been Finance Chairman for the First Parish Church, and has been a coach of youth hockey, soccer, baseball and street hockey. He and his wife, Mildred, live at 118 Beach Street. They have three children: Doug, a student at Dartmouth College and Jennie and Amy, who both attend Cohasset schools.

from the kitchen

Whether 10 below, or 90 in the shade, it was a mere 60 years ago that the kitchen range was kept going day and night. Nursing it along with wood or coal was a must if you wanted hot water, or the evening meal. Then along came the gas stove and wives must have felt quite giddy when they could slip a roast in the oven and leave the kitchen behind. The kettle bubbling on the range was replaced by quickly prepared meals such as steaks and chops, but even so, baking was still something of a challenge. The cookbooks of that era gave no directions for preparation of the recipes and oven heat and cooking time were seldom mentioned. Reading through some of the old cookbooks from Martha Cooke's collection gives a fascinating glimpse of life at the turn of the century. "The Appetizer" published in Milford in 1893, called for pantry shelves stocked with Bloater paste, Maltex for muffins, Indian meal for corn cakes and champion crax, ingredients foreign to our supermarkets. Recipes few of us have ever come across were for Cusk (with codfish), Higdum (a relish), Cracker Pudding, Fuller Pudding, Hog Pudding, Judge Peter's Pudding, Circassian Pudding, Bird's Nest Pudding and Dicolominie Cake, stewed kidneys and, horrors of horrors, Calf's Head Soup. But, for a good old-fashioned dish on a cold winter's night, here is

BAKED BEAN SOUP

2 c. cold baked beans
2 pints water
2 slices onions
2 stalks celery
½ c. stewed and strained tomatoes
1 T butter
1 T flour
1 T chili sauce, pepper, salt and sugar

Put beans, water, onion and celery in saucepan. Bring to boiling point and simmer 30 min. Rub through a sieve and add tomatoes and chili sauce. Season to taste and bind with the butter and flour cooked together.

I suppose a hundred years from now, anyone reading today's ads will think all we do is sit around in slinky evening gowns, sipping wine by candlelight. In 1893, Mrs. R.T. Gardiner, a milliner in Milford had a full line of choice and seasonable millinery, with trimmed goods and mourning a speciality, while Mrs. Manheim, who termed herself the "leading milliner of Milford," suggested "before ordering your bonnet, call and see our goods and get prices." The druggists in that town, offered Morse's Dyspepsia Cure for "After Eating Tough Pastry." G.T. Fales & Co. of Main St. claimed distinction for their being headquarters for "Corsets and Underwear, Fur Capes," while another Main St. store, Solon S. Cook, offered the cook "Kettle-Tried Lard, Home-Made Sausages and Hams." Christmas Handkerchiefs were for sale at W.B. Whitings and M.F. Green's had for sale 14 styles of Old Ladies' Capes and Shawls, 17 styles for Middle Aged Ladies Capes and Goat Boots for $2. Here is an old recipe for

CLAM CHOWDER

1 qt. clams
2 qts. quahogs
1 large onion
2 T butter
1 pint cream
1 qt. milk
2 c. potatoes
Pepper, salt and Worcestershire Sauce to taste.

Chop onion and fry in butter until brown. Drain and reserve liquor. Put potatoes in liquor and boil until soft. Chop clams and quahogs and put them in. Steam for 5 min. Boil milk and add all together. Last add cream. Do not boil after cream has been added.

Useful hints advised: "Hold a hot shovel over furniture to remove white spots,"..."Never leave the cover off the tea canister"..."Take a bucket of fresh water into your bedroom every night and let it remain uncovered. It will absorb all poisonous gases."..."It is well to keep large pieces of charcoal in damp corners and dark places." They were really enthusiastic about puddings in those days; I suppose because the oven was always going and so they could bake desserts such as this

The Recreation Report

DOG OBEDIENCE TRAINING

The Cohasset Recreation Department is currently accepting telephone registrations for two eight-week dog obedience training programs scheduled to begin on Wednesday, Feb. 9.

The purpose of the first class will be to teach novice and pet owners basic obedience and responsible pet ownership. Subjects to be covered will include proper use of voice, corrections and commands.

Helpful hints on dog ownership and responsibility will also be included. The obedience will include those exercises beneficial to the pet owner as well as those thinking about eventually showing their dog.

An 8 p.m. advanced class will be for those dogs who have had prior training.

Owners are required to bring their dogs equipped with a humane choke chain. The proper size of the chain is determined by measuring the dog's neck and adding four inches. Absolutely no spike collars will be allowed. It is also strongly suggested that handlers wear comfortable shoes and clothes for these sessions.

The classes will have a graduation "fun match" and ceremony to demonstrate their newly acquired skills at the end of the session.

Laurie Ann Goodrich will instruct the course in Basic Canine Obedience. She has handled dogs in each group as well as rare breeds and has been an assistant trainer at Wilder's Dog Training School in Scituate since 1976. She is Certified Obedience Instructor in Canine Obedience at the beginning and advanced levels through Newbury Junior College.

To register call the Recreation office at 383-6791. Class size will be limited and enrolled on a first call first registered basis. Non-residents will be enrolled as space allows.

SKATING

With cold weather and ice skating season approaching, the following should be used as a guideline for safe ice. Common sense is the most important denominator, however.

Ice safe for	0-30 degrees	30-40 degrees	40-50 degrees
Single skaters	1¾ inches	2¾ inches	6 inches
Couples	2¾ inches	3¾ inches	8 inches
Crowds	3¾ inches	4¾ inches	12 inches

These figures are for clear, fresh water ice only; for snow ice, add two inches; for water-logged ice, add three inches; if skates cut in — go home.

Salt water in mild climates is always treacherous — keep away from it. Also thickness in 40-50 degree column are safe depths for short periods of time only.

Do not throw debris on the ice to check for safety. This only clutters up the ice, making skating dangerous, and does not give you an accurate indication of ice strength.

Hockey is to be played only on the Spring Street side of the area. Goals should be placed at each end of the meadow so that you are skating parallel to Spring Street.

Keep away from the dam proper, the ice may be weak there. The rest of Elms Meadow is for ice skating. Lighting will be employed at Elms Meadow skating area as conditions warrant.

The deepest portion of Elms Meadow is towards the Spring Street Dam (about 12"-18"), the shallowest is towards the back of the area, 2" or so.

STUDENT AID.

It takes more than brains to go to college. It takes money. For tuition, room and board, and books.

The Army College Fund is designed to help you get that money for college while serving your country.

If you qualify, you can join the Army College Fund when you join the Army. For every dollar you put in, Uncle Sam puts in five. Or more.

So, after just two years in the Army, you can have up to $15,200 for college. After three years, up to $20,100.

To get your free copy of the Army College Fund booklet, call or visit your local Army Recruiter. It could be the most important book you've ever read.

Bottle Bill debut prompts complaints, higher prices

By Jane Lane

The Bottle Bill has been in effect for more than a week. Consumers seem to be confused about the details, but confident the new state law will produce its intended results.

However, some merchants say while the returnable bottles have been dribbling in, complaints about the price hikes have been arriving in large doses.

Liquor store owners in Cohasset and Scituate have a personal, one-to-one contact with their customers. They are the ones who listen to the complaints about the exorbitant price increases, and the protests about cleaning beer cans and bottles.

Peter Logan, owner of Cohasset Liquors said, "It makes you wonder who actually voted for the Bottle Bill. Everyone seems to deny they wanted it in the first place."

Logan said most of his customers this week have expressed surprise at the higher price of beer, and the necessity of storing and cleaning the containers.

"They don't seem as positive as they did before the Bottle Bill was approved," he said. The store owner said only two to three percent of the refundable containers have actually been returned to his store this week.

Logan said everyone who enters his store has commented on the price increases. But he has assured his customers it is not an arbitrary increase. The wholesalers have increased their prices, and the overall price to the consumer reflects the handling charge in addition to the deposit price.

The average case of beer will cost the consumer about $2 more than it did a week ago, he said.

Logan had to reorganize his store on Rte. 3A, but he anticipates running out of space when his inventory is larger in the summer.

"I don't know where I am going to store the bottles and cans. They take up a phenomenal amount of space. Right now it's not such a problem. But in the summer, when I sell more beer, I don't know where I am going to put the returned containers," Logan said.

The Cohasset merchant said he hoped the bill succeeds in reducing litter and solid waste, but he also wishes adjustments are added to the bill. Logan would like to see redemption centers established throughout the state so local merchants wouldn't have to squeeze individual storage areas within their cramped quarters.

Raymond Riddle, owner of the Riddle Convenient Marts in Scituate, Cohasset and Hingham, seemed to be a voice of calm and reason in the midst of calamity. He said it will simply take a while for consumers and merchants to become accustomed to the Bottle Bill.

Although there is a 20 to 25 percent price markup on returnable containers now, he predicts the price will decrease along with the initial confusion.

"The food and beverage industry is very competitive," he said. "I can see prices leveling off. The initial cost, especially to the big stores, was tremendous. They rebuilt back rooms to make space for storage. They built redemption counters.

"No one is going to make a big profit out of the costs right now. Competition will result in the prices leveling off. Free enterprise will keep all competitors honest and in line."

He said most of his customers have not been disturbed by the increase in soda prices, but they are complaining about the inflation in the cost of a six pack.

"Also, a lot of people didn't seem to realize that the Police chief interviews continue

By Jane Lane

Selectmen are scheduled to name a new police chief in two weeks.

In the meantime, they will finish interviews for the position Tuesday, Jan. 25.

Selectmen have interviewed six candidates for police chief, including three Cohasset officers who applied for the administrative position.

Acting Chief Joseph Kealey, Lt. Charles Stockbridge and Sgt. Richard Barrow, were among the final candidates interviewed last week by selectmen.

Joseph N. Connors and William R. Stone were scheduled to be interviewed Tuesday night. Stone is a former officer in Scituate and is currently chief of a Maine police department.

ACTING CHIEF JOSEPH KEALEY

Kealey was the first candidate to be interviewed last week. A 17-year veteran of the department, the 48 year-old sergeant was appointed acting chief four months ago when Chief John DeBassio announced his resignation.

Before he was made temporary chief, Kealey served as supervisor of the day shift. His ultimate career goal, he told selectmen, was to be named permanent police chief.

When asked by selectmen chairman Henry Ainslie whether the Marshfield resident would consider moving to the town if appointed chief, Kealey said no.

Because he has children in college, he would be hesitant to disrupt their lives to move to another community.

Financially, he could not afford to relocate to Cohasset, because of the high college tuition costs, he added. "My family's education is first and foremost," Kealey said.

The acting chief said it takes him approximately eight minutes to commute from his home to the police station.

The acting chief said he believes in a direct, open-minded and realistic approach to management of the police department. He said open communications between his employees, various town officials, and the community would result in "good working conditions."

Kealey said if both the police chief and selectmen approach each other in a direct and open manner, he could not foresee problems which could not be solved.

The major problem with the department now, he said, is that the force "is down" two men. Because

Mariner's Derr wins top photo award

Mariner Photographer Greg Derr has been named Photographer of the Year by the New England Press Association.

The award was given in the Association's Weekly Division.

The award was made based on Derr's 12 entries to the annual NEPA photography contest for weekly newspapers. Two of his entries took first place. One was for spot news, spontaneous events, and is the photo of Firefighter Clifton Woodard when he rescued the pony "Lightning" from the Green Harbor River last April.

Another first place winner, for feature photography, was his shot of John (Jack) Flagg Jr. silhouetted inside his hot air balloon, "The Flaggship."

Derr also captured two third place awards, one (pictorial) of a cross country skiier at World's End in Hingham and one of former Celtic Dave Cowens with his daughter in the general news division.

Greg Derr is a 1979 graduate of MHS. And the day he graduated he became the Mariner's fulltime photographer. He had started 'shooting' for the paper on a part time basis in April, 1978.

He began taking pictures when he was a junior high school student. His father, longtime employe at the Boston Globe, sometimes took his son to work with him and Derr met Dan Sheehan, a Globe photographer. Sheehan served then and now as consultant for Derr's burgeoning interest in photography.

By the time he was 15 Greg had earned enough money from his work as a golf caddy to build a small darkroom in his house. And that was the year his first front page photo appeared in our newspaper. It was the Patriot Ledger that ran the photo of evacuees at the Grace Ryder School, residents who were fleeing an oncoming hurricane.

Derr uses a 35 milimeter Nikon. But he credits his Meeting over a chimney fire

By Patricia Anne Walsh

Former Sewer Commissioner Janet Daggett met new Fire Chief Martin Dooley the hard way last week as three neighbors, Dooley and firefighters helped save her home from a chimney fire.

Neighbors assisted John and Janet Daggett of 80 Summer Street when one of their two chimneys burst into flames Wednesday, Jan. 19, the coldest morning of the winter.

When Manuel Salvador of Elm Court, spotted flames coming from Daggett's chimney at 6:59 a.m., he immediately rang the alarm from the fire box. Salvador is the chief operator of the sewer plant on Elm Street and a local lobsterman.

Peter Wood of 77 Summer Street, a real estate broker, was out jogging and also spotted the fire bursting from the chimney. Salvador said he told Wood to go in and alert the family, while he remained outside to direct the fire department to the location.

Daggett said Wood arrived at the door just as the Box 23 fire alarm started ringing. She remembered Box 23 is the alarm for Border and Summer Streets and was waiting for one more number to identify the exact location.

"You do know it's your house, don't you?" asked Wood. Daggett did not know the blaze was from the roofline to the top of her chimney.

Just then the new fire chief, Dooley, who recently moved from out-of-state to 60 Summer Street, came in through the door. "This is a heck of a way to meet a new neighbor," Daggett said.

Daggett says she has nothing but praise for the fire department which was "extremely efficient" in putting out the fire in the chimney serviced by their wood stove. She plans to have the chimney checked for cracks, and to install a liner. In the meantime the house is heated by oil.

Salvador said it was fortunate the fire occurred in early morning daylight. If it had happened after midnight, it might not have been spotted, he said, until it was too late.

Deer Hill drama program

Kornet praised the involvment of the PSO in the Deer Hill drama program, which she said the students are enjoying.

The residency program is also taking place in the Joseph Osgood School.

Facilities Committee meets

Committee member Joseph Nedrow presented a proposed letter requesting the School Facilities Committee meet with the School Committee to prepare an article for town meeting for school maintenance funds.

Member John Langmaid suggested a joint meeting on Jan. 24 or 31.

Studds relocates office

U.S. Congressman Gerry Studds, Democrat, has announced the relocation of his South Shore Congressional office. The new office is located at 193 Rockland St. (Rte. 139), Hanover 02339. The phone number is (617) 826-3866.

Heading the new office will be Alexander See, who has served as Studds' South Shore regional representative since 1973. Assisting him will be caseworkers Stephanie Toomey and Donna Harrison.

Revolving funds tuition

School Superintendent Crowell wants permission from the school committee to sponsor an article in the April town meeting warrant that would permit a revolving fund for tuitions from students who live in other towns attending Cohasset schools. Presently such income goes to the town treasury.

England election committee

George McCullough of 43 Pond Street and George Rabstenjek of 181 Border Street have been appointed Co-Chairmen of the "Committee to Elect Frank England" to a three-year term on the Cohasset Board of Selectmen.

McCullough and Rabstenjek will be assisted in their efforts by Clark Chatterton and Raymond Kasperowicz, who will serve as Treasurer.

Jill O'Donnell of Pleasant Street will serve as coffee hour chairman; Doris Golden will directly assist England with publicity and serve as media liaison; Patricia Walsh is in charge of mailings, assisted by Christine Collins. Julie Guild is in charge of nomination papers.

Persons wishing to participate in the England campaign should call any of the committee members listed.

Presentation to Irene Brown

Chairman Diana Kornet presented a placque to former school committee member Irene Brown, who served for five years and was chairman last year. Kornet said the students would miss her interest in athletics.

ConCom actions

The Conservation Commission is expected to draft an order of conditions for Alco Oil to fill portions of wetland property on Chief Justice Cushing Highway.

Alco Oil plans to construct a two-story office building and parking area. Commission Chairman Bob Maki said the commission does not anticipate any problems because there is another area of land available to compensate for the wetland area.

The commission's own engineer is studying the plan and an order of condition should be completed within 14 days.

In another matter, an 18 unit cluster condominium project is expected to be reheard at another commission hearing soon. This is the Cedar Ledge development off Cedar Street abutting the landfill. The commission first heard the project proposed by C & L Realty Trust of Cohasset Dec. 6 but continued the hearing until more information was provided for the following concerns. These are leachate draining into storm water rent retention area; windblown rubbish and debris and flood plain levels. Maki said the flood plain is no longer a concern and said the other two concerns should be addressed at the next hearing.

The commission is expected to rehear a proposal by John Dwyer of Atlantic Avenue to construct a new dwelling on Hobart Lane. The commission must examine a septic system plan which is proposed to be located on a coastal bank of knoll. Maki said the knoll could be destroyed by wave action and has asked Perkins Engineering, the applicant's engineer, to return with more wave runoff calculations, especially those caused by a 100-year worst case storm. This hearing is scheduled for Feb. 7.

Unemployment rate

Cohasset's unemployment rate for November was 2.6 percent, down 1.3 percent from the 3.9 rate for June of 1982. The rate is approximately equal to the 2.7 rate for November of 1981. Cohasset's work force is faring much better than the state rate of 7.2 percent and 10.8 percent for the nation.

Tammaro ruled fit to stand trial

Dr. Marc Wolley has determined that John Tammaro is mentally competent to stand trial on charges of one count of murder and unlawfully carrying a gun in a motor vehicle.

Tammaro, a North End man, is accused of murdering 20-year old Leslie Ann Haynes, a Cohasset college youth. Tammaro pleaded innocent to both charges. Jan. 11, Dedham District Court ordered a preliminary examination to determine if Tammaro is mentally competent to stand trial. Asst. District Attorney Robert Banks said the examination determined Tammaro is competent to participate in pre-trial and trial proceedings. Tammaro has been given until Feb. 16 to prepare for the trial. A trial date is expected to be determined then.

On demotion case

Rhodes loses Civil Service appeal

Officer John Rhodes III, who was demoted in July from sergeant to patrolman after selectmen found him guilty of neglect of duty and conduct unbecoming an officer, lost his appeal to the state Civil Service Commission.

The commission's decision was made last month, but selectmen waited a month before releasing the information. During that time, Officer Rhodes could have filed a motion to appeal the decision. But since he did not respond, the decision became final Jan. 15.

In July, selectmen found Rhodes, 37, guilty of contributing to the waywardness of a 15 year-old girl. Evidence was shown to selectmen that from April, 1981, until March 19, 1982, an intimate relationship developed between the pair.

During the July closed-door hearing before selectmen, the girl's mother claimed Rhodes had a relationship with her daughter for about a year.

As a result of the hearing, selectmen voted to demote the 16-year police veteran, which included a $2,000 pay reduction.

The patrolman was also ordered to undergo immediate psychological counseling at his own expense, if he was to continue as a Cohasset police officer.

Selectmen Henry Ainslie said it was his understanding that Rhodes had not begun the counseling sessions and that the patrolman felt the town would pay for his treatments.

The selectman said now that the decision and appeal have been finalized, Rhodes must immediately begin therapy at his own expense.

Selectmen asked Executive Secretary Mark Lanza to check with Acting Chief Joseph Kealey to ensure that Rhodes seeks counseling.

Selectmen also said they will appoint a new sergeant to the force from the Civil Service list this week.

Police chief interviews continue...

the department is lacking a full complement of officers, it results in extensive and expensive overtime costs to the town, he added. He would like to add two more officers to the department.

Kealey also noted that the department is comprised of many men under 40 years, which he considered a favorable factor. "It is a young department with long careers ahead of them," he said.

LT. CHARLES STOCKBRIDGE

Lt. Stockbridge has been with the department for 28 years. Although he had given up his career goal of becoming chief last year when DeBassio was appointed, his hope was ignited once again when the chief quit the position this year.

Stockbridge sold his home, but is currently renting a house in town.

He will remain in Cohasset if named chief, but will opt for retirement if he is rejected this time. He had said he will move to Florida if his career goal is not achieved.

Although selectman Mary Jane McArthur noticed a discrepancy in his resume and application form, Stockbridge explained that he graduated from high school in 1959 after passing an equivalency examination. He did not graduate from Brighton High School in 1946, as he stated in the application. He went into the service before graduation, and many years later studied and passed the high school exam.

That explanation was detailed in his longer resume form, he said.

Although Stockbridge explained he has been largely "self-taught" throughout his police career, he could compete with any college-educated officer in competitive exams.

He was one of the three top scorers in the competitive civil service examination for police chief when former Chief Randolph Feola was appointed.

He said during the 1978 blizzard, he supervised the department while Chief Feola was vacationing in Florida.

As a longtime adminstrator, Lt. Stockbridge said that he always deserved and received the respect of his fellow officers. "I have never had any problems with my officers and expect them to live up to the guidelines," he said.

Lt. Stockbridge said it was imperative a permanent police chief be appointed soon so the officers will have some type of stable leadership. He said the department is operating smoothly now, but the men need a permanent chief to work with, "not someone who will work for a few months and leave," he said.

Lt. Stockbridge, who said he has never had problems with any selectmen throughout his career in Cohasset, said the primary duty of the police department is to provide a community service and to assist the residents.

He said there is now "a lot of harmony between the police department and the people of Cohasset," and added the department must continue to work with students to develop a good rapport with the town's youth.

He concluded his interview by saying selectmen should appoint a police chief from within the ranks of the local department. By naming an "outsider" to the post, they ruin the incentive of the Cohasset officers whose greatest career goal is to obtain the chief's badge, he said.

He said there are a number of qualified men from within the local department who would make a good chief.

The transition would not be a major hurdle, because a local officer would alreay know the men within the department and the people of the community.

He said it was a mistake to take the chief's position from the competitive ranks of civil service. "There is not a lot of incentive for a young officer to study to improve himself when he can't take an exam for chief," he told selectmen.

SGT. RICHARD BARROW

Barrow, a 33-year veteran of the department, was interviewed next by selectmen. If the budget would allow it, Barrow would like to see more police foot patrols in town, especially in the business districts. This "stop, talk and walk" procedure is practiced in Scituate and Norwell, he said, and would help the department develop a better rapport with the residents of the community.

If this policy was adopted, he said, the local police would be more aware of the community's problems and the residents would know what to expect from the police.

Barrow said he would have no problems transfering from sergeant to police chief. He said all the present officers in the department have worked under his direction at some point.

Barrow said he would like the new detective to have a plain police car. It could be shared by the court prosecutor during the day, and the detective assigned to a night shift, Barrow suggested. He also said the department needed a clerk to handle the extensive typing, expecially during long criminal cases such as the recent murder, Barrow said.

CHARLES MAYO

Selectmen next interviewed Charles Mayo, a 35 year-old sergeant in the Northboro Police Department. Mayo has a master's degree in criminal justice from Clark University and is president of the local sergeant's association.

Mayo said he believed a police chief should sit in on the police union's contract negotiations. Misunderstandings will occur unless the chief provides informational input into the discussions, he said. As president of the sergeant's union, he has experience in collective bargaining and negotiations during the past three years.

Mayo said the role of a police department is to serve the needs and desires of the community, and to instruct the residents on public safety through various programs. He has initiated such programs in Northboro.

Although his department is not under civil service jurisdiction, he is familiar with Civil Service because surrounding communities participate in it, he said. He said he would be agreeable to the $29,000 starting salary and he would be willing to sign a three-year contract and move to the community within six months of appointment.

DANIEL MANNING

Daniel Manning is a 33 year-old chief of the 12-man Sherborn Police Department. That force includes eight fulltime officers and four fulltime dispatchers and a number of parttime employees, he said.

He was previously employed as an assistant to the chief of the Framingham Police Department which employs 120 officers. In Framingham, Manning served as an intermediary between the chief and the officers. He was an officer in the Framingham force for 10 years before becoming chief in Sherborn 18 months ago.

As an officer in Framingham, and later as assistant to the chief, Manning has been involved in negotiations "on both sides of the table." He believes the chief should be actively involved in contract negotiations and should make his opinions known.

Manning, who developed a comprehensive "officer survival" training program in Framingham, said continual training for officers is imperative in all police departments. The key to developing a police officer is to teach the probationary man "police discretion," but he added that training should continue for all officers throughout their careers.

He said a police department must be service-oriented, and the local department must create some form of crime prevention effort, as well as serve a role in the safety education of the community.

As the new chief in Sherborn, and manager of the department's budget, Manning said he returned $11,000 to the town's coffers because he reduced overtime expenditures. He said the police chief must serve as "watch dog of the budget."

Because he has two school-aged children, if appointed he would rather relocate to a neighboring community, rather than Cohasset where he would serve as chief.

RICHARD HURLEY

The last candidate to be interviewed last week was Richard Hurley, a sergeant in the Westwood Police Department. The 41 year-old sergeant said he has worked with police budget, as well as being in charge of the maintenance of the police station, equipment and cruisers. He presented a $100,000 police budget for the town's approval last year, he said.

As manager of a police department, he favored assigning disciplined officers to work details rather than suspending them from the department.

Suspensions are more costly to the officer, the department and the community, he added.

He said he believed in strong rules and regulations, and it was imperative that management follow such guidelines "to a T" for the good of the department's morale. He said he had a limited knowledge of collective bargaining but he believed the chief should be aware of what is "going on" during a contract negotiations. The chief should use it as a tool to his advantage while operating the department.

The police department should be very active within the community, Hurley said, and should sponsor such youth activities as the Explorers Club in elementary schools.

There may be a potential stumbling block, selectman Ainslie noted, because Hurley currently receives an annual pay of $31,391 including overtime. That is larger than the starting salary of the Cohasset police chief, he noted.

Hurley said he did not see salary as a problem. He was concerned with the length of the proposed three-year contract. Hurley said he would like to have the option of a renewable contract.

He said the Westwood chief would allow him to take a six-month leave of absence. Cohasset selectmen could evaluate his performance and if agreeable, could extend his contract for more than three years. "I don't like to jump around. I've been at Westwood for 14 years," Hurley said. He said he would relocate to Cohasset if appointed chief.

Johansen on DeBassio team

Frederick Johansen of 20 King Street has been named Treasurer of the "Committee to Elect John DeBassio" to a one-year term on the Cohasset Board of Selectmen.

Tony Fasciano and A.J. Antoine are in charge of nomination papers; Marie Plante and Ginny Abbadessa will coordinate coffee hours and other speaking engagements.

Doris Golden and Yvette Rattenbury will organize campaign mailings; Tanna Kasperowicz will assist DeBassio with publicity and media.

Bottle Bill debut prompts complaints, higher prices...

Bottle Bill includes plastic two liter bottles, not just glass and cans," he added.

Riddle praised the local store owners and managers for initiating good consumer programs to educate the public about the new law.

"They have put up signs clearly explaining the law. They are saying things like, 'We'd appreciate clean bottles and cans.' They are not screaming, 'You voted fot it, now you're stuck with it.' No one is getting nasty at the consumer, after all they are our customers," Riddle said.

Returnable containers have been trickling into the four Riddle stores, he said. In fact, his son picked up eight returnable container bottles in the Scituate store's lot on Saturday.

"I still think a lot of people are going to throw away the containers. They'll figure it's not worth the trouble to store and clean them just for a nickel or a dime," he said.

Both Angelo's in Scituate Harbor, and Stop and Shop in Cohasset, have published information flyers explaining the store's policy regarding bottle and can refunds.

Store managers in both supermarkets said returns have been very slow this week, but estimated the volume would increase as more people become adjusted to the new law.

Stop and Shop recently constructed a new counter in the front of the store where consumers take their refundable containers. A cashier examines all cans and bottles before accepting them. A register receipt, called a bottle refund slip, is given to the customer for all returned items.

The customer may then redeem the slip at the checkout counter or at the customer service desk.

In the flyer, it is clearly stated the price marked on the soda containers does not include the five or ten cent deposit price. The marked price is simply the unit price of the merchandise. The deposit cost will be added later by the cashier who checks the item out at the cash register.

One Cohasset resident who brought several cans back this week to the store, said she did not view the Bottle Bill as a nuisance.

She said her three children drink a lot of soda each week, but added they will probably drink more in anticipation of receiving more money from deposits.

"I think the bill was a good idea. We are just going to have to learn to keep a spot in the garage for all the cans. Actually, that is something I never thought about before I voted for the Bottle Bill," she said.

Ann Callis, of Scituate, said her nine-member family consumes about six to seven two-liter containers of soda per week. She said the family did not mind cleaning and storing the bottles and cans.

But as a grocery store employee, she said it's been a "pain" for store clerks. Most consumers gripe to the cashier about the higher prices, and they don't realize what they have to do before they bring the containers back to the store, she said.

In Scituate, Angelo's has set up the redemption center at the store's Courtesy Booth.

It has taken no additional personnel or manhours to handle the refunds, the store manager said. Returns have been light, he said, but consumers have not expressed disatisfaction with the new system, he added.

One shopper, Eleanor Babb of Scituate, agreed the Bottle Bill "was probably a good thing" but has resulted in more of a nuisance than she had bargained for.

Luckily, she said, her five-member family does not consume much soda. But she still thought it was an added annoyance to have to clean and store the containers in her home.

Scituate resident Della Shepherd said her family will not be greatly affected by the Bottle Bill because they drink minimal amounts of soda. But the former Connecticut resident said she would willingly pay a higher price to help reduce litter. She said the Bottle Bill in her native state has been successful in eliminating much of the litter.

Scituate merchant Jack Turner remained adamantly against the state mandate. He said his customers at Turner's Package Store on Front Street have been "extremely unhappy" with the price increase caused by the enactment of the Bottle Bill.

"I've had to reorganize the whole store," he said. "Previously we were merchants. Now we're garbage collectors."

MARINER AWARD

The Marshfield Mariner also received a special award for its 10th anniversary issue of April 14, 1982. The Mariner now competes in the larger of the weekly divisions, those with more than 6000 circulation.

The anniversary supplement was the paper's largest single issue, and the one that marked the paper's first 10 years, from 1972 to 1982.

Also winning was a sister publication, the Scituate Mariner, which picked up an award for the editorial page in Class I weekly division.

A government public policy major, Ayer worked with Massachusetts state legislators.

The January Program of Independent Study, pioneered at Colby in 1962, enables students to concentrate during the month on one area of interest without the competing demands of the orthodox curriculum.

A graduate of Cohasset High School, Ayer is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Ayer of Bayberry Lane.

☐Ruth McGinnis was honored and awarded for celebrating 10 years of successful real estate brokerage with Dwyer & Mullin ERA of Cohasset.

Complimenting Ruth for her many achievements over the years was the president and owner of the firm, Bob Mullin. Her attention to and expertise in listing and selling with progressive tax concerns has given her many sales successes.

Besides real estate, Ruth finds time to be active and involved in community affairs and volunteer work at the Cohasset Consignment Shop and the South Shore Hospital admitting office and is also a Director of "Friends of the South Shore Hospital" and an active member of St. Anthony's Church. She lives on Windy Hill with her husband, Jim. They have six grown children and three grandchildren.

School Board weighs $65,000 in cuts at Deer Hill

By Donna Cogliano

It's budget time. And budget time leads to long hours of give and take — mostly take. At Monday's session of budget debate the school committee studied nearly $65,000 in reductions for the Deer Hill School alone.

It was estimated that Deer Hill spending will total $722,587 next year which is $37,000 more than this year's appropriation. Last week the committee focused on keeping the Osgood School open.

School board members and administrators expressed frustration, anger and outward crankiness Monday night in putting together an educationally sound budget for the third time since Prop. 2½ took effect.

"We have wrestled with this since September and have reached a type of frustration. We do feel it and I guess, I'm sorry if it shows through. We're cross," said School Supt. Eugene Crowell.

School committee member Richard Conley was disappointed that no one from the advisory committee attended the Monday night's meeting. Conley said he had some questions that he thought an advisory board member could answer.

The proposed 1983/1984 Deer Hill School budget includes the loss of two teachers and a half-time aide. Crowell outlined eight areas of reduction possibilities for the committee's consideration.

Crowell suggested three custodian positions shared between the Osgood and Deer Hill Schools be reduced to two jobs. At the close of the meeting, the committee met in executive session until midnight to discuss contractual custodial negotiations.

Other suggested cuts by Crowell were: $200 in general art supplies; $200 in library rebinding; and general books and supplies could be reduced by $1,500. Deer Hill School Principal Kenneth Ekberg reported that book rebinding work will be done in the school's own library.

School Committee member John Langmaid III said the school administration and one elementary school building were under-utilized. "I certainly wouldn't want to close the Osgood School," he said.

Langmaid suggested the third graders move to the Deer Hill School to join grades 4-6. The Osgood school currently houses kindergarten and grades 1-3.

If the third grade were moved to Deer Hill, Langmaid spoke of the possibilities of closing down the rear wing of the Osgood School or leasing it out. he also mentioned putting the Osgood School principal in a half-day teaching situation. "I really think that is the kind of thing the administration should be looking at," said Langmaid. "It will save us money and enhance the education. I would like to see the administration take a look at these kinds of things to see if it can constribute to solving our financial problems."

Crowell said the administration would work to respond to Langmaid's idea at the next budget session if possible.

School committeeman Joseph Nedrow asked Crowell to investigate the certification flexibility of teachers at different school grade levels.

While discussion centered mostly around reductions School Board Member Martha Gjesteby asked Ekberg what program additions he would have requested if more funding was available.

Ekberg was quick to respond. First on his list would be employment of a guidance counselor/social worker to assist children from single parent families. Separations, divorce or the loss of a family member are common occurences in the town, over the past years, he said. "I find myself incapable of solving problems and there is the need for a trained person."

Ekberg would also like to see expansion of computer hardware, law economic education offered and further enrichment programs.

Langmaid opposed the annual purchase of workbooks for the elementary grades. He argued that "It's more sound to use textbooks rather than workbooks," he said. Textbooks teach children to write better, Langmaid argued, because children have to do more of it. Workbooks lead to the deterioration of work habits, he said.

Ekberg said workbooks result in better grading, legibility and efficiency and is far better than writing and copying assignments off the blackboard. Crowell said teachers get as much mileage as possible by making copies of workbook pages.

The cost of workbooks average between $4 and $5.

The school committee will meet next Monday at the Jr./Sr. High school, 8 p.m. for round three of the budget discussions.

Loitering kids prompts meeting with merchants

Selectmen will schedule a meeting with several South Main Street business owners and police to discuss the continual disturbance caused by teenagers in Cohasset Village.

A number of merchants signed a petition last summer, asking that selectmen and police attempt to stop the "constant disturbance" caused mainly at night by large groups of youth who loiter in the business district.

According to a letter submitted to selectmen last week requesting the meeting, the youths have been gathering along the business area for many years. This summer, many youths loitered in the area, specifically near the Texaco station where the telephone booth is located, one store owner said.

The letter specified that numerous youths have been drinking in public, damaging fences at the Texaco station and the adjacent building, throwing bottles and trash over the business area, speeding in cars, making loud and disturbing noises especially at night, parking cars in the driveway and causing constant vandalism problems in the area.

The store owners said the youths create "an appearance of a gang at the location; they create an unpleasant appearance to residents and shoppers."

One store owner said many of the elderly residents who live in the Cohasset Village apartments are angered by the gangs of youths who congregate in the area.

"The kids pull into the area near the Texaco station, and most of the time they're pretty noisy," one store owner said.

"They start to play there, and there have been broken windows along the area. Sometimes the kids are drinking, and they get out of control. It's been going on for years, but it has gotten worse recently. It's just a certain minority of the population who come down here and cause problems."

A copy of the petitioners' letter was sent to Acting Police Chief Joseph Kealey. Selectmen were going to schedule a meeting with the merchants and police this week.

Pounder can't vote on Bread Shop request

Newly appointed Sewer Commissioner Max Pounder will not be allowed to vote on his wife's application to bake cookies at the Bread Shop.

Last August a permit was issued by the boards of health and sewer for his wife, Sine Pounder, to open The Bread Shop at 11 Elm St.

The permit restricted The Bread Shop to bread making.

In the summer Mrs. Pounder came before the sewer commission and requested a permit which would allow a change in the use of the sewer system at the site which is now The Bread Shop.

The state determined in 1978 that no new sewer permits may be issued by the town because there were too many connections on the current system.

Thomas McMahon, director of the state Division of Water Pollution Control, issued a directive Jan. 13, 1980 that said "While our existing sewer connection and extension permit regulations exempt existing sewer connections, any increase in flow of such connection is not exempt and must be subject of an application to this Division." This caution to the town was relative to the Jan. 3, 1978 sewer ban enforced by the state.

The commission, which then included Gwinn, Janet Daggett and Gerard Stanton, okayed the permit change, saying the baking of bread would have not had a great impact on the sewer system.

In October, Mrs. Pounder requested another change in the permit which had been issued that summer. She told the commission she would like to bake cookies at the shop. The materials used to make the cookies have a more extreme impact on sewer systems, Gwinn explained.

The commission granted the alteration of the conditions of the permit, saying the volume of cookies baked at the site would have minimal effect on the system.

Although the commission approved the change in the permit, the members did not sign the official document. Gwinn said the commission will sign the change in permit this week. Pounder will be unable to sign the permit because of conflict of interest, Gwinn added.

Editorial

True citizenship

The expansion of the board of selectmen from three to five assures that 1983 will be no ordinary political year in Cohasset. Residents who may secretly have harbored notions of office are likely to view the two open seats as a "now or never" opportunity to nourish their notions.

Good campaigns can be fun both to watch and participate in, and most of the good campaigns in recent years have come at the local level, not at the state and national levels, where there has been sickening surfeit of money, television and bad taste. But fun aside, the importance of the coming elections for selectmen and school committee is the future of Cohasset.

Voters will be electing 40 percent of the school committee and at this point, we note with regret that no election papers have been taken out for school committee candidates, and due to its enlargement, 60 percent of the board of selectmen. In our view, this non-recurring opportunity to elect so many members must be made the most of for the simple, unfortunate reason that too often in recent years, the quality of town government has not been the equal of the town itself.

Cohasset is a wonderful, beautiful place with a highly able and interesting population. But too often the government that represents the town has been unwise (as in the case of the board of selectmen and assessors), and it has squabbled (as in the case of the school committee).

With its natural and human assets, Cohasset ought to be the best-run town in the Commonwealth, bar none. As it is we're not even close to being the best; we are not in the top 50. Many towns are run with far less...how shall we say?... cacophony than Cohasset, and those better-run towns inevitably find their tax dollars going farther and producing more.

It is not part of the solution, it is part of the problem, if as residents, the best we can do is to make fun of town officials from the safe, uninvolved sanctuary of our living room. What is called for is a healthy dose of shame at living in a superb town that is governed less than superbly. What is then called for is a firm commitment to doing something about the situation in the coming election.

We by no means mean to imply that the incumbents who are up for re-election — Henry Ainslie, Diana Kornet or Jack Langmaid, for example — are the villains in this act. To the contrary, whereas a great many of us have taken to being carping critics in our "safe sanctuaries," these individuals have spent years in the unforgiving limelight, serving the town as best they can.

What we suggest isn't necessarily getting rid of these incumbents and it isn't necessarily keeping them. It is, rather, a widespread commitment on the part of residents to electing excellent candidates on April 9 — perhaps including some incumbents — and vigorously holding those same candidates to a high standard after they take office.

What we suggest requires that more "residents" become true citizens. Such "citizenship" is not an easy road, for with our complicated lives, it is far easier to be a "carping critic" than it is to be a persistent responsible citizen.

But each and every one of us is responsible for seeing that Cohasset's government matches the quality of the town.

Cut the budget! But where?

By Claire McDonough

Flora and Fauna stirred artificial sweetener into their cups of coffee.

"Taxes," Flora sighed, "are positively killing us. We have to force the town to cut back on expenses."

Fauna agreed. "This wild government spending has to stop. It's bad enough that every time we go to the supermarket the prices have gone up, without the town reaching into our pockets too."

"Do you think," I asked timidly, "that the town also has to pay more for what it buys?"

They looked at me with polite disbelief.

"Really," I persisted, "where do you want them to cut? In education?"

"Of course not!" Flora gasped. "Why, our children's education is our hope for the future."

"Then, sports?"

Fauna frowned. "I certainly hope not. If my Mike doesn't get a basketball scholarship, I don't see how he'll get into a good college."

"How about plowing and sanding?"

"Are you kidding?" Flora shuddered. "The street I live on is practically perpendicular. Joe has to get to work, doesn't he? Anyway, what if there should be an emergency?"

"Well then," I asked, "where would you cut? From conservation?"

"Certainly not," they agreed hastily.

"We must preserve our environment," Flora added piously.

"Then where?"

They looked at each other for a minute, then Flora brightened.

"From waste and corruption."

Fauna nodded in relieved agreement. "Of course. Where else, Silly?"

"Sure," I said. "But you still have to pinpoint it. For example, the selectmen spent five hours hearing budget proposals and recommendations Saturday morning. Where do you think they could have cut and didn't?"

There was a long silence.

"You did go to the hearing?" I asked.

"Well," Flora hedged, "I thought about it. But I had to shop in the afternoon and I had a Tupperware party that night. I needed the morning to wash my hair."

"Yes," Fauna added, "and anyway, I don't really understand all that gobblygook about bonded indebtedness and non-contributory pensions. It's all so boring."

"Maybe so," I admitted, "but it's at the hearings that the budgets get finalized. Do you think it's really fair to stiff them, then for you and your husbands to get up at town meeting and talk about waste and corruption? Shouldn't you make your feelings known at the hearings?"

"Not really," Fauna told me. "Fighting at town meeting isn't boring."

Nedrow replies to Mariner editorial

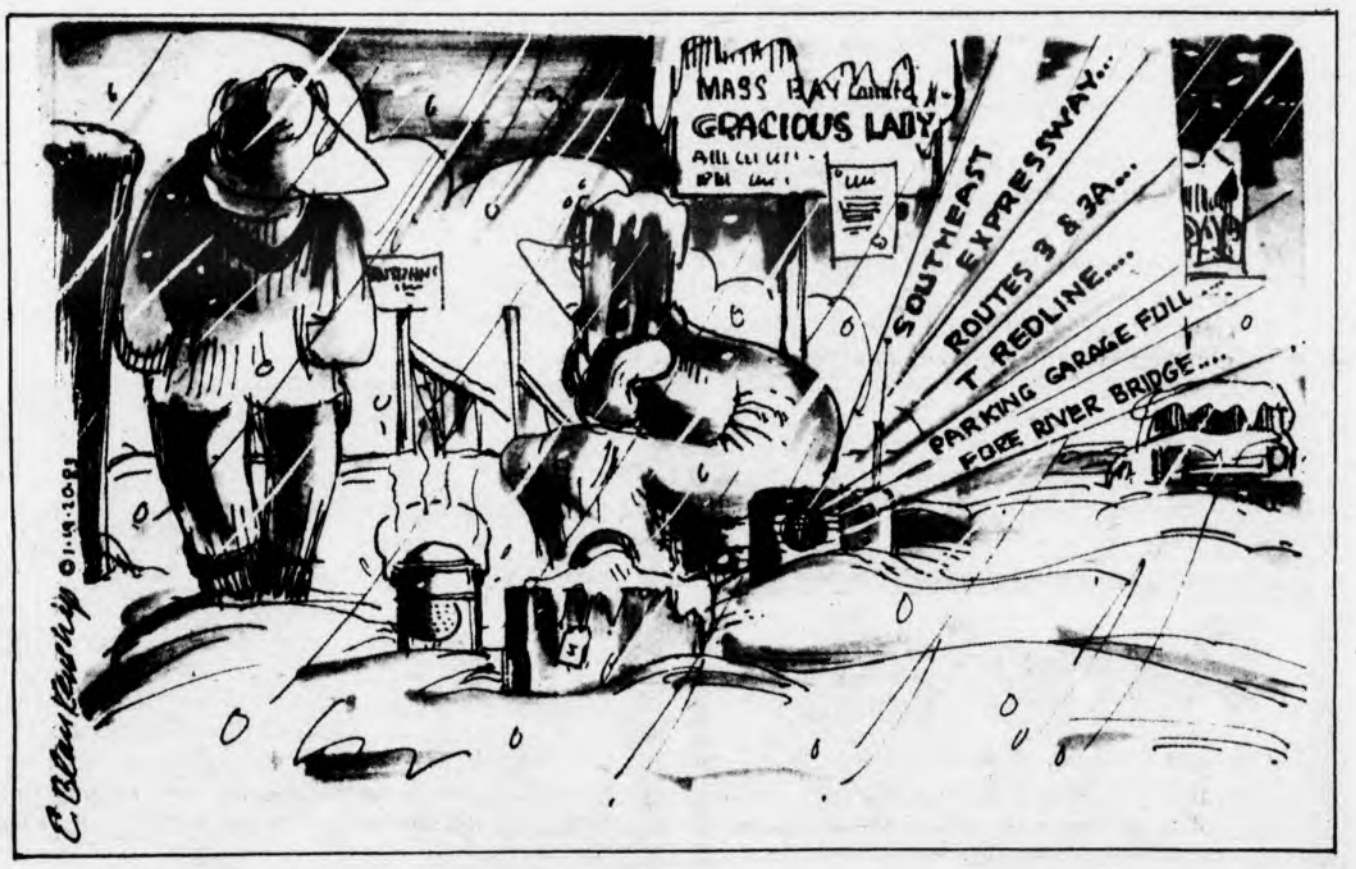
Letters

To the Editor:

Since I was the subject of your editorial of January 19, I feel somewhat obligated to respond to what I feel was an unfair assumption by your paper.

Several weeks ago I reported to the School Committee the results of a study I had done regarding declining enrollments and resultant demographic trends taking place in Cohasset. As enrollments decrease, the number of households without school age children increases. There is nothing profound about this observation until one looks at the actual number of households and voters in our town who no longer have a direct link to the schools because their children have graduated.

My point to the School Committee was simply for us to be cognizant of the size, strength and importance of this growing segment of our community and to suggest we develop a strategy to communicate and maintain the support of this important constituency.



The fact we have some Selectmen, Advisory Committee members and other town officials without school age children does not mean they are not supportive of the schools, it simply means the School Department must find other ways of communicating and soliciting support than through the normal student-parent experience.

All Cohasset departments and committees must rely heavily on the local newspaper to inform the town on the actions of individual committees. This is an awesome responsibility and an important service to the community for a local newspaper.

In this regard, it is regretable your paper has chosen as its School Committee reporter an ex-committee member who, with Mrs. Gjesteby, was part of a minority faction which led to a Town Meeting decision

From the Ombudsman: Insights on the school debate

By Tanna Kasperowicz

Commentary

A few years ago a board of selectmen from another town went into an executive session. Several residents and three reporters waited in the hall outside the meeting room. After only a few minutes, screams were heard from inside the meeting room.

When the door opened, it was discovered that one of the selectmen had been scalded by a coffee pot he claimed had been thrown at him, purposefully, by another selectman.

The accused selectman said the scalded selectman had tripped over the coffee pot cord and had caused the accident. The three other selectmen, one of whom was the chairman of the board, saw nothing.

Needless to say, the story made the front pages of three local newspapers.

It is important to understand that the accused selectman and the scalded selectman had: (a) disliked one another upon first sight; (b) on a weekly basis had made their feelings known of one another through eyeball rolling, smirking and outright laughter; (c) were never cautioned by the chairman of the board to treat one another any differently; (d) were alleged to have made hang-up phone calls to one another's homes often.

After the town radio station (student-run) began to record selectmen sessions things improved somewhat. Most snide remarks were saved for commercials and/or the locker room.

Counterpoint: Cohasset (see Note c in paragraph five). It is the chairman of the board's responsibility to set the tenor and tone of the meeting. Some committee chairmen do this extremely well. A committee chairman who this writer has particularly admired over the years is Jean Cotton, chairman of the advisory committee. Town department heads may well deplore the day she and her committee go over their budgets, but she has the respect and the complete attention of her committee. Over the years, I do not know of one advisory committee member (former or present) who has ever taken issue with the manner in which Mrs. Cotton has run her meetings.

Out-of-place remarks do slip by — but they are the exception and not the rule.

In preparing these remarks for the Mariner I talked with reporters, residents, the chief editorial writer for the Mariner and the publisher of the Mariner.

All of the individuals I talked with were honestly conncerned. Chief editorial writers do not consider themselves to be the last or only word on any issue in the Towns. Nor do publishers. Nor do reporters. Their biggest fear is that they may be wrong.

Residents saw remarks made by Mr. Nedrow published as news, and then treated in an editorial. One resident said:

"I don't think Joe and Martha should have had to have had a few simple remarks made at a school committee meeting aired in an editorial which was four times longer than anything they said. It's as if the editorial writer wished to join the fracus."

Three reporters, who have covered Cohasset School Committee meetings off and on over the past year said they felt the editorial writer was justified in his editorial. "These things happen over and over again. It is not always reportable — what happens might better be turned into a soap script i.e., he smirked, turned his back and answered her in a mocking tone."

Whatever.

The Cohasset School Committee is packed with talented and interesting individuals who have much to offer the Town and the children of Cohasset. Joe Nedrow and Martha Gjesteby both desire exceptional education for Cohasset school children. Perhaps they disagree on how we are to afford it, but the intent is there.

It is hoped that the talents of these two individuals in particular can be directed and dealt with for the benefit of the system. Whether a reporter chooses to quote or not quote contrite statements made by any public official is not at issue here.

Health Board briefs...

The Board of Health is anxious to hear from citizens who would be interested in serving on a Hazardous Materials Committee. The Committee will be involved in the preparation of a plan of response to spillage of dangerous substances, attending workshops, compiling an inventory of hazardous materials in town and other activities relevant to hazardous waste management.

Interested persons should contact the Board of Health office to further discuss this committee.

The first task of the committee will be to forward to the health board recommendations on pesticide use in town and issues such as aerial spraying.

OTHER ACTION

The Board of Health gave final approval to the first residential cluster condominium development in Cohasset.

The health board approved health-related plans for the $6 million development at 100 Pond Street which calls for 39 two-bedroom condominiums priced between $117,000 and $160,000.

This is the first project under the town's new cluster zoning by-law which was designed to encourage a less sprawling form of development and more areas for open and recreation land.

Thirty-nine units are planned for the 23-acre site on Pond Street. Completion of the units is planned for December, 1984. Construction will be phased and a model should be completed sometime in the next month.

COMMUNITY CENTER EXPANSION

The Board of Health voted not to require toilet facilities for the expansion of the Cohasset Community Center. The center plans to convert the barn into an extended classroom. The board will require the center to plan some access to the toilet facililties in the main center building.

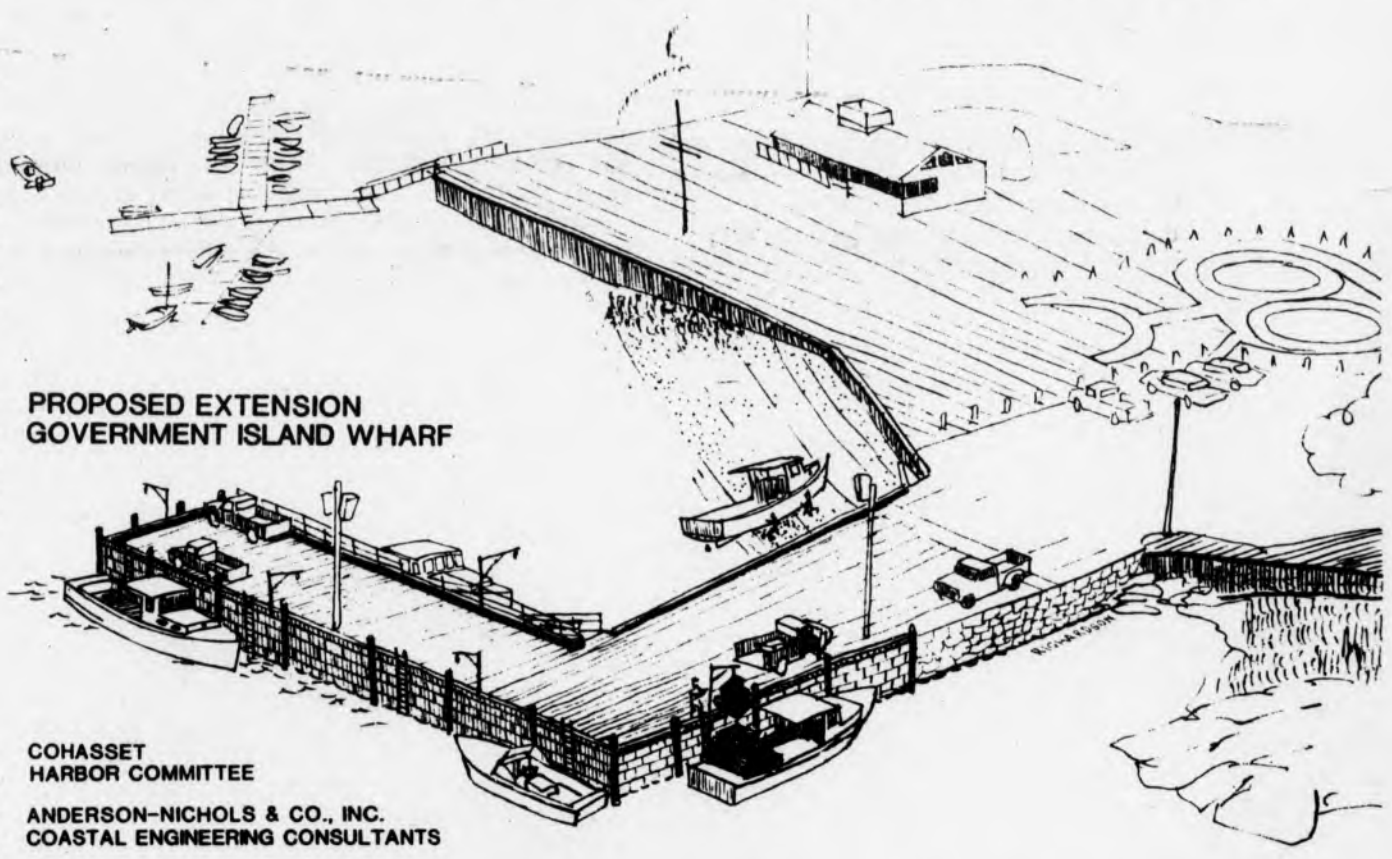
to change the number of committee members from six to five. It is my opinion the personal relationship existing between your reporter and Mrs. Gjesteby has done your paper, the School Committee, and the entire Town of Cohasset a disservice.

The fact no attempt was ever made by your reporter to contact me regarding clarification, verification, denial or comment regarding any action or decision I have ever taken as a ember of the Committee, only serves to confirm my opinion your reporter was expressing her personal views rather than informing the Town in an unbiased manner.



It is true Mrs. Gjesteby and I have many differences of opinion as to what we think is best for our schools. This is not to say either of us is right or wrong. It's simply a reflection of our own individual backgrounds, philosophy and personal experiences as to what we each think is the best solution for any given situation. For the most part, these discussions have assisted the Committee as a whole to arrive at a more quality decision than if these opposing views were not considered.

Having already expressed my opinion as to the source of your editorial, I see no purpose of any further discussion of it.

I do, however, appeal to your paper to accept the challenge and responsibility of the role you play in our community. For most of us, the Mariner is our chief source of information regarding the business of our town. This demands fair, unbiased and honest reporting.

Selectmen briefs . . .

CEDAR STREET LANDFILL

In order to extend the life of the Cedar Street Landfill and to save money, Health Agent Elaine Eliopolous asked selectmen if brush and trees deposited at the landfill may be cut into reuseable wood chips by using the Tree and Park Dept. chipper vehicle.

After discussing the request with Tree and Park director Peter Laugelle, selectman Rocco Laugelle said the manager was wary that wires and nails left in the wood might damage the expensive machinery.

He and selectman Henry Ainslie suggested that the wood could be burned or someone from the Tree and Park Department could inspect the chipping process so the equipment would not be damaged by wires or nails.

Selectman Laugelle also questioned why there were so many rules and regulations regarding the landfill area, and why so many articles are not allowed to be dumped there. "We can't do this, and we can't do that," he said, "Face it, it's a dump. We have to be more considerate of the people in this town. It seems we ought to be able to dump things there. Why do we have it then?"

BEACH STICKER RECOMMENDATION

Because the Recreation Commission was not consulted regarding a proposal by recreation director John Worley to issue beach stickers from that department, selectmen said they will not make any determination until they receive the commission's recommendation.

Two weeks ago, Worley and Acting Police Chief Joseph Kealey discussed their idea to relocate the issuance of beach stickers from the police station to the Recreation Dept. office. But after the meeting was held, selectmen discovered the recreation commission was not asked for its position regarding the proposal. Selectmen felt the commission should have the authority to issue an opinion regarding Worley's proposal.

Introducing Gibson Midgley...the protector...

of raccoons, woodchucks & the star-nosed mole

By Lois Martin

"Who the hell cares about the star-nosed mole? I care. They're here for a purpose. I don't know what that purpose is. But if they are lost, it's an unforgiveable tragedy if it was man's doing."

The man who said that wears a forest green uniform. It's covered with officialdom's insignias, Commonwealth medals, a badge, a whistle and on his left arm a patch that says "Natural Resource Officer."

Gibson Midgley is a law enforcement officer for the state Division of Fisheries and Wildlife. He would seem stern at first, seasoned, wary, purposeful, like some resources he protects. He would 'seem' stern if you didn't talk with him and learn that behind the serious demeanor of a law enforcement official, there is the mind and the heart and the dedication of an apprised conservationist.

Midgley is articulate in describing the resources of Scituate, Marshfield, Norwell and Hanover, four of the towns within his 10 town realm of responsibility.

He is fairly boastful about the abundance of resources, fish, fowl and animal in the area. He is clearly philosophical in describing the unseen but basic relationship between human beings and the other beings in this land. He sees the link in the chain of the living as being inexorable, completely dependent on one another. And he fears the humans don't pick up on the signals they should be seeing from animals.

"Water quality and fish go hand in hand," he says. "Fish is a prime indicator of the quality...for every species there is a direct relationship between that species and us."

"All our resources in the environment we share," says Midgley. "We're supposed to exert some type of stewardship. We must find a more compatible way of living, of looking and understanding. They (fish, birds and animals) are a flag, a warning signal of the quality of our environment. If they become extant of extinct, it's a void."

PROTECTION

Gibson Midgley lives in Plympton with his family. For more than 20 years he's been there with his office in his home. And his means of protecting the environment, on a personal level, is his duty of seeing that the laws of the state are met in these towns, so far as non human beings are concerned, particularly.

He trained at the state police academy. Then he, like his colleagues, added other training to that. Years ago we called them game wardens. For a while they were conservation officers.

Now in towns where some people don't realize the number and variety of creatures with whom they share this 'suburbia,' Gibson Midgley sees to it that the flocks, the herds, the schools, get the protection they're due.

"I don't know anywhere in the state where there aren't excellent resources," he says.

The wealth of fish in the rivers and the ocean are the most familiar to residents of any resource. In that aspect the natural resource officer sees to it that the size and labeling of the product is done according to the law. That includes everything from the shellfish to the fin fish, from the commercial breadwinner to the sport fisherman.

The officers also do the police work in the state parks. For Gibson that means Wompatuck State Park, Myles Standish State Forest, Massasoit State Park, the Duxbury Monument, Cushing Memorial Park and the State Forest in Kingston. Summertime invites swarms of people to the parks and when that happens, he says, the campers bring the same problems that exist in the community from which they're vacationing. Everything from barking dogs, to noisy radios to serious crimes.

RESOURCES

Where are the deer? Still here, says Midgley. Trust the influx of people to displace the deer herd. But they are still around. And there is a hunting season, late fall for deer.

Back a few years ago, he says, there was a big night poaching problem up in Marshfield Hills and where the Coast Guard station area is. That's when Mel Sinnott was police chief and Bob Frugoli was on his force. They were jacking deer then, said Midgley. Now few residents see the deer but they're there.

And the biggest threat to our deer herd isn't man, but his dog.

GAME BIRDS

There are plenty of game birds around. The pheasant isn't native to the area but it is stocked and watched over by the guardians in the natural resource area. They're all banded and people are asked to turn in those bands. That's one way to count.

Quail is a native game bird. But nature's supply is supplemented by stocking from the state. October is usually the bird season.

"The greatest native bird," said Gibson Midgley with reverent conviction, "is the ruffed grouse, commonly known as the partridge. Nature handles the partridge. It's a wild bird. We don't do anything for or against him."

Is the Eastern Coyote on the South Shore? Maybe! State wildlife officials are now seeking to verify the coyote's presence 'in these parts' at laboratories. Looks likely.

"I don't know anyone in his right mind who wouldn't eat partridge."

If one could start to draw the conclusion that Midgley has become a qualified connoiseur of the resources he stewards, one would be right.

His response to questions of whether or not he favors the fodder of ducks and mallards and other waterfowl brought nearly the same unequivocal endorsement. But not quite.

On the other hand..."I loathe venison," he said. "And I don't like lobster."

According to him time was and could be now when a lot of supper tables were stocked with the natural provisions of the food provided within bird or buckshot.

Rabbits. There are loads of those here, the cottontail and the snowshoe hare. Some people still see them in a rabbit stew. And squirrels, the treat for some southern states, has been sampled but isn't chosen by the natural resource officer. The seasons on those, and remember there are seasons for all these resources, as surely as there are guidelines for raising beef, swine, poultry for consumption, is usually fall and winter.

There are no confirmed sightings of cats in this area. There are wolves, bear and bobcats in the western part of the state, none here that Gibson knows of. And he'd likely know.

But there is an interesting investigation that could prove this section of Massachusetts has coyotes. Two labs are now checking to verify their existence in this region.

The woodchuck is considered a delicacy in some spots because its diet "is the youngest, greenest, tenderest of food...he eats well."

There are muskrats in the cranberry bogs and a virtual "explosion of raccoons."

But no beaver. Midgley said man and beaver clash. This four-town area hasn't had much of a beaver population since the late 1800s. Scituate once had to shut down a well because of that animal's determination to take it over. And in Norwell the beaver was blamed for causing road problems.

> 'All our resources in the environment we share. We're supposed to exert some type of stewardship. We must find a more compatible way of living, of looking and understanding.'

There are red and gray foxes. Like the muskrats and raccoons the foxes have some value as fur bearing animals. But that fur industry has turned around so that the day of the fur trader certainly isn't now, at any level. There are those who follow trapping laws to catch and sell the pelts of these animals. Probably there are more than people realize. There is not big money in trapping, said Midgley. But some of the animals found in these towns are of the type used in fur coats.

There are wild mink, possum (opposum) skunk, otter.

And there's a little four legged animal that isn't common everywhere and has the resource officer's protection with pride, the star-nosed mole.

THE COHO

There are two unique fisheries of coho salmon, one of them is in Midgley's realm, the North River and its tributary the Indian Head River. This is an experiment for a fish which flourishes out west. The state fisheries people want to see how the coho does here. And so far it's doing well. The idea was to test the survival of a non native fish..."darn unique."

"Look at the resources, all the aspects of it," said Gibson, "financial, aesthetic, recreational, biological..."

RESOURCEFUL DAY

His job isn't to cogitate on the wonders of nature. He's to preserve them in a direct and clear manner through the laws of the state. Tuesday morning, for example, he did the paper work on an arrest he'd made the night before when he'd locked up a person on a violation of the fish and game laws. He'd delivered the information to the court and on his way back from Plymouth he'd stopped by Kingston State Forest to check on illegal wood cutting there. There's been some of that so he keeps an eye out.

Then it was up to Wompatuck State Park where he did investigation on another person he wants to see on a possible violation with coho salmon. Asked if he'd get his man, Gibson Midgley said, "The chances are better than not that I'll be getting him. But that's my personal opinion." Personal opinion, personal determination and indication that the mounty isn't the only one who gets his man.

Then Midgley checked the commercial fishing activity in Hingham Bay of which there was darned little on that cold and windy day.

He completed the day with a trip to Duxbury about a shooting complaint. The one charged with shooting illegally had been apprehended. The officer went back to see the person who'd filed the complaint about a duck hunter too close to a building. That matter was as settled as it would be until the court had its say.

He says 75 per cent of the calls he gets are requests for information, laws and the like. The other 25 per cent are complaints, charging violation of laws. He responds to those, checks them out, and scouts the truth. "You could spend hours and hours and hours watching and waiting," he says, "and maybe nothing happens."

"But I'd be hard-pressed to tell you anything I did where I didn't have satisfaction."

He nearly takes that back, though, when he says he joins in rescue operations that can end sadly when they find the lost person and it's too late to help him or her. "There's not a helluva lot of satisfaction in that."

"In some arrests I feel extremely satisfied. But when you take a major lobster violation, where they've taken short ones and you seize the boat, there's both satisfaction and remorse...too bad people do things like that."

Midgley teaches hunter safety in the high schools. He's proud of the reduced number of firearms accidents. That's satisfying.

It's not satisyfing for him to know that the heath hen is extinct, since about the late 1920s, with the last one reported on Martha's Vineyard. Nor is he pleased about acid rain, the threat of extinction of the California Condor.

For Gibson Midgley, the loss of a species is a threat to humankind. There's nothing impersonal about anything's extinction.

So it's the law whose side he's on on the surface of his work. But it's life he favors in the process. Gibson Midgley is a steward, dressed in forest green, wearing a badge. He's got a large open reserve in Marshfield, Scituate, Norwell and Hanover. And not the least among them are some of his favorites, the partridge and the star-nosed mole.

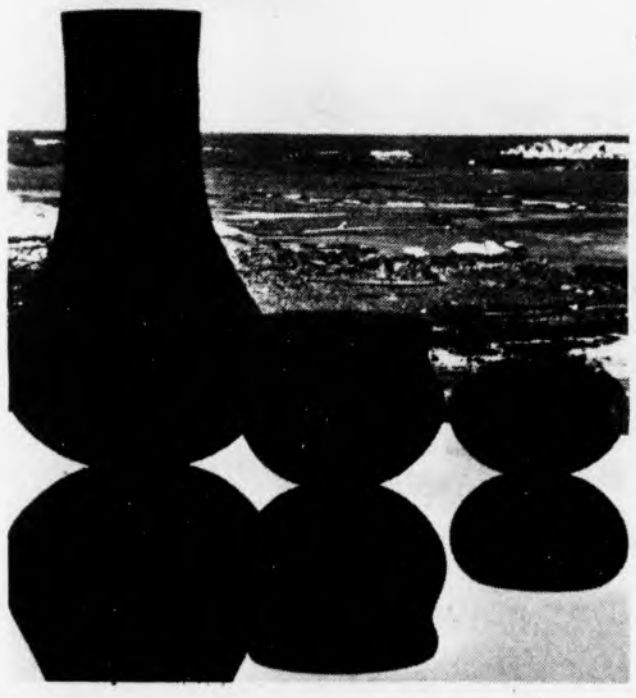
A visit to the sisters of To Kalon

By Laura Doherty

Sisters Ursula Ording and Trina McCormick recently found a jar of homegrown honey on their doorstep. Attached was a note, "I'm glad you're here."

In the one and a half years since they founded their retreat center located on Atlantic Avenue, the two Dominican sisters have brought a lot to the community which they have chosen to serve.



The retreat's name, To Kalon, is Greek. It means beautiful.

A winding road leads to the large gracious home overlooking Cohasset's rocky coast. Inside one's gaze is immediately attracted to views of the sea which appear almost to surround the retreat.

Every room gives a feeling of complete order and tranquility. The many patterned wood floors shine. Each room is informal with a natural harmony. Evidence of a nearness to the sea abounds. Shells are gathered in baskets. A wall hanging carefully brings its colors into the house.

Thompson Hughes and Sister Trina McCormick work on their pottery in "To Kalon's" studio. A small group of potters meet weekly at the Atlantic Ave. retreat for a meal and potting lessons.

With the ocean as a peaceful backdrop, a display of Sister Ursula's unique pottery appears double-ended in the reflection of a glasstop table.

It would be easy to be holy here, I thought, as I visited Trina and Ursula for the first time. Except for soft delicate music, all was quiet. Even the phone sounded soft.

Several calls came in while I was there. One from a young mother with a new baby. "I've wanted to come and see you," she says to Trina. To Kalon has been discovered and mostly by word of mouth.

Trina feels her ministry helps people with a need for a place of solitude, somewhere to share thoughts and ideas. Thompson Hughes, who introduced me, says the retreat is a place "to come in touch with ourselves."

"There's a focus for everyone," Trina said. It's a place for solace, special space and beauty. "When we attain creativity, then we ourselves are in tune with our creativity, then we ourselves are in tune with our creator." For all, the experience offered is a nonthreatening one.

It's no surprise that both Trina and Ursula are artists as well as teachers. "We're artists," says Trina as she explains their attempt "to surround our environment in order to be nourishing to the soul."

Trina is a painter and sculptor and taught arts and religion in Florida. At a very early age, she began to think of a religous life.

"I had a deep desire to focus on a spiritual life and the ordinary structures didn't seem to allow me to do that."

Her three dimensional reliqueries made from found objects many of which are religious are on the mantel of the main fireplace. Ursula feels that they are a "beautiful link with the past." She regrets that her associate has had to neglect her art for other demands.

Trina said the advice of taking an hour out of each day for her work just "doesn't do it." However, she continues, "if I really wanted to be doing it then I'd be doing it."

For Ursula, the problem is opposite. "If I start on pottery, it's hard to get me to stop," she chuckles. Trina agrees that Ursula is "very good at finding creative time." Her unique pots are the result of using different techniques in sawdust firing.

Ursula taught science for 25 years and feels that she has learned much; especially that "we can't be trying to change others."

One very bright student who was a Baptist Fundamentalist refused all attempts to expose her to the concept of evolution.

To make her point, she asked Ursula if she would attend her classes. "Just as we knew we were right so did she," Ursula concluded.

Whether dialogue, study or worship, a workshop in clay or basketry or a retreat, To Kalon is designed to meet a variety of needs. Some want to leave a confusing atmosphere to make a major decision in their lives.

"When we become quieted, those answers become clear," Trina said. Programs focus on the whole person—a healthy balance of the soul, mind and body.

A special attraction are the meals homecooked by Ursula who is as creative in the kitchen as she once was in the chemistry lab.

"I could spend my whole time there," she readily admits. Aesthetics as well as nutrition are very important to Ursula who cooks "by recipes made my own."

Trina admires Ursula's ability. "It's exciting that she has the courage to try new things with people — things that I would never have thought of putting together, like oranges and onions."

The division of labor for Ursula and Trina is not specifically organized but "just kind of happens." Trina is responsible for fund-raising. Not only must Kalon be totally self sufficient but also a stipend must be sent to the mother house.

Fees set for programs aren't enough and they must rely on outside donations.

The work is at times demanding. As one friend recently said, "their family is extended and they have all the responsibilities of home and then some." Yet they have brought us something beautiful — a chance to be creative, to think, to discover oneself and to be whole.

The following are two of Sister Ursula's favorite recipes.

ZUCCHINI AND RICE CASSEROLE

1 ½ lbs. zucchini
1/2 cups chopped parsley
2 T lemon juice
2 cups cottage cheese
1 t. salt
1 t. basil dash pepper
dash garlic powder
4 cups cooked brown rice chopped onions, mushrooms and celery, sauteed
1 cup grated cheese
Parmesan cheese (opt.)

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Mix rice with lemon juice, parsley, sauteed onions, mushrooms, celery and seasonings. Slice zucchini in 1/4" rounds. Steam until done but firm. In greased casserole or 8" x 8" pan make a layer each of rice mixture, cottage cheese and zucchini. Top with grated cheese. Bake uncovered for 15-20 minutes. Sprinkle with Parmesan cheese. (optional) serves 4-6.

SPANISH EGGPLANT

1 large eggplant
1 beaten egg
3 cups canned tomatoes
1 onion chopped
sliced mushrooms
1-2 cups bread crumbs
1 cup grated cheese
1/2 cup buttered bread crumbs

Cook diced eggplant in boiling salted water for 8 minutes. Mix in other ingredients. Top with cheese and buttered crumbs. Place in greased casserole. Bake at 350 degrees for 30 minutes. Serves 6.

Sister Trina McCormick begins shaping a piece of creativity.

Report on the PSO, a positive force says Crowell

By Regina M. Schultz

Attending a regularly scheduled meeting of the Cohasset Parent School Organization, one senses the importance and the strength of the group. It becomes obvious that open communication exists among PSO Executive Board members and teachers, administrators, and the school committee.

President Nancy Sandell conducts her meetings with self-assurance and direction.

Mr. Richard Streeter, high school principal, commented on "the tremendous involvement of the PSO in so many of the schools' activities — "Grease," for example. He noted the "reliability and responsibility" of the group as important features of a school support organization.

Most of the organization's goals for the school year already have been reached. Their on-going activities continually reinforce the goals set for them in their by-laws.

One of their stated goals is "to act as a communication channel between parents and schools." Has the PSO succeeded? President Sandell points with pride to Vice President Ed Atkinson's school calendar, Pat Walsh's "School News" column, the system-wide telephone chain, Marie McCarthy's minutes for the school committee and administrators, and the telephone survey of one hundred and sixty-five families for the Forum on Schools and Finances.

Mr. Jack Creamer, principal of the Joseph Osgood School, summed it all up in saying, "The PSO has been a constructive link between the community and the schools."

"With so many parents who really care in our school system," said Sandell, "the PSO offers them a unique opportunity to channel their energies efficiently."

Some of these energies have produced remarkable results. As various needs arise, they are brought to the attention of the PSO. Through the budget-balancing skills of treasurer John Conroy, funds were contributed to the special needs committee's Project Mainstream for the Children's Museum Kit.

Funds were made available to the artist-in-residence committee for the "Just Around the Corner Players," to the Deer Hill Library for magazine holders, to the students' vandalism fund, to various kinds of teacher recognition, to the sixth grade at Deer Hill for a Wampanoag Indian guest speaker. "So many special kinds of things have been provided by the PSO," stated Jack Creamer.

Most recently Laura Doherty, chairman of the arts enrichment committee, wrote a grant to the Massachusetts Council on the Arts for partial funding of the forthcoming presentation of "Shakespeare's World" by the Boston Shakespeare Company. Parents have been asked to subsidize the remainder cost through ticket sales.

The enrichment committee will also present "Ozzie Alive: The Ocean according to Ozzie," a bard-raconteur who presents our natural resources in lyric form. A holiday puppet show was brought to the Osgood School in December featuring "The You and Me Players."

The Osgood School representatives, Patricia Baird and Martha Equi, held a workshop on parenting, implemented the discussion of busing problems, and organized volunteers for Snappy Sneakers Day.

Deer Hill representatives, Karin Bartow and Maria Plante, organized the telephone chain, contributed to the Deer Hill newsletter and will be assisting with the Outdoor School Week. In expressing gratitude for the library Magazine holders, Principal Ken Ekberg said the staff recognizes the PSO's support "in these times of fiscal restraint."

High School representatives, Mary Hartwell, Joan Shockman and Jim Leonard, have met with teachers, administrators, and student government leaders to discuss their specific needs. Assistance with issues and projects such as student tardiness, summer vacation tours, "Grease," telephone chains, vandalism repercussions and school dances resulted from these discussions.

Acting as "advocates for public education," PSO conducted an effective lobby for the defeat of Question #1 on the Nov. 2 ballot.

Sue McNamara, PSO activities chairman, is planning a Candidates Night in March for school committee candidates. This fall her activities committee presented a highly successful Orientation Program for the community.

"The parents and friends of this school system are committed to quality and can appreciate the results of all their efforts. A good school system is a contribution to a community," said Sandell. "These people form the substance of the PSO."

Volunteers have been organized by Pat Ellinger to help with Open Houses, to serves as Room Mothers, to assist at the Deer Hill Library, in IMS labs, and elementary classrooms, to help at special events, and to assist in the high school Alternate School.

Host families have been found for METCO students by Jane Ellis and her committee. Taffy Nothnagle, chairman of the special needs committee, organized an after-school workshop for teachers and volunteers, and arranged for a series of school presentation on handicaps and learning disabilities.

Funds to support these many and varied programs were provided by the multiple activities of the fundraising committee headed by John Convery and Robin Suhrbier. Still, as Treasurer John Conroy commented, "The money goes out just as quickly as it comes in — for one worthy project after another."

Eugene Crowell, superintendent of schools, commented in his Town Report, "The newly formed PSO has been an active and a positive force in our schools' operation. We thank them for their encouragement."

Opera class at Conservatory

A new adult class at the South Shore Conservatory next semester, "Development of Opera," begins Tuesday, Feb. 8, from 7:45 to 9:15 p.m., and will continue until May 17.

Andrew Gordon, who will conduct the class, says it will not be a rehash of the typical opera crash courses. He plans to explore the world of opera from Mozart to the 20th century pointing out the artistic and political climate of the times that influenced the composers to write as they did.

No experience or musical knowledge is necessary for this course. Anyone interested may obtain information about this and the other classes at the South Shore Conservatory by contacting the office at 749-7565.

CHS students help design software program

By Mike Berger

A 16-year old Cohasset High School junior is revising a computer program which will enable a New Jersey bank president to forecast interest rates and other economic information.

Wayne Thomas of 42 Norfolk Road is working part time with John Convery, president of Soft Pac Systems of Cohasset to convert a computer program from Apple Co. to Burroughs Corp. equipment.

Soft Pac develops customized software packages for microcomputers. These packages are sold to credit unions in Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and New jersey.

Convery of Pond Street originally wanted to donate money to the Parent School Organization to purchase computer equipment.

But he revised his thinking to involve students directly into the computer field.

Through the coordination of Charles Davis, CHS math department chairman and Bridgewater High, Wayne and Kenny Walsh of Bridgewater High School were selected to work on a software package for First Jersey National Bank.

Davis said he and Dennis Walsh, CHS Computer Science Instructor, selected Wayne because of his overall computer ability. "He knows what makes computers tick."

"When John first called me, I thought of Wayne immediately because of his interest in computers and his knowledge of computer operations," Davis said.

Wayne told the Mariner that a few years ago his father purchased a small computer as a gift and he has been tinkering with it ever since.

He has taken several courses at CHS and will definitely make computers or electronics a career and will extend his computer education at college.

"Right now it's a lot of fun," said Wayne who works for Convery four days a week for four hours each day, at Convery's office across from CHS.

Wayne said he and Ken Walsh are reprogramming and modifying equipment for the bank and are supervised by Jacqueline Jukes, director of system software design for Convery.

Convery said he wanted to create some positions for high school students which do not require technical expertise but jobs which "qualified students could become involved in."

John Convery's computer assistants, Wayne Thomas, 16, of Norfolk Road, and Ken Walsh of Braintree. The pair work part-time in Convery's Soft Pac Systems office revising software programs.

"It's first hand experience for them and cost effective for us." He said the bank projects are "modifications, enhancement and some minor restructuring."

The finished product, he said, will divide assets and liabilities for bank management and will allow the president to make economic projections and forecast interest rates.

The project should be ready for inspection in 45 days and will be delivered to the bank for a 90-day evaluation. If the students can schedule the trip, Convery wants them to go to the new Jersey bank.

Burroughs Corporation has donated $65,000 of equipment for the project and if it's successful, could create a "national framework" for other projects with Burroughs.

Davis said this is an excellent program for the students and is a definite plus for Wayne by giving him experience on other systems. "I would like to see this program continue. I have two other students in mind who could benefit from something like this."

American Red Cross Bloodmobile, Jan. 31

The Cohasset Chapter, American Red Cross will conduct its next Community Triannual Bloodmobile Monday, Jan. 31, from 2:30 to 7:15 p.m. at the Unitarian Parish House, 23 North Main St., Cohasset Common.

This Bloodmobile, which has been held at the same site for many years, is being organized again by the Chapter Blood Program Coordinator, Corinne Cahill.

Assisting in the signing up of donors for this special event are town churches, organizations and businesses including the First Parish Unitarian Church (Merilyn DeVos); St. Anthonys' (Mary McArthur); Second Congregational (Viola Tuthill); St. Stephens' (Virginia Nast); Beechwood Congregational; South Shore Home Care (Joan Sullivan); Rotary Club (Wayne Robbins); American Legion (Robert Duncan); Mason's (Robert Richardson); Norfolk Conveyor (Robert Roth); H & W Industries (Virginia Smith); Cohasset Hgh School (Carol Ciciotte) and grade schools (Ethel Gormley).

In charge of the various volunteer groups on the day of the Bloodmobile are reception (Anne Reardon and Katherine Gibbons); canteen (Marilyn Humphries); secretaries (Kay England); Girl Scout baby sitters (Jeff Steele); high school escorts and temps. (Carol Ciciotte); and medical history nurses (Barbara Guilfoyle). Alfred Odermatt is assisting with donor promotion and publicity.

Any groups interested in being part of this Triannual Community Bloodmobile, or anyone interested in volunteering their services as telephone donor callers should contact Odermatt at 383-1283. If interested in serving on any of the groups needed on the day of the Bloodmobile, call Mrs. Cahill at 383-9265.

It requires approximately 50 volunteers to conduct each Bloodmobile.

Everyone in good health, between the ages of 18 and 65 may donate.

LINES FOR YOUNG READERS

The Marinette Page returns this week after a long absence over the holidays. It comes to you courtesy of the Cohasset school children.

The Mariner is pleased to bring you samples of the best work of the youngsters in the community and welcomes writing or art from all ages.

This week the spotlight is on the Deer Hill sixth grade students in Betty Cisneros' Language Arts class.

Students wrote their own historical fiction stories using facts about the Wampanoag Indians. Paula Peters, a Wampanoag Indian from Plimoth Plantation, visited the sixth grades in November.

As I secretly came out of the time machine, I found myself at the biggest feast I had ever seen. There were millions of Wampanoag Indians all dressed up in bear or deer skins with colored paint on their faces.

The paint was the same way on everyone with a line on top of each lip and whiskers on their cheeks. The only difference was some were gray and some were brown.

There was enough food for an army with all kinds of turkey, deer, fish, bear, etc. The Indians were all singing and dancing around a flaming fire.

People of all ages were there. Some people were working. The children were helping by doing little chores like getting lobsters off the beach or getting water. The children under six just sat around the fire. They were still considered babies.

I quickly found a tannish-colored bear skin my size. I put it on. It was a bit too big for me, but it had to do. I also found some paint and arranged it on my face the same way it was on the Indians. Then I went and joined the feast.

I soon found out it was a harvest feast. They had made four more longhouses for the winter and they had settled in them. I have to say they did have a lot of food. None of their words or dances made any sense to me.

Then they stood up from their cattail reed mats. The mats were the same kind of mats used on the inside of a wetu. Then they all formed a long line. There was the sachem, Massasoit, at the front of the line. The only way I could tell was because of the picture on his deer skin vest. It was of a rising sun and they were the "People of the First Light." Also no one else had one like it.

Then they started to go down the line and each Indian did a dance. They were all the same. They went around and around, but they did something special with their arms.

As soon as I found out everyone had to do it, I ran into the woods and got back into my normal clothes. Then I got back into the time machine and headed for home. I had enjoyed my half hour stay at the Wampanoags in 1627.

Christine Rooney

I was in a spaceship when suddenly all my computers went dead. My spaceship was spinning around and around.

The next thing I knew, I landed in a body of water and there were children collecting lobsters. I asked them who they were. They said they were the children of the Wampanoag tribe. It was lucky I had a translating machine so I could decode what they said.

After, I followed the children. They led me to an English speaking Indian named Squanto, also called Tisquantum. He was of the Pawtuxet tribe. I asked what year I was in. He said it was the year of 1627. We got to know each other better and he taught me alot.

He told me the mother was the head of the family, and Wampanoag had extended families and also that the elder males would hunt for food.

Later that day Squanto led me to the Wampanoag tribe and introduced me to Massasoit. Massasoit was a chief of the Wampanoag tribe. Later, Massasoit gave me a grand tour of the tribe.

He then showed me a place I would stay in. It was a dome-shaped house called a wetu. Inside, there was swamp grass to absorb the moisture to keep it cool in the sticky summer heat. And there were rugs and mats made of swamp grass also.

The next day I learned how to make canoes and I also learned why they were called 'The People of First Light.' It was because they saw the sun rise first.

I also learned that children under six were considered as babies.

Many months went by and I learned alot of traditions Indians had and I also learned their language. When winter came we moved to Long Houses.

We traded with the Pilgrims too. It was said that Massasoit made a treaty with Governor John Carver of Plymouth Colony in the spring of 1621, shortly after the Pilgrims landed in America. He agreed that his people would not harm the Pilgrims as long as he lived. In turn, the Pilgrims guaranteed to protect the Indians and their rights. As a reward for the Indians' friendship, Massasoit and a number of his braves are said to have been invited to join a feast in Plymouth Colony called Thanksgiving Day. Afterward the chief solemnly told the English: "The Great Spirit surely must love his white children best."

When I fixed my spaceship, I said bye to everyone and I even got a souvenir diaper made from moss.

Then I blasted off and returned to Earth when the year was 1982.

I learned alot of facts about the Wampanoag Indians that I never dreamed of learning and I'm thankful for that.

(Now you can see a statue of Massasoit carved by the American sculptor Cyrus Dallin. It stands on a Pilgrim burial ground in Plymouth, Ma.)

One Sunday I awoke on hard ground. Rather strange when the night before I had fallen asleep on a waterbed. I opened my eyes to find myself in an open field. Ahead of me I saw a number of Wampanoag wetus. Now isn't that weird?

I got up and walked over to the village.

When I got there everyone stared at me. One of them stepped forward.

"I am Squanto," he said. "Who are you?"

"I'm Danny."

"How did you get here?"

"I was hoping that you could answer that."

"Does that mean you don't know?"

"That's right."

"Come." He led me into one of the wetus.

I soon came out wearing one of their brown pieces of clothing, a pair of mocasins, and enough knowledge to lead me.

I found that they made their wetus out of cattail. This was covered by two layers of grass that soaked up water. They had fire pits in each wetu. Therefore, each wetu had a hole at the top that let smoke out. And each wetu was dome-shaped.

Each member of the family had a special responsibility. The men hunted, the mothers cooked, the kids caught lobsters, and old people taught.

They had winter homes. However, it took 11 hours to get to them. I, of course, conquered this in only eight. Therefore, I was later named 'Light Foot' because of my speed.

At last I found that Wampanoag meant "People of the First Light." This name was picked because they were the first people to see the light in the morning.

Two months later, I had to come back to my time. But when I got here only a minute had passed.

Dan Farwell

I tossed and turned in my bed. I felt hot and tired, but I could not fall asleep.

Suddenly I thought I heard something in the hall. I sat up too quickly and hit my head. The last thing I remembered was the door opening.

I woke, feeling uncomfortable. I rolled over to turn off my electric blanket. Then I realized with a shock that instead of being in my bed, I was lying in a pile of leaves.

Then I heard a rustling in the woods nearby. I started to sit up, but instantly my head began to throb.

I reached up and winced, for there was a large bump on my head.

All of a sudden a girl about my age came out of the woods. She was an Indian and carried a basket full of berries. She seemed surprised to see me and started to chatter in some strange language.

Seeing my confusion, she started to talk in broken English. "You English? I Dew Drop. You hurt? You lost? Get help! Stay!" And with that she ran off. Then I passed out again.

When I woke I was lying in a wetu. There were furs on the floor and on the benches which were off on the sides.

A few children stood watching me curiously. I could see women working in the garden.

Some old people were talking to some children. Still other children were returning from the beach with lobsters.

Slowly I felt my self falling asleep. When I closed my eyes I fell into a deep sleep. When I opened my eyes again it was dark. Then I realized I was back home. I had been dreaming. Or had I? I'll never know for sure.

I landed on the Wampanoag Indians' camp site in Plimoth, June 24, 1627 on a Monday evening. It was a long treacherous journey of traveling back in time.

I stepped down the three steps descending off the NASA time machine. The sun was just setting as I gazed at the dome-shaped objects just a few paces away.

Further down the steep hill I was on, I sighted a large hut. On the outside on a wooden sign, it said Squanto. The house looked comfortable from the outside. It had long thin grass surrounding it and many birds were chirping in the trees overlooking the house.

I quickly ran down the hill to see who lived in the tiny warm looking place. I wrapped on the tiny door. A big Indian greeted me. He had red war stains on his face, a long robe made from deer skin, and rather long black hair braided in the back.

He must have sensed I was English because he immediately talked to me in English.

I explained to him why I was there and he invited me in. I looked around to find wall-to-wall mats made out of swamp grass. There was a small child with a pillow-shaped object on his stomach, to save him from a fall.

Towards the fireplace I spied a woman cooking freshly killed venison. There were three children sitting on the floor. They were listening to an older woman. She was telling of the ancient wars and what Wampanoag meant (People of the First Light).

I later discovered what these one-room houses were called, wetus. They were constructed of cattail reeds woven togehter. They did not have any foundations.

The nice family took me in as part of their family. I had to do all the chores which were expected of me. I had to cook, weed the gardens; I fished in the long canoes. Occasionally I helped out around the house.

I learned much from "The People of the First Light" and wish to go back there sometime. It was a great experience.

I have always been one for adventure and my dream is to travel to an Indian village.

The day my dream came true, was the day I was walking through a forest looking for something to do when I came upon a hollow metal sphere.

Wondering what it was, I stepped inside and to my surprise it took off! It jolted me so violently that I hit my head and fell unconscious.

When I woke up I was in some sort of hut with mats over me. The strong smell of a fire burning was in the air. As I turned over I saw about 20 darkened faces; all eyes were on me.

For quite a while they all sat huddled in the corner staring at me until a small child ventured over and touched my arm as if to see if I was real.

Then a woman, probably the child's mother, ran over carrying a baby wrapped in soft dark green moss, grabbed his arm, pointed to the door and yelled something in a strange foreign voice. He turned and ran out the door and then the woman returned to her place in the crowd.

A few minutes later the boy returned with a very large man. He came over to me and said, "My name is Squanto and I am the only English speaking Wampanoag person in this tribe. Who are you and where did you come from?"

"My name is Felecia and I am from Cohasset," I replied.

"Would you like to join our Wampanoag tribe?" he asked.

"Yes," I said. So I built a wetu for myself by steaming cattail reeds and bending them into a dome-shape. Then I wove enough mats out of swamp grass to cover the inside and the outside of my wetu.

Then I went with the other children to collect lobsters off the beach. Now I belonged to the tribe of the Wampanoag, "The People of the First Light."

around town

☐People who received skates from Santa this Christmas finally made use of them this week. Ponds were full everywhere. Even saw Dave Palmarico getting his new blades sharpened to hit the ice for the "first time in 20 years." He wouldn't tell me which pond he was going to, so my report ends with the hope he ended upright.

☐Rich Evans was in the spotlight again last week. He won the Coca Cola trophy for most valuable player in football. The vote was unanimous and the trophy was huge. Good work, Rich.

☐Mercie Nichols reports that she is surviving the winter "just beautifully" and is able to take walks at least twice a week, thanks to the mild winter and no snow.

☐Lucy Marsac's "Go Skippers" hats are making appearances all over Cohasset. They are the topic of conversation for both Cohassetites and their opponents. They add to the "Skippers' Spirit."

☐Mary Jeannette and Phil Murray finally took a vacation. After three years of non-stop work, they got the chance to go to Cape Coral, Florida for a week. They stayed with Neil O'Brien and had a "marvelous time." Barron and Izzie Salvador took them to play golf one day, at a golf course full of warning signs which advised not to retrieve golf balls from lakes due to resident alligators. Talk about "hearing footsteps."

Mary Jeannette and Phil both have tans, though they had to work to get them. The temperature never went above 65 degrees. They even managed to hit some sales while there, something they never have time to do while at home.

☐David Marks, a Cohasset firefighter for 31 years, was given a retirement send-off recently at the VFW hall in Scituate.

Retired Fire Chief Pipenbrink presented Marks with a gold badge for his years of service. George Casey, retired fire captain, served as master of ceremonies for the party.

Best wishes to Marks on his retirement.

☐Mrs. Robert Jordan is a member of a committee organizing Science Night at Pops, May 10, as a Boston Museum of Science benefit. Invitations to the Museum's 12,000 members will be mailed in another month.

CHS sports update...

BOYS BASKETBALL

Cohasset improved its record to 6-7 with two wins over Holbrook and Norwell last week. Cohasset beat Holbrook 88-58 as junior forward Dave Barcomb scored 23 points and grabbed 10 rebounds. The team's offense was aided by Tony Bogarty who scored 22 points and dished off 14 assists. Senior Dan Anderson added 13 points while James Creed blocked six shots and pulled down 12 rebounds as Cohasset dominated both ends of the floor. Cohasset jumped to a 48-29 halftime lead and maintained its offensive firepower in the second half.

Later in the week freshman center James Creed poured in 23 points, collected 17 rebounds and blocked 11 shots in a 54-51 win over Norwell. He was aided by Bogarty and Dave Barcomb who scored 12 points each for the Skippers.

GIRLS BASKETBALL

The girls improved their record to 7-5 with two wins over Holbrook, 58-23, and a 39-32 victory over Norwell.

The Skippers were led by Gia Barresi against Holbrook, who scored a game-high 22 points. She was aided by Beverly Mulaney who scored 12 points while Elizabeth Glasfeld played a strong defensive game. Also playing well was Janet DiGirolamo who chipped in with eight assists.

Against Norwell, Beverly Mullaney had 16 points and 19 rebounds and Gia Barresi scored 10 of her 13 points in the second half as Cohasset wiped out an 18-13 deficit for a comeback win.

HOCKEY

Rockland's Ralph Ewell broke the undefeated string for the Skippers with a 20-footer from the left face-off circle at 7:48 of the final period to lift Rockland to a 2-1 win. It was the first loss of the season for the Skippers and Rockland's first South Shore League triumph.

Rockland scored first with a goal early in the second period. Later Ewell scored in the final period to put Rockland up, 2-0.

Cohasset made the Rockland game close with a late goal from Don O'Neil. The Skippers scored 35 shots on net but were unable to put the tying goal against Rockland's freshman goaltender Tommy MacDonald. This was Cohasset's first league loss in two years.

WRESTLING

Norwell beat Cohasset 38-5 as the Skippers remain winless in nine matches. Cohasset's Paul Igo was the lone winner in the 100-pound class.

Earlier in the week Don O'Neill scored two early goals and Dan Bowen secured the victory with a pair of third period scores as Cohasset improved to 5-0 in the South Shore League. Joe Hoffman scored a goal and had two assists. Rick Evans scored a goal and Jeff O'Neill added two assists for the Skippers. Cohasset goalie Mark Brown made 18 stops as the Skippers outshot Hanover, 33-21.

GYMNASTICS

The Skippers improved their record to 3-1 in the South Shore League with a 106.6 to 74 win over Rockland last week. Karen Ekberg won all four events, scoring 29.5 in all-around points. Richelle Sargent was second all-around with 26.2 points and teammate Julie Sechen picked up a pair of second-place finishes.

'Frosty Frolic' at the Community Center

The Cohasset Community Center is sponsoring a winter dance/fundraiser, "Frosty Frolic," Friday, Jan. 28, from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. at Hugo's Lighthouse.

The Identity Crisis, a local Cohasset band, will provide the entertainment. Identity Crisis was formed in October, 1981, by Jon and Kingsley Durant and Jim Vivian. The original lineup included Jim Benbow on bass and Fred Buerkel, of Hingham, on drums. Fred left the band in December and Peter Caruso of Cohasset joined shortly thereafter.

In February, the band placed second in the Scituate Battle of the Bands, with Jon winning "Outstanding Musician" honors. They have since played various dances, parties, and functions.

Jon Durant and Jim Vivian will be the most familiar band members to Mariner readers. Jon, a freshman at Berklee School of Music, won many awards on guitar with the Cohasset High jazz-rock band and was featured in an interview with the Mariner last spring.

Jim, the lead singer, appeared in the state championship performance of "Story Theatre" in 1979, and is presently enrolled at Gordon College in Wenham.

Jon's oldest brother, Kingsley, has been playing guitar for 16 years and has been in several bands while at school in Delaware and Maine as well as here in Cohasset.

Peter Caruso, a junior at Cohasset High, is a familiar face on the football field and basketball court as well as behind the drums with the jazz-rock group.

Jim Benbow left Identity Crisis last fall to attend the University of Rochester. Making a guest appearance on bass guitar will be Bill Coleman, who played with Kingsley in "Godspell" and with Second Wind in 1977. More recently he appeared with The Gist at last year's "Midsummer Stroll."

Identity Crisis specializes in "New Wave" pop tunes by groups such as The Police and The Cars, but they play a variety of music including that by Christopher Cross, The Beatles, The Moody Blues, The Rolling Stones, and many others. They have a clean, melodic sound and friendly stage presence that everyone will enjoy.

Tickets for the dance have been mailed to Cohasset residents and more may be obtained at the Cneter. Remittance should be mailed to the Center or may be paid at the dance.

Due to limited space and the fact that alcoholic beverages will be served, this evening is reserved for adults only.

Teenagers have expressed interest in this dance and as a result the Center is planning a dance for "Teens Only" also featuring the Identity Crisis. Watch for details in the near future.

Ed Sheehan wins Alabama marathon

Ed Sheehan, formerly of East Weymouth, won the Humana-Rocket City Marathon in Huntsville, Alabama, Dec. 11.

His father, Ed Sheehan of Weymouth, is CHS Social Studies Department chairman.

Sheehan who coaches long distance runners at Troy State University in Alabama, posted a time of two hours, 13 minutes and 46 seconds.

There were over 2,000 runners entered in the Marathon Race which was run in light rain and cool temperatures in the 40's.

Sheehan is a 1975 graduate of Boston College High School, 1979 graduate of Harvard College in Cambridge and a former member of The Boston Athletic Association Running Team.

Last April he finished 11th in The Boston Marathon and during a brief visit home for Thanksgiving, finished eighth in the Jordan Marsh five-mile race and first in the Braintree Hospital 10,000 kilometer run.

Obituaries

Mary Kennedy

Mary V. (Burke) Kennedy of Cohasset, formerly of Allston, died Jan. 24. She was the wife of the late James A. Kennedy.

She leaves four daughters, Loretta Kennedy, Catherine Gillespie, Helen Clancy and Mary Mellon; a sister, Loretta O'Connell and several grandchildren and several great-grandchildren.

Services will be held from the Gaffey Funeral Home of North Scituate, Wednesday, Jan. 26 at 9 a.m. followed by a funeral Mass in St. Anthony's Church at 10 a.m.

Burial will be in New Calvary Cemetery of Boston.

Clarence Grassie

A funeral Mass was celebrated Jan. 20 in St. Anthony's Church for Clarence M. Grassie, 74, a lifelong Cohasset resident and retired bookkeeper who died Jan. 17 at South Shore Hospital, Weymouth. Burial was in Woodside Cemetery.

Born in Cohasset, he attended Cohasset schools. For many years he was a bookkeeper for the Marshfield Sand and Gravel Co.

He served as chairman of the Cohasset Board of Voter Registrars and was a former commander of American Legion Post 118. He was an Air Force veteran of World War II.

He leaves his wife, Mary M. (Mello) Grassie; a daughter, Lanier Grassie of Cohasset; a brother, George L. Grassie of Scituate; three sisters, Lillian L. Grassie, Mary D. Migliaccio and Virginia F. Huntwork, all of Cohasset, and several nieces and nephews.

At the Pratt Library

The Paul Pratt Memorial Library will sponsor a story-sharer's workshop for adults who are interested in volunteering their time and talents to the library's pre-school story hour program.

Jo Ann Mitchell, children's librarian, will lead the workshop. Mitchell has led similar literature sharing programs while librarian at the Boston Public Library and in the Hanover School system.

She has prepared story-sharing kits to aid the novice in story selection, program planning and presentation. Each kit has a theme suitable for pre-school age audiences. The programs are designed to promote listening skills, increased vocabulary and concept development and most of all, the enjoyment of books.

Story-sharers who have completed the workshop and are now actively involved with the program will be on hand to share their experiences.

Adults who are interested in this workshop or in volunteering as story time aides are invited to call the library any afternoon after 2 p.m. at 383-1348. Babysitting is available by calling 383-9883.

from the kitchen

By Joan Pinkham

The Old Farmer's Almanac assures us that "the back of the winter is now broken!" Hopefully, this translates into "the worst is over!" But for those whose skiis are gathering dust and Christmas skates waiting for the ice to thicken on the pond, there's still hope. Cold weather begs for hearty, hot foods and an oven meal is a January must. There'll be plenty of time for cold cuts and potato salad come summer, but Marie Alberghini's casserole is perfect now.

SQUASH CASSEROLE

4 c. cooked butternut squash, mashed
1/4 c. melted butter or oleo
1/4 tsp. salt
1/4 c. brown sugar
1/4 c. light corn syrup
2 T raisins
1/4 c. chopped pecans

Mix all ingredients together and place in a one quart buttered casserole. Bake 15 min. at 450 or until browned and heated through.

* * *

No sooner had the Christmas cards been whisked off the shelves than Valentines are arrayed to fill the void. Rows of red hearts and Cupids gaily renew hopes that February is on the way. To my way of thinking it's the dreariest month of the year, but Pollyannas are quick to remind us that it's also the shortest. Now's the time to try out new recipes when appetities are at their heartiest, so here is Mary Faas'

HAM AND ARTICHOKE CASSEROLE

4 T butter
4 T flour
2 c. warm milk
Generous dash of seasoned salt
Pinch white pepper
Paprika
4 T dry sherry
1/4 tsp. nutmeg
2/3 c. shredded Swiss and Parmesan cheese, minced (sharp cheddar may be substituted)
12 thin slices baked ham
2 cans (lb) drained artichoke hearts

Melt butter over medium heat. Blend in flour until smooth. Remove from heat. Gradually stir in warm milk. When smooth, return to heat. Stir constantly until thickened. Add seasonings, then cheese. Stir over low heat until melted. Remove from heat and stir in sherry. Cut artichokes in half and wrap 2 halves in slice of ham, allowing 2 rolls per person. Arrange in buttered casserole with sides touching. Pour sauce over all. Sprinkle with topping of 2/3 c. buttered crumbs mixed with grated 2/3 c. of parmesan and swiss (mixed). Bake at 350 for 25-30 min. until brown and bubbly. Serves 6.

When the nights are so long and the days often gloomy, the electricity bill begins to resemble the national debt. It probably doesn't help, but it does serve to make me feel better, to have more than one dish baking when the over is going. So, while the oven is set at 350, you may want to try Karen Lavey's

TEXAS SHEET CAKE

2 sticks margarine
1 c. water
4 T cocoa

Bring the above to a boil and remove from heat. Add:

2 c. flour
2 c. sugar
1/2 tsp. salt and beat in:
2 eggs
1/2 c. sour cream
1 tsp. baking soda

Bake for 22 minutes in 350 oven in a 17x11 cookie sheet.

Wash out pan and start again by boiling:

1 stick margarine
4 T cocoa
6 T milk. Remove from heat and add:
1 lb. confectioners sugar
1 tsp. vanilla
1 c. chopped nuts

Pour onto hot cake. Set 2 hours or more.

If it wasn't for junk mail, we'd hardly get any mail at all

Living in the country is even better than it used to be. Lots of new comforts have been added—as you'll soon see when you visit The Meadows in Hingham.

This fine group of attached single family homes offers the spaciousness and fine construction of yesteryear with conveniences grandma never even contemplated. There are kitchens with sunny breakfast bays . . . lots of fireplaces . . . vaulted and tray ceilings . . . large private courtyards . . . 2-car garages . . . swimming pool, whirlpool, tennis courts and a clubhouse. The location, on wildflower-strewn meadows in the lovely town of Hingham, is idyllic.

Two and three bedroom homes range from $155,000 to $210,000 during our opening period. The furnished models are open every day from 9 to 5. Take Exit 14 from Route 3 and follow Route 228 toward Hingham four miles, turn right on Free Street one mile to our entrance. Call (617) 740-1500 for an appointment.

Senior citizen shuttle bus needs drivers...pronto

By Mike Berger

The Senior Citizen Shuttle Bus of the Cohasset Social Service League has put out an all-points bulletin for volunteer bus drivers.

This popular service for senior citizens, 60 years old and older, allows them to go to the supermarket and doctor, visit relatives and go to church Monday through Friday and Sunday morning, free of charge.

The only stipulation is the bus cannot go over town boundaries except for special shopping trips to the Braintree and Hanover malls.

The bus, a Ford van, is owned by the town which also pays for the maintenance and fuel costs. The bus holds eight people including the driver, but does not have handicapped access. An average use of the shuttle bus is about 10 persons per day and 60 per week.

The van is equipped with a two-way CB radio so the driver can pick up later callers or hear about cancellations. The Social Service League Office is also equipped with a radio.

The league will train volunteer drivers and part of the training includes a practice run. The Social Service League provides all volunteer services for the bus. Ray Remick is in charge of scheduling, Malcolm Onwood, maintenance service and Helen Hoopers is the liaison with the Family Service Committee of the S.S.L.

Ellen Woolfe, public relations chairman of the S.S.L., said no knowledge of Cohasset routes is needed but the league does need volunteer drivers for the weekday morning and afternoon runs.

Forty different drivers are used during the week and volunteers can choose any time slot between 9 a.m. and noon and noon and 3 p.m. Monday through Friday, and 9 to 11:30 a.m. Sunday morning for church services routes.

The bus is used for a shopping trip to Braintree Plaza, the first Monday of the month; Hanover Mall, the first Wednesday of the month and back to the Braintree Mall, the third Wednesday of the month.

Local transportation is not available on those days, Woolf said.

Senior citizens using the bus can make appointments for the post office, supermarket, doctors, relatives, hairdresser or to Town Hall.

Residents are urged to call at least one day in advance. Drivers usually pick up schedules by 9 a.m.

Those residents needing emergency services should call FISH at 383-6600. The senior shuttle bus program for the SSL can be reached at 383-0771.

There is no charge for the bus as money from the Cohasset Consignment Shop helps pay for the bus.

The senior shuttle bus is only one program sponsored by the Social Service League, founded in 1911. The SSL is a voluntary community health and social service agency.

Besides the senior shuttle, the agency sponsors Meals on Wheels, a youth employment service and has the professional services of a full and part-time registered nurse and social worker.

The agency is governed by a 20-volunteer Board of Directors, all Cohasset residents.

Your Girl Scout cookies are coming

This weekend Cohasset Girl Scouts will joint 2.5 million of their counterparts from across the country in what has become a national tradition — the annual door-to-door Girl Scout Cookie Sale campaign.

The Cookie Sale is one of patriots' Trail Girl Scout Council's major events said Pat Frawley, Council Area Cookie Coordinator.

According to Frawley the Cookie Sale provides funds for Council program support, but more important, it is an opportunity for girls to achieve and to be recognized for their achievement.

Money from the sale helps to maintain camps, recruit and train leaders and assures the continuation of all programs.

Little Brownie Bakers, division of Beatrice Food, an American owned company, will supply seven varieties of cookies: Samoas, Thin Mints, Tagalongs, Van'chos, Trefoils, Do-Si-Dos and Chocolate Chunks.

Orders for Girl Scout cookies will be taken from January 21 to February 6.

Debbie Haase is the Unit Cookie Chairman for the 1983 sale. She reminds local residents that their support of the Cookie Sale is vital to the continuation of the Girl Scout program for the girls in Cohasset.

Local Troop Cookie Managers Mary Smith, (4300); Rosette Grecco (4309); Mary Rooney (4320); Deidre O'Connor (4339); Anne O'Connor (4550); Barbara Hyde (4551); Peggy Laugelli (4615); Betsy Goode and Laura Atherton (4616) and Helen Pierce (4625) join here in urging the public to support the sale.

Residents who have not been contacted by a Girl Scout can order by calling Haase at 383-1904 or troop managers.

Register now for Sept. 1983 kindergarten

Children who are five years-old on or before December 31, 1983 are eligible for admission to kindergarten in September 1983 and may be registered throughout the week of January 24.

Registration may be made at the Joseph Osgood School office between the hours of 9 and 3.

Future mailings indicating the dates of the orientation sessions and screening program will be based largely upon this registration. A birth certificate must be presented at the time of registration if not already recorded at the Cohasset Town Hall.

Shakespeare at CHS

A chance to view the best of Boston Theatre in Cohasset will be offered to South Shore residents when the Boston Shakespeare Company performs Shakespeare's World Friday, Feb. 4, at 8 p.m. at Cohasset High School auditorium.

The Arts Enrichment Committee of the Cohasset Parent School Organization has arranged for four professional actors to perform scenes from such well known plays as "The Taming of the Shrew," "Romeo and Juliet," "Macbeth," "A Midsummer Night's Dream," as well as an original story theater version of "Cymbeline."

A special piece from "The Tempest" signed for the deaf, will introduce new interpretations to the language of Shakespeare. A duel from "Hamlet" will emphasize the thrilling action that these classics offer.

In addition, this performance will be a major attempt to raise necessary funds for its debut and other cultural programs for Cohasset students. Tickets are available at a cost of $3, or $2 for groups of 20 or more. The program is being funded in part by the Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities. For information or tickets, call 383-6567, 383-0349, or 383-0527.

VoTech budget for next year

The South Shore VoTech School will submit a $2.3 million budget to member towns for next year, up about $300,000 from last year.

The budget must be approved by two-thirds of the towns served in the region, including Hanover, Norwell, Scituate, Cohasset, Abington, Hanson, Rockland and Whitman.

The budget reflects an average increase of 11 percent to member towns. The proposed changes are as follows: Hanover, up 1.1 percent to $127,319; Cohasset, up 27.5 percent to $15,050; Norwell, up 30.6 percent to $95,054; Scituate, up 13.7 percent to $122,973; Abington, up 20.9 percent to $187,964; Hanson, down 15.2 percent to $98,660; Rockland, up 39.6 percent to $274,583, and Whitman, down 15.2 percent to $151,983.

Brighter state aid figures could reduce the assessments, school officials noted. The assessments to Hanson and Whitman, the two newest members of the region, are down because of a higher tuition rate under the agreement which admitted students from those communities last year.

The only objections during last week's public hearing on the proposed budget came from the Hanover advisory board representative, despite the town's low increase. Member Gerald Huban said Hanover could face a $500,000 deficit this year and had doubts about his committee's acceptance of an increase.

'Early Decision Plan' eliminates applications

Ten Cohasset High seniors received early decisions from colleges for admittance next year said Guidance Director John Leary. The Early Decision Plan eliminates multiple applications.

Superior students are encouraged by many colleges to apply at the end of their junior year or the beginning of the senior year to the one school they are most interested in attending. Notice of acceptance or rejection is received by December of their senior year.

If rejected, there is an opportunity to allow the application to be processed by the college in the usual manner during the senior year, or the student may make application elsewhere.

The following pupils received acceptances: Gia Barresi, Harvard; Samantha Barrett, Smith; Shanne Collins, College of the Holy Cross; Elizabeth Glasfeld, Haverford College; Susan Hobson, Wellesley College; Justine Hoffman, Boston College; Maureen Kelley, University of Denver; Maryellen Maurer, Fairfield University; Elaine Mullen, Colby College; and Paul Dormitzer, Harvard. Dormitzer is presently an A.F.S. student in France.

Congressman Gerry Studds nominated four seniors for service academies, where they are in competition for entrance. Patrick Broderick and Paul Winn were nominated to the Merchant Marine Academy, Kings Point, New York, and Christopher Mahoney and Sean O'Connor to the Naval Academy, Annapolis, Maryland.

Enrichment programs for Deer Hill students

Each Friday afternoon at Deer hill School, a class period is set aside for enrichment.

It is a period when all students and teachers gather for a special assembly, ranging in theme from a visit by Boston Celtics', M.L. Carr, to a trip back in time to the mythical world of King Arthur's Camelot with storyteller Marilyn Pope.

Pope is one of two children's librarians from the Paul Pratt Library, both of whom are actively involved in story-telling.

JoAnn Mitchell organizes and supervises preschool story hours in the library and Pope visits Osgood classes for regular story sessions.

Storytelling at Deer Hill for the entire school, however, was a new and challenging experience. "And most rewarding," says Pope. "All the students seemed to thoroughly enjoy the story, 'Sir Gawain and the Green Knight,' an Arthurian legend, and the book has been much in demand since."

Storytelling is an art which is currently enjoying rediscovery, particularly almong adult audiences. Annual storytelling festivals range from Rockport, Maine to Jonesboro, Tennessee, and Lesley College in Cambridge has recently established the New England Storytelling Center.

During the summer, families can gather at Paul Pratt Library Monday evenings to listen to guest storytellers. This annual series continues to draw increasing numbers.

"Storytelling is such a marvellous means to encourage people to use their imaginations," explains Pope. "People listen and form pictures in their minds. It's wonderful for the storyteller to hear an audience gasp in unison over an imagined horror, or become so involved in a story that you can hear a pin drop in a room filled with 400 children. That's how I gauge how successful my story is — by how involved the audience becomes."

Pope first become interested in storytelling at the Boston Public Library where she worked prior to coming to Cohasset. "There, it was expected that librarians tell stories. We were carrying on an age-old tradition to create a love of books, a love of reading, and a love of language, as well as exposing people to literature from throughout the world. Storytelling is not 'reading' from a book as I tell children, 'the story is in my head and my heart.'

"Students often ask me, 'how do you remember all that?' I explain that I love the story very much — enough to want to share it with people. I don't always learn a story word for word, but I do write it down as I plan to tell it. It's important to keep the essence of the story, and, in some cases, the beautiful language."

Pope will be appearing in another Deer Hill assembly before the end of the school year. This time she promises a wonderful Indian legend of giants and Cape Cod.

VoTech students

The South Shore VoTech School informed the parents of nearly 100 students — about 20 percent of the enrollment — that their children may be failing.

Notices were sent to the parents of a high number of students who have either failed their shop course or two academic subjects in the first tri-mester, school officials reported.

School superintendent Clifford Easton said the strong measure was taken to warn students to improve their work or face repeating the year or being sent back to local schools. School officials were uncertain of the reason for the unusually high number of low grades, particularly among younger students at the vocational school.

Search Committee, 'strong chief' are chief issues

Town Counsel Richard Henderson was asked this week to review a 1978 town meeting vote establishing a police chief search committee.

A 1978 town meeting vote established a police chief search committee which resulted in the selection of John DeBassio who later resigned and is now a candidate for selectmen.

Executive Secretary Mark Lanza said a report prepared by the search committee in 1980 asked town meeting to dissolve the committee. He said town meeting accepted the committee's report.

Sgt. Richard Barrow told the Mariner he wants to know if the committee is still in effect. He believes town meeting did not accept the report.

Henderson is expected to give a decision to selectmen Wednesday night.

In a related development 10 police officers including Sgt. Richard Barrow have submitted an article for the April town meeting calling for a "strong police chief." This would mean the chief could set his own rules and regulations and enforce them without political interference from selectmen.

Barrow said "right now under the provisions we have a weak police chief," i.e. a chief who is told to enforce the rules and regulations of the three-member board of selectmen.

The board will be increased to five in April as a

The county question

Why Norfolk & not Plymouth for Cohasset & who cares?

By Mike Berger and Jane Lane

'I see absolutely no reason to move into Plymouth County. There would be no advantage to going into Plymouth County. I see no reason in the world. If the town could benefit by moving to Plymouth County, maybe I'd think about it. But I've never seen any advantages to it.'

Rocco Laugelle

Say you're a new arrival to the South Shore. You get off Rte. 3 in Hingham and the sign says "Plymouth County."

You drive through Hingham to Rte. 3A in Cohasset and another sign says, "Norfolk County." You continue on into Scituate and Marshfield and the signs there say, "Plymouth County."

Confused? Why is Cohasset still in Norfolk County?

The answer traces back to the 1770's and Cohasset's relationship with Hingham.

The Mariner examined this question and asked current selectmen their views on whether Cohasset should remain in Norfolk County.

David Wadsworth, Cohasset Historical Society curator, said part of the answer of the questions goes back to 1717 when Cohasset was owned by Hingham. Wadsworth said the local residents were agitated and wanted to separate from Hingham.

In 1770, the Court of Massachusetts Bay Colony voted to establish Cohasset as a special district and years later established Cohasset as a separate community.

Combined with Cohasset leaving Hingham was the resident call for a new county. Scituate was established in Plymouth County and the border between Cohasset and Scituate (located between the two harbors) separated the towns from Massachusetts Bay Colony (Cohasset and Plymouth County Scituate).

In 1793 an area including Cohasset, but not Hingham, was established as Norfolk County. Part of the rationale, state Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray believes, was Cohasset did not want anything to do with Hingham when the separation occured.

"Norfolk was set up but actually no one that I know knows why. I've looked into it but no one seems to know," said Wadsworth.

Looking at a Norfolk County map in the selectmen's office, one notices the southern county line is established from Cohasset Harbor and continues straight to Rhode Island.

"Looking north of that line, you see Hull and Hingham and the obvious question is why isn't Hingham and Hull in it. That seems to be exception and anomaly," said Wadsworth.

In the 1970's the Plymouth County commissioners asked Cohasset to join the county.

But according to Murray, a Cohasset resident and a former selectman, Cohasset selectmen opposed the measure as did a majority of residents in Cohasset. She said all the records were located in Norfolk County offices and officials were afraid of the expense and the threat of losing records in having them moved.

A bill was filed but according to Murray, "did not see the light of day." Another factor, she added, was the per person cost and assessment of Norfolk versus Plymouth made it more economically feasible for Cohasset to remain in Norfolk County.

State Sen. Allan McKinnon, D-Weymouth, said the drive for a proposal to move Cohasset into Plymouth County must come from the town residents and selectmen. "There's been no movement of political entities in Cohasset and no petition has been filed. There can be no movement without a petition."

The petition would be treated like any other legislative bill with hearings, votes by the House of Representatives and the Senate, and approval by the governor.

McKinnon noted Brookline is in the same situation as Cohasset. Brookline, a Norfolk County member, is surrounded by Suffolk County communities.

Selectmen Chairman Henry Ainslie sees no drawbacks in Cohasset's long association in Norfolk County.

The assistant director of operations for the Norfolk County Commissioners said he would rather see Hingham and Hull restored to Norfolk County, so the neighboring towns would no longer be divided.

Ainslie said a few years ago selectmen persuaded the Plymouth County Commissioners to accept Cohasset into its police radio frequency. Since Cohasset was on a different frequency than its neighboring communities, it made mutual aid

Selectmen narrow chief choice to three

By Jane Lane

Acting Police Chief Joseph Kealey is one of three finalists for the position of permanent police chief. Selectmen are expected to appoint the permanent chief at their Wednesday, Feb. 2 meeting.

Selectmen last week completed their interviews for the vacant position. William Stone, a former sergeant in the Scituate Police Department, and now chief of the Freeport, Maine police department, and Joseph Connors of Walpole were interviewed for the post.

Stone, along with Kealey and Daniel Manning, chief of the Sherborn Police Department, were selected as the three finalists after the interviews were concluded.

In reviewing the eight candidates for the chief's job, selectman Mary Jane McArthur suggested that Stone, Manning and Kealey appeared to be the most qualified.

Although selectman Henry Ainslie said he had not veered from his original opinion that the Cohasset ranking officer, Lt. Charles Stockbridge, should have originally been appointed acting chief, he felt that

Political circuit: Ford, Mitman, Sullivan seek selectmen seats

Diane Sullivan

Diane C. Sullivan has announced her candidacy for the one-year term on the Board of Selectmen.

Sullivan and her husband John reside at 708 Jerusalem Rd. They have two sons, Michael, a graduate of Cohasset High School now attending Assumption College, and Jason who will be entering the Osgood School in the fall.

Sullivan was formerly the Supervisor of Finance for Mister Donut of America, Inc., and has been a Notary Public for the Commonwealth for 15 years. She is a member of the Board of Directors of the Cohasset Community Center and serves on the Parents Committee of the Community Center's Nursery School.

Sullivan stresses cooperation and communication among the various town boards, preserving the character and integrity of the town, and responsiveness and accessibility to the people.

She is active in the Anti-Casino Movement, and will be accountable and available to all residents.

Sullivan is a graduate of the Weymouth School system and attended Salem College.

Clifford Mitman

Clifford Mitman, Jr., candidate for a three-year term on the Cohasset Board of Selectmen, has appointed 11 Cohasset residents to the Mitman for Selectman Committee.

"Each Cohasset voter will have the opportunity to cast two votes for the three-year openings on the Board," Mitman says, "and I am confident that this committee of concerned residents will help me get one of those votes."

Bob Ciciotte is Campaign Chairman and Al Weisenfluh will serve as Treasurer. Other members of the core group who will be handling aspects of Mitman's campaign are: Sherry Becker, Joanne and Woody Chittick, Eileen and Paul Corbett, Jack Duncombe, Diana O'Loughlin and Peggy and Jim Soltesz.

People interested in helping with the Mitman for Selectman campaign can call any of these committee members.

Ted Ford

Ted Ford, 35, of Jerusalem Road, announced his candidacy for the one-year term on the board of selectmen this week.

Ford, who grew up in Cohasset, received a Bachelor of Economics degree from the University of Connecticut and did graduate work in economics at George

Shellfish areas open

Selectmen received notification from the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) that all shellfish areas in Cohasset Harbor and its tributaries and estuaries inside and south to Windmill Point, are now open. The state declared the area closed last month to all shellfishing after polluted effluent from a sewerage treatment plant breakdown was deposited in James Brook.

The re-opening of the areas, which includes Little Harbor and Whitehead, grants selectmen the authority to allow licensed persons to dig in those areas. Repairs were completed to the damaged treatment plant pipes by Dec. 22.

Shakespeare at CHS

Scenes from the best known plays of William Shakespeare will be performed by members of the Boston Shakespeare Company Friday, Feb. 4 at 8 p.m. at the Cohasset High School auditorium.

"Shakespeare's World" will also be performed during the day for students in grades 7-12. The evening performance is for the public and is fundraiser for the student shows.

Tickets will be available at the door at $3. For groups of 20 or more, the cost is $2.

The program is funded in part by the Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities and is sponsored by the PSO.

Beach stickers

After receiving a letter in which the recreation commission endorsed the proposal to issue beach stickers from the recreation department, selectmen approved the transfer. Currently, beach stickers are issued from the police station. But two weeks ago, Acting Chief Joseph Kealey and Recreation Director Jack Worley suggested the stickers be transferred to the recreation department. Selectmen postponed any decision on the proposal until the commission provided some input into the suggestion. Selectmen approved the change because the commission endorsed transfer proposal, saying it would help provide more exposure to recreation activities and events.

Worley and executive secretary Mark Lanza will report back to the selectmen regarding specific

Mariner scholarship

The school committee voted to accept and thank Publisher David Cutler of the Cohasset Mariner for establishing an annual scholarship.

A $250 award will be given to a senior who excels in English or writing skills.

Cable TV support

The school committee pledged its support last week to the coming of cable television. In a unanimous vote the board said they were willing to work closely and cooperate with any company that won the town's bid.

School Supt. Eugene Crowell said the schools may consider leasing rooms for cable television. The committee's vote was in the form of a resolution and places limits on the schools' activity with cable television because of financial resources.

Art Center reception

The opening reception for Suzanne Ulrich's one-person show at the South Shore Art Center's Gallery is Sunday, Feb. 6, from 5-7 p.m.

"Paintings and Works on Paper," is a good cross-section of her work and demonstrates her committment to abstract expressionism.

The exhibit will run through March 5 and may be viewed in the Center's gallery at 103 Ripley Road Monday through Friday, noon to 4 p.m. and Saturdays, 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Living and working in Marblehead, Ulrich has had numerous shows in and around Boston. She may be remembered by South Shore art patrons for her works in the Center's "The Intuitive Eye" exhibit at the Federal Reserve Gallery and at the Center's 1981 All New England Juried Show in which she took a second prize in painting.

Appointment postponement

Executive Secretary Mark Lanza informed selectmen that the current civil service list for eligible candidates for police sergeant is invalid. The current list was given to selectmen June 14 and after three weeks the list becomes invalid, he explained. Lanza will request that Civil Service forward another eligibility list to selectmen. It should take about two weeks to a month before selectmen receive the list. After that, selectmen may appoint the sergeant, he said. The sergeant's position was vacated after selectmen voted in July to demote John Rhodes III to patrolman.

Selectmen narrow police chief choice...

Kealey was performing his duties "quite well." In addition, Ainslie had received unsolicited praise from assistant district attorneys in Dedham regarding Kealey's abilities, particularly during the recent Cohasset murder case.

"I have heard other positive comments about Kealey, too," Ainslie said. He said the acting chief has proved to be a competent administrator. McArthur said she also had received several comments regarding Kealey's achievements during the past four months.

Diane Sullivan of Jerusalem Road who attended the meeting, asked selectmen "stay within our own people and keep the morale of department up." Sullivan urged selectmen not to appoint the 33 year-old Manning, a move she said which would demoralize the police department. She also added that Stone did not appear to "outshine anyone we have in our own department."

Although Ainslie said selectmen were faced with a tremendous pressure from the community to look outside the department for a new administrator, McArthur disagreed.

"Provided we have a qualified person, my opinion is that we should promote within," McArthur added.

Stone served in the Scituate Police Department for 11 years, and for the last seven years was sergeant and court prosecutor. He holds a degree in law enforcement from Northeastern University.

At the conclusion of his interview, Ainslie asked Stone why he had left Scituate department.

Stone candidly replied one reason was that the present Scituate police chief Walter Driscoll led his officers by threats and intimidation, not by example, which is Stone's managerial philosophy.

"The man who is chief has one of the best educated and best performing police departments on the South Shore and he didn't understand that. He was leading by threats and intimidation, not be example," Stone said.

Although Stone did not wish to publically discuss his past problems in the Scituate Police Department, he said he wanted to answer selectmen's inquiries as candidly as possible.

He also said he was one of three candidates considered for the Scituate chief's position in 1976, and when he did not obtain the post, he felt stagnated in his employment there.

"The present chief and I did not see eye to eye. I couldn't see going on in that situation," Stone said.

When interviewed by selectmen, Stone said his managerial style is to lead his officers by his example. He added he likes to be involved with his officers as much as possible "to help head off any problems" within the department.

"I lead by example. I don't believe in pulling my men around. I don't make threats. If this method doesn't work, then I resort to disciplinary action," he said.

If appointed Cohasset Police Chief, Stone said he would first become acquainted with all the officers, many of whom he already knows, and would find out what needs to be done within the department, such as up-to-date record keeping.

Stone said he once favored the Civil Service system, but had a change of heart since moving to Maine. That state does not have a statewide employment service similar to Massachusetts.

He said there have to be more qualifications than a good test mark in determining the best candidate for police officer. There must be more intensive recruitments and stronger involvement by the local police department in selecting the best candidate, Stone said.

He said the local police department must set an example to the townspeople and should be more involved in the community. He would like to see officers involved in organizations such as a youth center program and schools activities. Programs such as Neighbor Watch meet this demand for community-police interaction, he said.

During the past year and one-half he has served as Freeport police chief, Stone said he has returned sizeable amounts of the budget to the town. He has cut corners by operating efficient programs. "I would be a taxpayer here and I want to be careful how I spend my tax dollars," Stone told selectmen. He said he would approve a three-year contract at a starting salary of $29,000, including $1,200 holiday pay.

The second candidate interviewed last Tuesday night by selectmen was Joseph Connors. He was a police officer in Needham for five years and is currently assistant director of the Law Enforcement program at Northeastern University.

As assistant director, Connors administers, recruits, hires and evaluates the 285 professional facility persons in the university's program.

Although Connors offered several examples of curriculum he has devised and studies he has authored, selectmen later determined he did not have enough "street experience" to lead the local police department. He was not included in selectmen's final three choices for police chief.

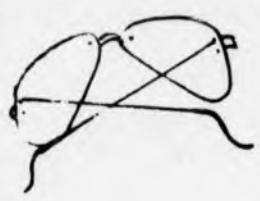
result of two town meeting votes.

The Board of Selectmen were expected to name a full-time, permanent police chief to replace Acting Police Chief Joseph Kealey this week. Kealey is one of three finalists for the position.

The question is what happened to that search committee. Henderson is expected to rule if the committee must be kept intact to choose a new police chief.



This committee also set up policies and rules for any disciplinary action concerning the police chief.

The sewer report: alternate solutions are coming

By Jane Lane

The Sewer Advisory Committee is receiving the first batch of alternative sewer plans for Cohasset. At first glance the message is that the same quality of sewer plans proposed by Metcalf and Eddy can be built but less expensively.

Sewer Advisory Committee Vice Chairman Richard Avery said 17 engineering firms have contacted the town and expressed an interest in developing a proposed alternative waste water plan for Cohasset. Several of those firms have already toured the town and reviewed the present septic system, he said.

Responses to the town's Requests for Proposals for a study to investigate alternative solutions were due on Monday, Jan. 31. The town expects to have the consultant on-board promptly, and to have a completed study within six months.

An environmental attorney has argued that innovative and alternative sewer systems should be further investigated by the town and should be state funded.

Atty. Thomas Bracken, hired by the town to assist in its efforts to seek alternative waste water systems, urged the state Division of Water Pollution Control to provide additional grant funding, and to temporarily withhold making a grant offer for step II design plans (for the Metcalf and Eddy plan).

The town believes that the Metcalf and Eddy facilities plan "is far too costly, is in excess of present and future needs and does not represent the most cost-effective solutions," according to the attorney supervising the town's attempts to delay further implementation of the multi-million dollar Metcalf and Eddy sewer project.

Bracken wrote last week to the state Division of Water Pollution Control. In the communication Bracken emphasized the need for the town to investigate alternative waste water systems based on cost comparisons, the similarity of Cohasset's soil conditions to other communities seeking alternative systems, and legal precedents for providing additional state funding to investigate those alternatives.

According to Atty. Bracken, several engineering consulting firms which have completed innovative and alternative systems "indicate the maximum amount required for rehabilitating all potential on-site problem systems would be about $4 million. These engineers have also stated that a maximum amount of $2 million would be required to upgrade the existing sewer treatment plant, instead of the $2.5 million estimated by Metcalf and Eddy."

Further study may show the feasibility of handling the septage through a landfill or regional solution, Bracken wrote. However, if this is not feasible, the estimated capital cost of a new septage facility would be approximately $3.5 million. This would bring the "first cost" for the innovative and alternative approach to $9.5 million, or $4,318 per house.

In contrast, Bracken added, the estimate of current first costs for implementation of the Metcalf and Eddy plan, is about $31 million. This is approximately $14,090 per house, averaged over the entire town.

These comparative estimates are based upon reasonable assumption and projections methods, Bracken said.

In addition, Bracken argued, Metcalf and Eddy did not fully study and evaluate innovative and alternative processes in preparing its plan for Cohasset, as required by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA).

Although the EPA required documentation that the present on-lot systems "are creating a health problem, contaminating groundwater or violating the stationary source discharge requirements, the Metcalf and Eddy plan did not provide such information."

Based on the number of malfunctions complaints and repairs reported by Metcalf and Eddy, the number of on-site systems experiencing problems from 1971-1976 is about one percent of the total systems in town, Bracken said.

"The history of malfunctions and site-specific investigations for new systems does not support a conclusion that the soils of Cohasset are not suitable for on-site systems or community disposl systems," Bracken said.

Bracken compared Cohasset's topography to that of the community of Essex, which is investigating alternative systems with state funding.

"Based on the available information, the town believes that its waste water problems and soil and topography conditions are sufficiently similar to the Essex situation to warrant a state-funded investigation of the feasibility of utilizing innovative and alternative solutions in Cohasset," he said.

The grant histories of several towns in the state indicate the Division of Water Pollution Control has approved and funded additional work by alternative engineering firms, Bracken wrote.

In fact, a representative of Metcalf and Eddy previously said his firm is currently investigating innovative solutions under a state grant to a community that had rejected the large treatment plant central sewer plan that had been proposed by another firm, Bracken noted.

AEROBIC EXERCISE CLASSES

The Cohasset Recreation Department is currently accepting phone registrations for aerobic exercise classes to be taught by Margaret Watson.

Classes will be held Mondays from 6:45 to 7:45 p.m. in the Town Hall auditorium beginning February 14.

Morning classes will be held Wednesdays from 9:30 to 10:30, Town Hall auditorium beginning February 16.

Participants may register for either class for the eight week session or for both classes.

Call the Cohasset Recreation office at 383-6791. Non residents may register on a space available basis.

SKI WATERVILLE VALLEY

The Recreation Dept. will conduct a ski trip to Waterville Valley, Maine Saturday, Mar. 5. The trip is open to residents of all ages and is ideal for family recreation.

The cost for the day trip to Waterville includes round-trip transportation via delux motor coach, one day lift ticket, and refreshments served on the bus.

Equipment rentals are separate.

The bus will leave Cohasset Town Hall at 6 and return about 8.

School facilities committee to study Osgood's future

By Donna Cogliano

The school facilities committee will tour the town's schools Saturday morning as they begin their study on better use of the Osgood School and other school facilities.

At Monday night's school committee meeting, the school board greeted the school facilities committee with eight ideas for their consideration.

Committee Chairman Robert Sturdy and four board members attended the meeting. According to Sturdy, the school facilities committee will address town meeting related proposals first.

One of the committee's first chores will be to offer the school committee advice concerning use of the Osgood School. The Committee has been asked to study the partial closing or temporary leasing possibilities which might result in a more effective use of the Osgood School.

The facilities committee has been asked to critique preliminary plans for roofing, brick walls and high school auditorium renovations.

The school board wants the facilities committee to assess all land controlled by the school department to determine the feasibility of converting unneeded property into needed revenue.

School Supt. Eugene Crowell asked the facilities committee for any alternative plans for vandal resistant bus storage on school or town controlled property.

The school board would like the committee to consider using some school space for the creation of a town-wide formal meeting room that could also be used as a television studio for cable transmission.

The committee will study the feasibility and cost of rotating the playing surface at Milliken field and the possibility of adding another field. Construction of a vandal resistant storage building, with rest rooms, first aid and a snack bar is also a consideration.

The facilities committee will audit all school department facilities for the purpose of identifying and prioritizing any structural or mainenance deficiencies.

The committee is scheduled to meet Monday, Feb. 7 in the room adjacent to the Home Economics room at the Jr./Sr. High School.

School facilities committee member Richard Sylvia said that maintenance needs are the easiest to neglect in a budget. He said the personnel salary increases during the past years have left the schools without a maintenance budget.

School Committee Chairman Diana Kornet said the eight ideas were long-term considerations for the facilities committee. Crowell said his top three priorities were: $5,000 for a new kitchen floor at the high school; the Deer Hill School roof, $20,000 and $2,000 for a roof survey. "We're asking for help and an objective assessment," said Kornet.

School Committeeman John Langmaid III said, "I think our biggest need in years ahead will be putting on a new roof. The second biggest headache is going to be the brick work."

School Committeeman Joseph Nedrow suggested that $1,000 be awarded to the custodian who contributed the most to preventive maintenance in the schools. He said some type of incentive program should be researched.

School committee member Martha Gjesteby asked the school facilities committee to watch for hazardous or less than desirable conditions in the schools.

The county question...

more difficult, he said.

That is the only complaint he has ever had with the present county setup.

Ainslie said both Norfolk and Plymouth counties are comparably-run governments and are considered two of the most efficient county governments in the state.

Arthur Clark was a selectman when a Plymouth County commissioner petitioned the state to transfer Cohasset into that county. In 1968, the commissioner made the request to the legislature without the consent of the town, Clark said. Selectmen quickly began a survey and determined it would be costly to make the transfer into Plymouth County. The county assessments would have been higher for membership in Plymouth County, he remembered, and the cost of transferring extensive records from one county to another would have been overwhelming.

"These court and Register of Deeds records go back hundreds of years," Clark said. "It would have been a tremendous job trying to relocate those records to Plymouth County. Following the survey, selectmen petitioned the commissioner to withdraw his requests, Clark said.

Clark agreed with selectmen Ainslie that he would prefer including Hingham and Hull into Norfolk County. The two neighboring territories should have been included if the county boundaries had been precisely followed, he said.

Selectman Mary Jane McArthur agrees. She has never received any adverse comments regarding Cohasset's county membership. For that reason alone, she would not advocate packing up and moving to any other county.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle, a member for the past two years of the Norfolk County Advisory Board said, "Until someone shows me a good reason to do otherwise, I see absolutely no reason to move into Plymouth County." "There would be no advantage to going into Plymouth County," he said. " I see no reason in the world. If the town could benefit by moving to Plymouth County, may be I'd think about it. But I've never seen any advantages to it."

Laugelle added that although surrounding communities are located in another county, Cohasset has always had complete mutual aid cooperation from Hingham, Hull, Norwell and Scituate. If that situation were different, Laugelle could see it as a valid argument for transferring into Plymouth County. "Cohasset has always had 100 percent cooperation from all these towns, in all departments, in regard to mutual aid," he added.

In 1982, Cohasset paid $93,825 to Norfolk County.

The total cost of operating Norfolk County in 1982 was $10,805,214. That amounted to $5,492,150 in assessments to all communities within the county. Cohasset paid $9.05 per capita.

For that amount of money, Cohasset is assisting in the support of a Norfolk County hospital, a Registry of Deeds, a jail and house of corrections, and various civil engineering departments.

The retirement system for municipal employees in cities and towns with Norfolk County is handled by the county.

There is also a Norfolk County Agricultural School.

Town Accountant Bill Signorelli said he has no information comparing the cost of the two counties. But he said if the comparison is going to be made, the analysis should compare the type of services each county offers. Norfolk, said Signorelli, has an excellent engineering division which "especially helps us." Another factor, he said should be the assessment per person.

(To be continued next week).

Historical Society dinner draws record crowd

A record number of South Shore and area residents turned out on a winter's evening for the Cohasset Historical Society's gala January 26 dinner meeting. They enjoyed an old-fashined pot roast dinner catered by the Dorothy Bradford Chapter, Eastern Star of Hingham, and an informative and entertaining talk by Captain Arthur Knight of Cohasset.

A standing room audience of nearly 150 people were present in Trueblood Hall as Capt. Knight covered a variety of fascinating topics in his talk titled "A Thumbnail History of the Maritime Industry."

Beginning with the first sailing vessel constructed in the New World, the "Virginia" of Maine's Sagadahoc trading settlement built in 1607, through to shipbuilder Donald McDay's famous East Boston packets and Clipper Ships, Capt. Knight presented a perceptive description of the evolution of New England's maritime industry.

☐Patrick Broderick, son of William Broderick, of Buttonwood Lane, has been nominated to the United States Merchant Marine Academy by Senator Paul Tsongas.

Broderick is a senior at Cohasset High School where he is active on the football, basketball and baseball teams. He is also a member of the Cohasset Sailing Club, the Red Cross and the Babe Ruth Baseball League.

☐Paul Winn, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bartholomew Winn, of North Main Street has also been nominated to the United States Merchant Marine Academy by Senator Tsongas.

Winn is a senior at Cohasset High School where he is on the hockey, golf and soccer teams. He is also active in the marching and jazz bands, and has performed in various class plays. He is a member of the honor society.

Winn and Broderick are two of ten candidates nominated to the Merchant Marine Academy from five hundred applicants. The Academy will make the final decision on appointing its midshipmen by June.

A reception honoring the nominees and the Nomination Board will be held in the Senator's office, Monday, Feb. 7 from 5:30 to 7 p.m. in Room 2003 of the J.F.K. Building.

☐Polly Doggett of Hugh Strain Road was honored Saturday at a Visiting Teacher Convention held at The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints (Mormon) in Hingham.

Mrs. Doggett was chosen for outstanding compassionate service to the women of the church and community. The award was presented by the Stake Relief Society President, Mary Dresser of Duxbury, on behalf of Stake President, Dr. Brent Lambert.

☐Ellen DiGirolamo and Kristin Wilkin certainly found out what it is like to be skiing in the clouds last weekend. The girls were skiing at King Ridge when they thought they spotted a familiar face...it was none other than Bob Woods! For those of you that aren't soap opera fans, Bob Woods is "Beau" on "One Life to Live."

☐Tanna Kasperowicz finally responded to my question why her attic window is open. She offered three choices: a) they have an eagle in their attic that needs air (they are an endangered species); b) there is a rain forest there that is doing beautifully; or c) Tanna's Polish Accountant claims they are one of the few homes without vents in the attic, a "must" for all homes in New England.

☐Congratulations to Tara Pompeo who recently heard she had been accepted at Bates College under the early admissions plan.

It really helps seniors be more relaxed when making plans after graduation.

Last week's Mariner listed 10 other seniors accepted for early admissions.

☐Every little boy should be lucky enough to have a big brother like Campbell Knox. Over at Logan's Pond last week all of Campbell's friends were in the midst of a hockey game, yet he took the time to put on his brother's skates before his own.

☐The word is Nancy Sladen does a mean imitation of "Miss Piggy."

☐Super Bowl Sunday marked the end of the football season, a delight to many women. It also marked the beginning of Cohasset's political campaign season... should be a good one this yer.

☐Bob O'Hayre is looking like a million dollars. After what seems like a winter full of surgery, he is finally able to say it was all worth it.

☐Don Beale recently celebrated his birthday (the "biggy"). After a steak dinner, his friends presented him with a cake picturing two golfers on a putting green.

☐Remember this Friday, Feb. 4, at 8 p.m. is your chance to see the Boston Shakespeare Company at the CHS auditorium. Tickets, $3 and $2 for groups of 20 or more, will be on sale at the door.

☐Karen Golden, daughter of Jack and Doris Golden of Bound Brook Lane, was promoted to vice president of merchandise for Perry Ellis Men's International.

☐The annual Girl Scout Cookie Drive began this weekend with the biggest cookie selection yet. Everyone's favorite is still the Thin Mints. Be sure to order when the girls come to your house; the money helps maintain camps and programs. A lot of youths in Cohasset take part in the Girl Scouts. If you haven't been called on by one of the girls, phone Debbie Haase, Cookie Chairman, at 383-1904.

☐Here's hoping the need for Senior Citizen shuttle bus drivers is filled by now.

☐Anyone lucky enough to be at Building #19 recently got an autograph from Carl Yazstremski. He almost got away without being noticed, but one young fan spotted him, bought a baseball and "Yaz" signed it. There was a long line after that. Alna Ekberg was there, although she didn't say if she got an autograph or not.

More $ sought for substitute teachers

School Supt. Eugene Crowell would like to see twice as much money set aside for substitute teaching next year.

If an estimated $7,000 is not added to the budget, Crowell predicts that the schools will be out of substitute money by Christmas.

Each year, the substitute budget has been considerably less than what it should be, said Crowell. "Each year we gamble on a good winter without much sickness," he said.

In past years when the substitute appropriation had been depleted Crowell transfered unused money from other areas. "The problem is we don't have anything to transfer anymore," he said.

The high school budgeted $8,000 for substitutes this year and has almost exhausted that money. The elementary schools have already used up their substitute appropriation and are taking from the Jr.-Sr. budget.

Crowell said he needed a $10-12,000 increase for substitutes next year.

The Jr-Sr High School is in danger of losing its reading laboratory next year. A savings of $19,000 would result if the reading lab teaching position is eliminated.

The foreign language department might have to combine various levels of courses because of a cut of a part time instructor.

The school committee is scheduled to meet Monday Feb. 7, 8 p.m. at the Junior-Senior High School. Budget discussion will focus on music, library, art, home economics and industrial arts at the high school.

'Focus on the Family'

The widely-acclaimed film series "Focus on the Family" with insights into child-rearing and other family relationships, will be presented under the auspices of the Second Congregational Church, Bates Hall, Sundays at 6:30 p.m. beginning March 6. The series will continue for seven Sundays thereafter except Easter.

James Dobson, Ph.D., Associate Clinical Professor of Pediatrics at the University of Southern California College of Medicine, is featured in the film. In successive films, Professor Dobson offers ideas and stimulates constructive attitude changes that have helped reshape the lives of thousands of families.

John and Thompson Hughes, parishioners of the Second Congregational Church, are organizing the presentation of the series and encourage participation of other church congregations.

Assisting in arrangements are Gordon and Barbara Hislop, Jeff and Marcia Ludlow, John and Mary Benbow and Joe and Carol Sandblom. Light refreshments will be served following each film and a discussion is organized for those who wish to continue.

LIGHT UP YOUR LIFE

By: Christopher O'Halloran

With todays high energy costs...savings are on everyone's mind.

Are there light fixtures in your house that are sometimes too bright? Why not install a dimmer and cut that energy consumption when full brightness isn't necessary. There may be lamps that you could use a flourescent conversion kit in and cut the wattage by a third without cutting the amount of light. Do you need to light dark areas of your yard all night, but cringe at the costs? Install low wattage high pressure sodium fixtures and achieve that extra security. At FLAGSTAFF LIGHTING SHOWROOM, No. River Electric Supply, we carry a full line of electrical and lighting supplies, floor, desk, table, and specialty lamps, Seiko clocks, vanities, medicine cabinets and lightbulbs. We accept MC and VISA. We are open M—S 9-5, TH 9;9 and are at 433 Washington St., Rte. 53, Norwell. Stop in and browse.

Notes & comment

...Town counsel will soon rule whether or not selectmen have the power to appoint a new chief this week. If he rules favorably, selectmen will make their choice Wednesday. At this juncture we can only observe that acting Chief Joseph Kealy, who entered office last fall amid controversy (some, including us, felt Lt. Charles Stockbridge was first in line for the appointment) has conducted himself extremely well during his tenure. With school vandalism and with a highly publicized murder to handle, Kealy has had his chances to blunder, and blunder he has not. Regardless of the outcome of the "selection process," the town owes him a "thank you" for his service as acting chief.

...The town also owes a thank you to former School Committee Chairman Irene Brown for her service on the committee for five years. We're glad to see she has been presented a commemorative plaque by her former colleagues. If in last week's Mariner we called the honor in question a "placque," it's only because our spelling department spent last Tuesday trying on clothes for Friday's "Frosty Frolic" at Hugo's.

...Speaking of the Frosty Frolic, which was held to benefit the Cohasset Community Center, a great time seemed to be had by all in furtherance of a darn good cause. In fact, we noted very little "frost" at all...certainly none between Steve Bartow and Charlie DeSantis, whose animated conversation seemed in the best of cheer. Perhaps we should all become experts on sewage, er, sewerage.

...We urge you to note that the Senior Citizen Shuttle Bus desperately needs volunteer drivers. The bus, run by the Cohasset Social Service League, provides an extremely important service for many of the town's elderly. Forty drivers are required over the six days per week that the service operates. Anyone having a couple of hours to donate as a driver should call 383-0771.

...A number of you have called in recent weeks to complain about our school committee coverage, our editorials, and our overall fairness and objectivity. We're always glad to hear your complaints. Being as we now are the only sheet on earth exclusively for and about Cohasset, we are aware of the burden on us to be as fair and professional as possible.

In our view the best assurance of our objectivity is the fact that the Mariner is the composite of many hands and brains. Some are Cohasset residents, whose hand on the pulse of the town makes them very valuable. Others by design are not Cohasset residents, and these folks (as we hope) bring a certain objectivity to issues and help prevent the paper being dominated by one local clique or another.

But the best-laid design is nevertheless subject to blunders, and we appreciate your calls and comments. Keep 'em coming.

Q & A from the Pratt Library

Paul Pratt Library Director Dick Hayes and Marshfield's Ventress Memorial Library have agreed to write a regional library column on the questions most asked of the Reference Department of each library. This week the column is written by the Marshfield library.

Q. What is the mythology that the opera The Ring by Wagner is based on?

A. Wagner's opera "The Ring Of The Nibelungen" is based upon Germanic and Nordic legend. The Ring is actually composed of four individual operas, written between 1869 and 1876; Das Rheingold, Die Walkure, Siegfried and Gotterdammerung. A skeletal outline of the mythology of the Ring is included in the Simon & Schuster Listener's Guide to Opera; it describes The Ring as "telling the story of the gold treacherously wrested from the Rhine maidens and forged into a ring whose owner would rule the world; of the mating of the twins Siegmund and Sieglind to produce the hero Siegfried; of the mating of Siegfried with Brunnhilde (his aunt, it so happens); of Brunnhilde's betrayal of Siegfried; and of Siegfried's death as the gods' Valhalla perishes in flames." This titanic opera, mythically and symbolically deals with the rise and fall of humanity.

Q. What is the name of the book that Margaret Mitchell's "Gone With The Wind" was supposedly plagiarized from?

A. In checking all the criticism of Mitchell's epic novel and in all biographical accounts of the author's life that were available in the Library, we were unable to discover any reference to a controversy over the authenticity of the novel Gone With The Wind.

Q. Are there two Congo nations in Africa?

A. Today there is only one Congo, known as the People's Republic of the Congo located in central equatorial Africa. Historically, however there were two nations known as the Congo. The country currently known as Zaire has descended from the old Belgian Congo which was differentiated from the old French Colony formerly known as Congo (Brazzaville) and currently The People's Republic of The Congo.

Q. How can I obtain a subscription to the magazine "Musician Player & Listener?"

A. To contact this monthly magazine you should write: Musician Player & Listener, Amordian Press, 42 Rogers St., Gloucester, MA 01930. The latest information we have shows the subscription price as $14 per year.

Q. Where can I find a listing of factory outlets in the State of New Hampshire?

A. The Library owns a paperback book entitled "Factory Outlet Shopping Guide-New England" published in 1980. This book lists the outlets in New Hampshire. It is available in the General Collection of the Library, call number 339.4 Bir.

Q. I am having a problem in obtaining a part for a recent Ford car. How can I best contact the Ford Motor Company to find out about its availability?

A. The "Toll Free Digest" lists 800-648-4848 as the number for the service department of the Ford Motor Company. If you are unable to reach them on this line, the address is: Ford Parts and Service Division, Ford Motor Company, P.O. Box 1805, Dearborn, MI 48126.

Q. Should a person's business title be capitalized when used in the text of a business letter in place of his name; for example, in the phrase "I worked with the Personnel Director..."?

A. In general business correspondence a title, when utilized in place of a name, or when referring to a specific person is capitalized. The Secretary's Handbook states that "In reports and in correspondence, business titles referring to positions of authority are usually capitalized as a form of courtesy when they refer to definite individuals." The Chicago Manual of Style, however, holds just the opposite. It holds that: "In text matter, titles used alone in place of a name are, with few exceptions, lowercased." It seems that the capitalization of person's title is proper in business and personal correspondence, but not always proper in academics or published material.

The clergy column...

By Rev. Konstantinos Mendrinos
Panagia Greek Orthodox Church

Once upon a time, there were two children who lived in the clouds. They lived a very interesting life.

They could see as far away as they wished and they could travel to any part of the world they wanted.

Their task was to learn how to draw and paint all that they observed. And if they succeeded, they would bring happiness to all the people and villages they painted. And they would have great joy in bringing this happiness. If they failed, however, something terrible would happen.

They were young apprentices who were just beginning to learn to draw and paint. Their master would visit them each morning before they awoke and would leave them a list of instructions.

On the first day, they read the list of instructions their master had left for them. He instructed them to paint their canvases a light blue if they were painting a sky scene, a medium green if they were painting a forest scene and a light brown if they were painting a landscape.

They succeeded in lesson No. 1 and each of the children examined each other's work. One of the children was happy and satisfied with both of their works. The other, however, was jealous of the first child's work.

On the second day their master instructed them to draw on top of the basic colors of blue, brown, or green, an outline of whatever scene they chose. One of the children chose to draw an outline of a small village on the landscape. He drew the village on the brown background as he was instructed, and the result was a beautiful reproduction of what he observed. Not only was it an excellent drawing, but all the people and animals, and even the trees which he drew, gave the appearance of being happier, more satisfied with being what they were.

The other child painted his canvas blue. He looked down at the ocean and noticed a calm sea with fishermen fishing in their tiny boats. He didn't like the color of the sea, so he changed it to a green, and the boats' shape he changed to square. He even gave the people triangle heads and bodies with three legs and one arm. At once, he noticed that the sea grew angry and that the boats sank and all the fishermen drowned. It didn't seem to matter to him that the sea grew angry or even that the fishermen drowned.

All he could think of was himself and what he wanted and what he selfishly thought would look better for the painting. He did not care to follow the instructions of his master.

This pattern repeated itself. One child had great joy and love, and listened to the instructions and teachings of his master. He brought much happiness to all of the things he painted.

The second child, on the other hand, became more selfish and angry and never paid attention to his master's teachings. He continued to think of only himself. As a result of his confusion and unhappiness, this little child eventually grew old and ugly.

One day, the child who brought happiness to the things he painted (because he listened to his master), decided to draw a sky scene. He painted the entire canvas blue and happily looked at the sky to paint the clouds.

As he was looking for an interesting cloud formation, he noticed something which made him open his eyes wide. His mouth dropped when he saw a hideous, ugly creature, he saw a great sorrow as if he were lost. He didn't know what to do. So, he wrote a letter to his master asking him for guidance.

The child awoke the next morning to find instructions from his master. He told him to paint this

School committee ...briefs

TOWN MEETING WARRANTS

The school committee has arranged for two articles to appear in the April Town Meeting warrant. One article asks voters to approve $20,000 in roof repairs while the second article establishes a special fund for the school system to collect out-of-town tuition from non-residents.

In the past, all out-of-town tuition fees were returned to the town treasury. If this article is approved, the money would go directly to the school system.

According to School Supt. Eugene Crowell the Deer Hill School is in desperate need of new roofing above the kitchen area. Though the appropriation calls for $20,000, Advisory Committee Member Jacqueline Dormitzer noted discussion of the roofing job had centered around a $15,000 figure. Crowell confirmed Dormitzer's statement and explained that an estimated $3,000 would go toward architectural fees.

NEDROW APPOINTED

School Committeeman Joseph Nedrow will serve as Cohasset's legislative contact person for the Massachusetts Association of School Committees. He was appointed to this position last week with a unanimous vote of the school board.

AFS TRIP APPROVED

The school committee approved a trip for AFS students to New York at last week's meeting. The board's unanimous decision grants permission for a three-night stay in New York.

DEER HILL GIFTED PROGRAM

Dorothy Wondolowski updated the school committee last week on the progress of the gifted program for children at the Deer Hill School.

In her report, Wondolowski explained the three levels of participation in the gifted program. She also told the committee how gifted students were identified and chosen for the program.

Students chosen to participate in the gifted program should have the following three characteristics: task commitment, above average ability and creativity. Not only must the child possess all three characteristics but should also demonstrate interaction between them.

Wondolowski described three levels of enrichment at Deer Hill School. The first level includes the entire student body when they are exposed to outside speakers, programs and to field trips.

The second level of enrichment involves group training exercises in thinking strategies, research skills and problem solving.

The third and newest level in the gifted program is for a student to pursue an interest in the form of a long-term project. Scheduling students for this third level of the gifted program has been a problem, said Wondolowski.

BUCKLEY NAMED

George Buckley was appointed to the school facilities committee Monday as the school committee's representative. The school board voted unanimously for Buckley and may have another position to fill soon.

Buckley replaces Patricia A. Walsh.

Selectmen briefs...

Selectmen received a letter from Town Counsel Richard Henderson who recommended appointments for assistant town counsels. All attorneys are emplo ed in the local law firm of Thaxter, Beckwith and Henderson. Selectmen appointed Atty. John J. Slater III as an assistant town counsel along with attorneys Deidre Kulevich, Debra Thaxter and Stephen Ryder.

Selectmen emphasized that any use of the town counsel's office must first be cleared through the selectmen's office or Executive Secretary Mark Lanza.

HAZARDOUS WASTE COORDINATOR

Selectmen appointed Fred Johansen as the town's hazardous waste coordinator. Johansen also serves as the town's civil defense director. After talking with Johansen, selectmen said he is knowledgeable of the subject and is willing to take the assignment. "It takes someone with a knowledge of what's been done, what needs to be done, and apply a lot of common sense to that. Fred meets the bill on all these things," Selectment Henry Ainslie said.

Engineer William Baird, who also applied for the position, said he would be available to assist Johansen in any manner. Selectmen encouraged Baird to talk with Board of Health chairman Barbara Kern regarding appointment to the hazardous waste committee being set up by that board.

Report from the library trustees

By David Chittim and Richard Hayes

Throughout 1982, the Library continued to enjoy the support of townspeople and also many favorable comments regarding the quality of library services. The continuing quality of these services depends, as in past years, on excellent contributions from three groups which are vital to the success and acceptance of the library.

First, the professional staff supported by the clerks and pages. All of these maintain a high standard of expertise, courtesy and interested helpfulness.

Second, the invaluable contribution of time and money by the Friends of the Cohasset Library. The volunteers are most faithful in appearing for their tours and proficient in fulfilling their duties.

Throughout the year, the Friends have been energetic in raising money and generous in giving equipment, museum passes and other important items to the Library.

Third, the trustees have shown by their keen interest in their regular exercise of their responsibilities that the Library and all its resources will continue to play a key role in the quality of life in Cohasset.

A vital element of Library operations, therefore, is comprised of people — an indispensable asset. We have also been prudent in our budget process and in expending funds. In the current era of tight financing, we will continue to look for new sources of funds — grants, donations, bequests — and new ways to reduce expenses — regional sharing, computerization and regular review of services.

Of many issues considered by the trustees during the year two should be mentioned here. In 1984 there is a strong possibility that cable television will be available in Cohasset. The librarian and trustees have begun the process of being acquainted with this new development and look forward to participating in community programming along with other town entities.

creature with love and understanding, and to overlook its ugliness. He should try to paint only the goodness he could find in the eyes of the creature.

The boy looked very deeply into its eyes and was surprised when he saw a reflection of himself, which made him remember the other child who had begun studying with him. The rememberance of the other child led him to paint a picture of that child as he once knew him, sitting happily in the clouds waiting for instructions from his master.

The painting was good, and he began to take notice that the creature was becoming less and less ugly with each of the paintings he painted.

It, the child-monster, seemed to be acquiring only the good qualities of the other child.

The paintings constantly improved and so did the condition of the child who was once the monster. The paintings eventually restored the child-monster into the joy-filled child his master intended him to be. He realized his error of not paying attention to his master and his teachings. He recognized that he thought that he could create pictures all by himself without listening to the wise guidance of his master.

Lights, camera, action ... in my kitchen

Choose me! Choose me. I'll get it right. Give me a couple shots at it in case I flub up the first time. My house is perfect if you're looking for middle class imperfections.

Oh, talk about your big breaks. The morning's mail includes a fat letter from "The Location Connection," a New York firm that scouts ordinary homes in which commercials and films can be shot. Big time Hollywood stuff, your Crest commercials and your Dustin Hoffman productions.

PATCHES

Thing is, they're bored stiff with the elegant mansion format. When they want to advertise folksy products, they want your downhome surroundings.

Now listen. Some homeowners reap $500 to $2500 per day just for letting the lighting crews in. They like large rooms for commercials like Maxwell House Coffee, the Bell System or Pepsi Cola.

Your porch, my driveway.

Feature yourself as the location site for a toilet bowl cleaner ad. When you figure all the retakes they need, you'll come out with the cleanest facilities in town, an unmentioned bonus.

Or a Paul Newman film, a moving one, where Paul sits down to ponder on my couch.

This is the kind of thought that most stimulates me to offer my house for filming. Not only would there be remunerations that could be applied to improving the kitchen, it's a chance for a screen test.

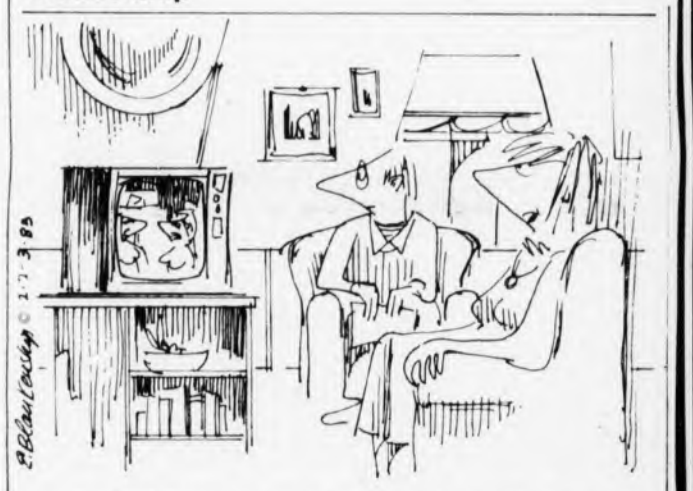
Let's say they want my living room. I'm a savvy critter. Once I get my hand on the script there'd be nothing to prevent my dressing according to the scene and swooping gracefully into my own living room for a scene with Paul.

And I don't need all their words. I can wing it. Something in sequins, I would think, for what would be a champagne rendezvous before the character and I were to go to dinner at a South Shore restaurant.

Even a commercial. I know how to brush my teeth. Learning to talk clearly through the foam might take practice. Hey, I got time.

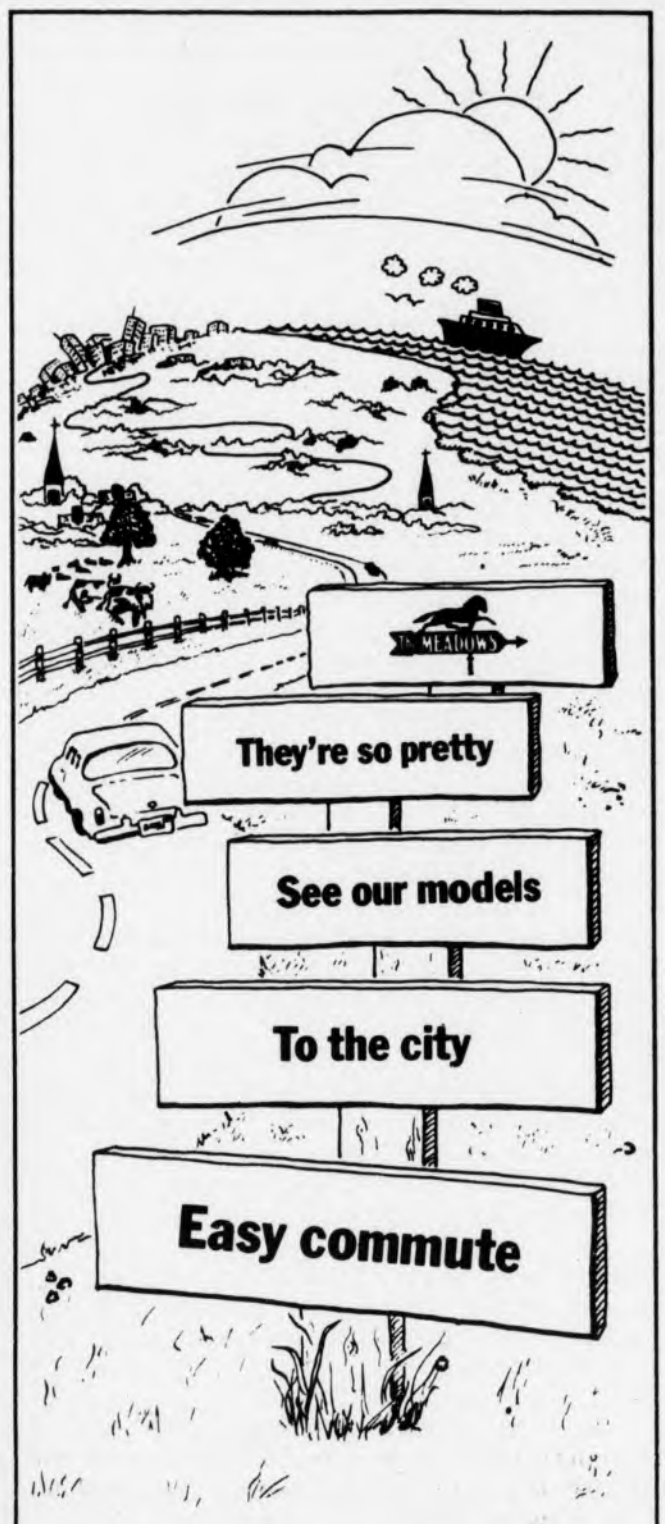
The letter mentions Brooke Shields. I see no point in her coming to my house. I've got a teenager her age and it would be a nuisance to keep picking him up off the floor.

Let's say they're doing one of those if-you're-old insurance ads. I dress the part and walk behind Lorne Green looking fit as a fiddle and unrejected by the insurance firm.



Or how about an adult a group of women doing a Miller Lite commercial around my kitchen table. I've got talented friends who look folksy. Hope we can get it right before the 12th take. Some of us lapse easily into casual hysterics.

True there are minor preparations. Someone's got to vaccum, do the dishes, get the dirty clothes out of the bathroom holding place. Piece 'a cake.



The company suggests you start looking hard at the background scenes of those films and commercials. Do.

As the little kids are eating their Life cereal at a square little table, there'll be a woman leaning down between them, smiling, winking, taking their spoons and putting them in her mouth. And a star will be born — unless they don't like my bathrobe.

Blankenship

"...What depresses me is all these damn talk shows about depression..."

Living in the country is even better than it used to be. Lots of new comforts have been added—as you'll soon see when you visit The Meadows in Hingham.

This fine group of attached single family homes offers the spaciousness and fine construction of yesteryear with conveniences grandma never even contemplated. There are kitchens with sunny breakfast bays . . . lots of fireplaces . . . vaulted and tray ceilings . . . large private courtyards . . . 2-car garages . . . swimming pool, whirlpool, tennis courts and a clubhouse. The location, on wildflower-strewn meadows in the lovely town of Hingham, is idyllic.

Two and three bedroom homes range from $155,000 to $210,000 during our opening period. The furnished models are open every day from 9 to 5. Take Exit 14 from Route 3 and follow Route 228 toward Hingham four miles, turn right on Free Street one mile to our entrance. Call (617) 740-1500 for an appointment.

CHS AFS students will see a piece of the world

By Mike Berger

For Michael Laitta, a Cohasset High School junior, his brave new world begins Feb. 20 in Goya, Argentina, a nation still harboring anti-American feelings.

Rebecca Lovering, like Michael, leaves the U.S. and the English language Feb. 20 for a farm close to a non-active volcano in Turriabla, Costa Rica.

Both were selected to participate in the one-year American Field Service program.

Because of the recent war of the Falkland Islands and the hostility between England and Argentina, Michael is one of only 14 North Americans placed in Argentina this year.

Both students will not speak English for one year. They must learn to speak and read Spanish.

They leave Cohasset Feb. 20 for Miami, Florida and a two-week "language crash course." Michael expects he will pick it up easily. It won't be too difficult for Rebecca because she has been studying Spanish for five years.

Ten students applied for the AFS program this year. Michael and Rebecca were selected for the one-year program, three students were selected for the summer program and one student was selected to spend a year in another community in the U.S.

Michael and Rebecca were selected after a series of interviews by the Student Selection Committee of the Cohasset branch of the AFS. Their families were also interviewed.

Basic requirements for selection are a "B" average in their courses and they must be either juniors or seniors.

Brenda Urmson, a parent whose daughter Amy has been living in Switzerland as an AFS student since August, said students must be "adaptible and flexible. They must be ready to share in a new culture and a new family."

MICHAEL LAITTA

Mike knows he is going into a hotbed of anti-American feeling in Goya, Argentina. But he feels if he acts as an individual, people will accept him as a person and not as an "American" who allied with England against Argentina.

"When I first heard I was going, I never thought they would send me there. Now, I am enamoured with Argentina. I have a lot of trust in AFS. They wouldn't put me anywhere where I was not wanted.

"I'm a little apprehensive and nervous. I will hate to leave Cohasset. I will miss my parents alot. Right now I am not concerned about anti-American feelings. I know their feelings. I am only one person and they can't blame it on me. I can't solve anything with a passionate plea about the U.S. It wouldn't do much good.

"They will know more about us through our actions. When they think of America, they will think of the good things and I hope they will get to know me as a person," Mike added.

Goya is located in the northeast portion of Argentina, in the county of Corrientes which is the size of Minnesota.

Located 800 miles northeast of Buenos Aires, it is a rivertown bordering the Parana River. Goya is also a trade center and central commerce route for tobacco and cattle raising.

Mike's new father will be Nunez Alfonso, 44, manager of a tobacco growers cooperative. His new mother will be Lia Alfonso, 42 and his new brothers and sisters will be Gonzalo, 14, Hector, 13 and Pablo, 12. Their grandmother, Artimea, 71 also lives in their two-story, four bedroom house.

Mike will start school March 9 and continue until Dec. 1. Three-hundred students, ranging from Grade 2 to Grade 13 make up the small public scool he will attend. There will be thirty-eight students in his junior class. He will study Biology, Chemistry, Physics, Math, Spanish Literature, English or French, Philosophy, Latin American Geography and Physical Education.

He must wear a uniform which includes a shirt, tie and jacket.

Goya's climate is similiar to Tampa, Florida, hot and humid. Right now it's summer with temperatures hovering close to 100 degrees Fahrenheit. The rainy season lasts from July to August.

Mike expects to eat a lot of meat because of the town's proximity to cattle growers. The biggest meal of the day is served about 1 p.m. and students are given a two-hour break for lunch. Mike will begin school at 7 a.m. and finish at 5 p.m.

The Alfonso family likes music and to entertain guests. Mike said television isn't as popular or "addictive" as it is here.

Mike was interested in applying for AFS when he became friendly with an AFS student from Finland last year.

"The reason I applied is to go for the challenge. Am I good enough? Am I ready to speak a language daily I don't know much about?"

"I remember in fifth grade I wrote in crayon I wanted to go into AFS. I guess it's been a challenge to me for years," said Mike.

REBECCA LOVERING

Where Mike will live in a residential setting, Becky will live on a farm 20 miles away from San Jose, the capital of Costa Rica, Central America, and close to a non-active volcano.

"It hasn't been active since 1963," she said.

Becky comes to Turriabla with some expectations from her family. They expect her to work on a farm and be "educated, nice and humble."

It's summer in Turriabla and close to 100 degrees. The rainy, tropical season will begin in May and last until November. School begins March 1 and continues until Nov. 15.

Turriabla is an agricultural center for coffee, bananas, sugar cane and cattle.

Becky's new family includes Salatiel Barboza, 59, and his wife, Maria, 54, Gilberth, 29, and two sisters, Janiniztia, 16 and Norma, a youth.

Becky said, "I have to get used to living in the boondocks with two dogs, chickens and ducks. But I think I will love it."

At least the farmhouse is huge with four bedrooms, two bathrooms, a living room, kitchen, diningroom, telephone and has a television.

Becky's new school is a Catholic facility and she must wear a uniform. Her average class size will be 35 students. Her expected studies include sports, religion, English, Spanish, Philosophy, History, Chemistry and Biology.

She acknowledges she has been studying Spanish for five years and can read and write it "pretty well. Now, I just have to speak it well."

The Barboza family is interested in sports, including soccer and running, and theater. Gilberth is a social worker. Becky believes there will be other Americans near her as many American business companies are located there.

One adjustment she has to make is to the Costa Rican diet which includes tuna, shark and turtle.

As a student in Cohasset public schools, Becky has always wanted to live in another country for a year.

Both Mike and Becky said they are not going to give up, no matter how hard life is. Both feel one year away from home will be an endurance test.

Mrs. Urmson added, "I haven't heard of any AFS student giving up ever. It's a traumatic change. But everyone learns to adjust."

Mike and Becky's parents, Angela and Lawrence Laitta of 16 Rustic Drive and Joyce and Daniel Curran Lovering of 13 Church Street, are both excited but nervous about their children leaving Cohasset for a year.

"I think all parents are nervous about their children leaving for a strange foreign land. I know I was about Amy leaving for Switzerland. But you also have to realize you can't hold your children back if they want to go. It's a time to be excited and also a time for apprehension," Urmson said.

Rebecca Lovering and Mike Laitta, both 16, leave home and Cohasset High School Feb. 20 for Costa Rica and Argentina, respectively, for a year in the AFS program. (Greg Derr photo)

Cub Scout happenings...

January 13 Pack #38 invited Boston Celtic guard-forward M.L. Carr to visit at the Deer Hill School. Lou Tilly, Channel 4 sportscaster, accompanied M.L.

Kenneth Ekberg, principal of Deer Hill and Mr. Dennis Kuntz, gym teacher at Deer Hill, assisted Linda Farrag in arranging the visit with Channel 4 Sports Producer Alan Miller. Jack Cramer, principal of the Osgood School and the Cubs from Osgood attended the assembly too.

Dr. Michael Equi met with the Webelos at the Cushing room Jan. 20. The Cubs were able to view various specimens under the microscope that Dr. Equi had collected. One of the Cubs volunteered some plaque so the boys could see what accumulates around teeth. The boys were fascinated with the microscope and had many questions to ask. The boys enjoyed the "small world."

The Bears listened to Marilyn Pope at the Pratt Library speak on the "Folklores." The boys were able to take books out so they too can explore the legends.

The January tour of the Commonwealth Winery in Plymouth has been postponed until Spring. Mary Kennedy will arrange the tour.

COMING EVENTS

The week of Feb. 6-12 marks the 73rd anniversary of the Boy Scouts of America and the introduction of a new national theme, "Catch the Scouting Spirit." Cub Scouts, Boy Scouts and Explorers are urged to participate in special activities during the week to honor their chartered organizations and promote their unit programs within the community.

Feb. 6 is Scout Sunday. Recognizing that duty to God is an integral part of Scouting, members are encouraged to attend religious services in uniform on scout Sunday or Scout Sabbath on Feb. 12.

If the majority of the scouts attend their church services, participate in a community service (ex. assisting in crushing bottles or separating at the dump etc.) and attend a Scouting organized function such as the Blue and Gold Dinner, the Pack will receive a participation banner for the flag.

The Blue and Gold Dinner is being planned. The tentative dates are Feb. 13 or Feb. 20. After the menu has been established (either catered or den participation) the individual dens will be responsible for a centerpeice and invitations.

The guests include: guest of honor, to be announced; District Executive, Bill Roberts; Scout Master, Merle Brown; Scouting Coordinator, Loyd Prescot; and District Commissioner, Bill Garside.

The Blue and Gold Dinner committee member are: Den 1 Janice Bates (0142), Den 2 Eileen Norris (9855), Den 3 Diana Moe (0777), Den 4, Volunteer needed, Den 5 Sue DiMichael (6192), Den 6 Linda Geary (1071), Den 7 Alice McCarthy (1691), Den 8 Volunteer needed, Webelos Nancy McLaughlin (0167), and Jane Long (1281).

Feb. 24, "Aladdin and the Wonderful Lamp" at New England Life Hall, Boston at 2 p.m. (Cubs, their families and friends are invited to attend.) Anyone interested in carpooling or following cars will meet at Deer Hill School Parking Lot at 12:10 p.m. The group will leave promptly at 12:20 p.m. Directions and tickets will be distributed early.

March 30, Pinewood Derby-Pack Meeting. All cubs must have pinewood derby cars built and ready to race. Any questions call Den Leaders.

Pro-Family Forum meeting

The Pro-Family Forum of the South Shore held its first 1983 meeting January 20. Pro-Family Forum's monthly meetings are opportunities to become informed and motivated regarding family-related issues and state and federal legislation.

Senior citizen news...

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (R), 3rd Plymouth District, announced the various services, reductions and other information for the senior citizens of her district.

Murray, who represents Cohasset, Hingham and Hull, said, "The problems of the 'Young At Heart' in my district are of great concern to me. Many calls come to my office from our senior citizens.

"I am pleased that we have such capable groups, associations and social clubs to assist this increasing population in Cohasset, Hingham and Hull."

The elderly breakdown in Rep. Murray's District is as follows: Cohasset, 1,201; Hingham, 2,897 and Hull, 1,416. "One will not find a more deserving group than our senior citizens," said Murray. "This age group worked hard, raised families, paid taxes for not only their children's education, but several generations of children. They have been and are the backbone of American traditions and history," she said.

ELDER HOTLINE TOLL FREE 1-800-882-2003,4,5

Call this number with any questions concerning the elderly. The line is open Monday through Friday 9-5 p.m. If your question cannot be answered immediately, the staff will research it and get back to you.

AUTO INSURANCE REDUCTION

If you are 65 years-old or over, own your own car, and have not had an accident in the past year, you are entitled to a 25 percent reduction in your motor vehicle insurance. Inform your agent of your age when renewing your car insurance.

EDUCATION OPPORTUNITIES

Persons age 65 and over may enroll in some Massachusetts state or community colleges, free, if space is available. Yearly income must be less than $7,000. Contact the college of your choice or call 770-7302 or 7305.

FOOD STAMPS

Food stamps are available for those who meet the following eligibility requirements; a family of one, receiving monthly income of $507 or less with less than $1,500 in resources (included savings and checking accounts, property); and a family of two, receiving monthly income of $674 gross or less with under $1,500 in resources. Contact local welfare office at Weymouth: 335-6000.

FUEL ASSISTANCE

Fuel assistance programs, under state and federal law, yearly income for one person must be under $7,515. All SSI recipients are eligible.

Contact Alfred Odermatt at 383-1283 for information regarding the program.

HOMEMAKER SERVICES

Homemaker services provide food shopping, meal preparation, housekeeping and personal errand running. The purpose is to enable seniors to remain in their own homes rather than going to nursing homes.

Any person 60 years of age or older may apply for the service if monthly income does not exceed $705 for an individual or $922 for a couple.

If you meet the requirements, a case manager will then assess your situation. The service is free.

REACHING OUT

There are many opportunities for retired citizens to use their skills and time to aid our community. Some are volunteer, while others pay a small salary. The Elder Service Corps (727-7009) provides part-time (18 hours per week) work at a monthly stipend of $110.

RETIRED SENIOR VOLUNTEERS

RSVP, 762-7120, places senior citizens in volunteer positions in their communities.

SCOPE

"Service Corps of Retired Executives," 223-3237, provides retired executives with the opportunity to give volunteer counseling to small businessmen.

RECREATION

Hunting and fishing licenses are available at half price to persons between the ages of 65 and 70. These licenses are free to persons over 70. Contact your Town Clerk.

Persons age 65 and over and the handicapped are allowed free permits to cut firewood at specified state forests and parks. This "Cut a Cord" program runs from September to the end of November.

For a list of the specified forests and parks and additional information call 727-3180.

TOWN COUNCIL ON AGING

These Official Agencies coordinate and administer elderly services in your town. Each sponsors shopping trips and monthly day trips for shopping and recreation.

OLDER AMERICANS ADVOCACY ASSISTANCE PROGRAM

Call 727-7273 if you need help finding a nursing home/rest home bed, or if you think you have been discriminated against, or if you need information about Medicaid, Social Security or SSI; or if you have a question about patients' rights, tax abatements or consumer protection laws.

Each town has a Council for the Aging. The telephone numbers are: Cohasset, 383-1163; Hingham, 749-0582, and Hull, 925-1108.

The South Shore Elder Services, Inc., is located in Cohasset and serves people over 60 years of age in Cohasset, Hingham and Hull as well as several other towns.

The phone number is 383-9790. South Shore Elder Services is funded by the Department of Elderly Affairs. Among the services provided are: information and referral regarding benefits and services; case management for Home Care Services; homemaker services, chore services which include heavy household cleaning and minor repairs, medical transportation for those Councils on Aging who do not provide transportation. (Cohasset, Hingham and Hull Councils on Aging provide such transportation).

Nutrition is a very important service and includes a hot meals program five days a week at noon. This program is funded by the Older Americans Act, but those who participate are encouraged to donate 75 cents for lunch.

Cohasset "Young At Heart" may go to the Senior Citizens Center, 197 Samoset Avenue, Hull or Central Junior High School, 220 Central Street, Hingham. Home delivered meals and legal, health and winterization services are also provided by the staff of the South Shore Elder Services, Inc.

Please call Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray at home, 383-1000, or the State House, 722-2400, if you have any questions regarding these services.

Volunteer assistance available for income tax returns

The Volunteer Assistance Program for preparing income tax returns for the low-income, elderly and handicapped persons will be Feb. 1 to April 14. This program is sponsored by the American Association of Retired Persons in cooperation with the Internal Revenue Service. Trained volunteers will assist the taxpayers, free of charge, in the preparation of their Federal and Massachusetts income tax returns.

Low-income, elderly and handicapped taxpayers who wish to avail themselves of this service should call 383-1561 for further information and appointments.

Three signatures needed for all school warrants

The state Bureau of Accounts notified the Cohasset School Committee and board member Martha Gjesteby that all school warrants should only be signed at a posted public meeting and with at least a majority of three signatures. The comment will be given to town counsel for review. In December, Gjesteby had complained to the state the school business office was trying to pay the bills without the approval of a majority of the committee at a public meeting.

Registration for mini classes at YWCA

The YWCA in Marshfield is having special mini classes for the Easter holiday. Registration for these classes will be held Monday, Feb. 14 at the Y.

The rug selected for a room can make or break it. It can create a mood, even with an odd shape, or cover a bad floor. Rugs and carpets, whether wall to wall, area or scatter rugs add a sense of warmth to a room even if they are in one of the so called cold colors. Obviously, then, the color chosen is important. The same basic guidelines used in choosing colors by other home decorating areas should be employed by your decorator or designer. Dark colors provide a sense of warmth and closeness. A dark carpet can make a large room look much cosier. Conversely, light colors give a sense of spaciousness, opening up a room.

Carpeting offers warmth, defines areas, softens slick interiors and sets the theme for home color schemes. Will new paint complete the picture? Whether you have a modest or unlimited budget Bound Brook Paint & Hardware can accommodate you. We're here Mon-Wed 8-6, Thurs & Fri till 8:30, Sat till 5 in N. Scituate at 763 Country Way and our phone is 545-3624. We feature Kyanize paints which are smooth, long-lasting and right for any decor.

DECORATING TIP:
Dark colored carpets tend to give a room a sense of lowered ceilings.

Obituaries

Mary Kennedy

Mary V. (Burke) Kennedy, 94, of Cohasset died Jan. 24 at home.

Born in Boston, she graduated from Boston schools. She spent most of her life in Allston and had lived in Milton five years before moving to Cohasset four years ago.

Kennedy was a member of the Firemen's Ladies Auxiliary.

She was the wife of the late James A. Kennedy, a former deputy fire chief of Boston's Brighton section.

She leaves four daughters, Loretta A. Kennedy, Helen Clancy, Mary Mellon and Catherine Gillespie; a sister, Loretta O'Connell, several grandchildren and several great-grandchildren.

A funeral Mass was celebrated in St. Anthony's Church. Burial was in New Calvary Cemetery, Boston.

Marjorie Ingram

Marjorie J. (McDiarmid) Ingram, 67, of Cohasset, active in civic and church work on the South Shore, died Saturday at Brigham and Women's Hospital, Boston.

Born in Mansfield, she had lived in Cohasset for 44 years.

She was a graduate of Mansfield High School and the Boston University School of Practical Arts and Letters.

She was a secretary for United Business Services.

She was a former deaconness for the Second Congregational Church, a member of the Pilgrim Association of the United Church of Christ, a worker for the Cohasset Village fair, a member of the Amateur Gardeners of Cohasset, a volunteer worker for the Consignment Shop of Social Service League of Cohasset, a volunteer at South Shore Hospital in Weymouth and a volunteer in the Cohasset Senior Citizen Hot Lunch program.

She leaves her husband, Osborne F. Ingram; a son, Alan F. Ingram of Evergreen, Colo.; two daughters, Judith S. Hatfield of Hillsboro, N.H., and Martha Yates of Jamestown, R.I.; a brother, Joseph W. McDiarmid of El Cajon, Calif.; a sister, Jane Findlater of Mansfield; four grandchildren and several nieces and nephews.

A memorial service was conducted Tuesday at the Second Congregational Church. Private burial was in Spring Brook Cemetery, Mansfield.

Donations may be made to the Second Congregational Church.

Engagement

Hanlon—Kearney

Mr. and Mrs. George F. Hanlon of Cohasset announce the engagement of their daughter Ellen L. Hanlon to Mr. John F. Kearney, son of Mrs. George W. Brooke and the late William J. Kearney.

Both are graduates of Cohasset High School. Miss Hanlon, a Hart model, will graduate from Fisher Junior College this spring. Mr. Kearney is employed by Campbell Electric.

A June 25 wedding is planned.

Oliver Woodruff attends CLF retreat

Oliver Woodruff attended the annual retreat of the board of directors of the worldwide Church of the Larger Fellowship Unitarian Universalist (CLF) held at the Clara Barton Conference Center, North Oxford January 20-22.

The sixteen member board and the CLF staff explored in depth the programs, membership needs, and outreach activities of the unique Church by Mail.

Originally created to serve geographically isolated religious liberals, the far flung fellowship has included Peace Corps volunteers, U.S. ambassadors, military personnel, and during his life work in Africa, noted humanitarian Albert Schweitzer.

Mary Benbow to address Osgood PTO

Mary Benbow, Occupational Therapist and Developmental Needs Coordinator for the Cohasset School System, will address the Joseph Osgood chapter of the PSO on Wednesday, Feb. 9 at 9:30 a.m. in room 107 of the high school.

Babysitting will be provided on the premises at no charge and there will be refreshments.

Benbow promises that her talk will have "lots of content." She will speak on "Development, Dominance, and Hand-Skills," a topic which is the major thrust of her present graduate studies at Boston University.

"People have no idea where dominance emerges," she maintains. "It is an inter-related thing." She claims that it is unfortunate that Americans seem to promote "the hurried child concept" and almost "freeze them into patterns" before normal sequence of development can occur.

Martha Equi and Pat Baird, Osgood representatives to the PSO, have arranged the meeting. All are welcome to attend.

Public school early release day Feb. 10

Thursday, Feb. 10 will be an early release day in the Cohasset Public Schools. There will be no afternoon Kindergarten and other students will be dismissed according to the following schedule:

Junior/Senior High School at 12:20 p.m. Deer Hill School at 12:40 p.m. Joseph Osgood School at 1:00 p.m.

Lunch will be served in all of the schools.

This early release day has been authorized by the Cohasset School Committee in order to allow staff members at the Junior/Senior High School, Deer Hill School, and Joseph Osgood to take part in Curriculum Update Workshops.

Students' work on display at Paul Pratt Library

A new exhibit of art by Deer Hill and Osgood School students was hung at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library by Carolyn Horn, children's art exhibit chairman for the Friends of the Library.

Grade six students in teams of two have created three-dimensional cut-paper art resulting in a very humorous portrait gallery of undersea mermen, circus people, animals and African masks.

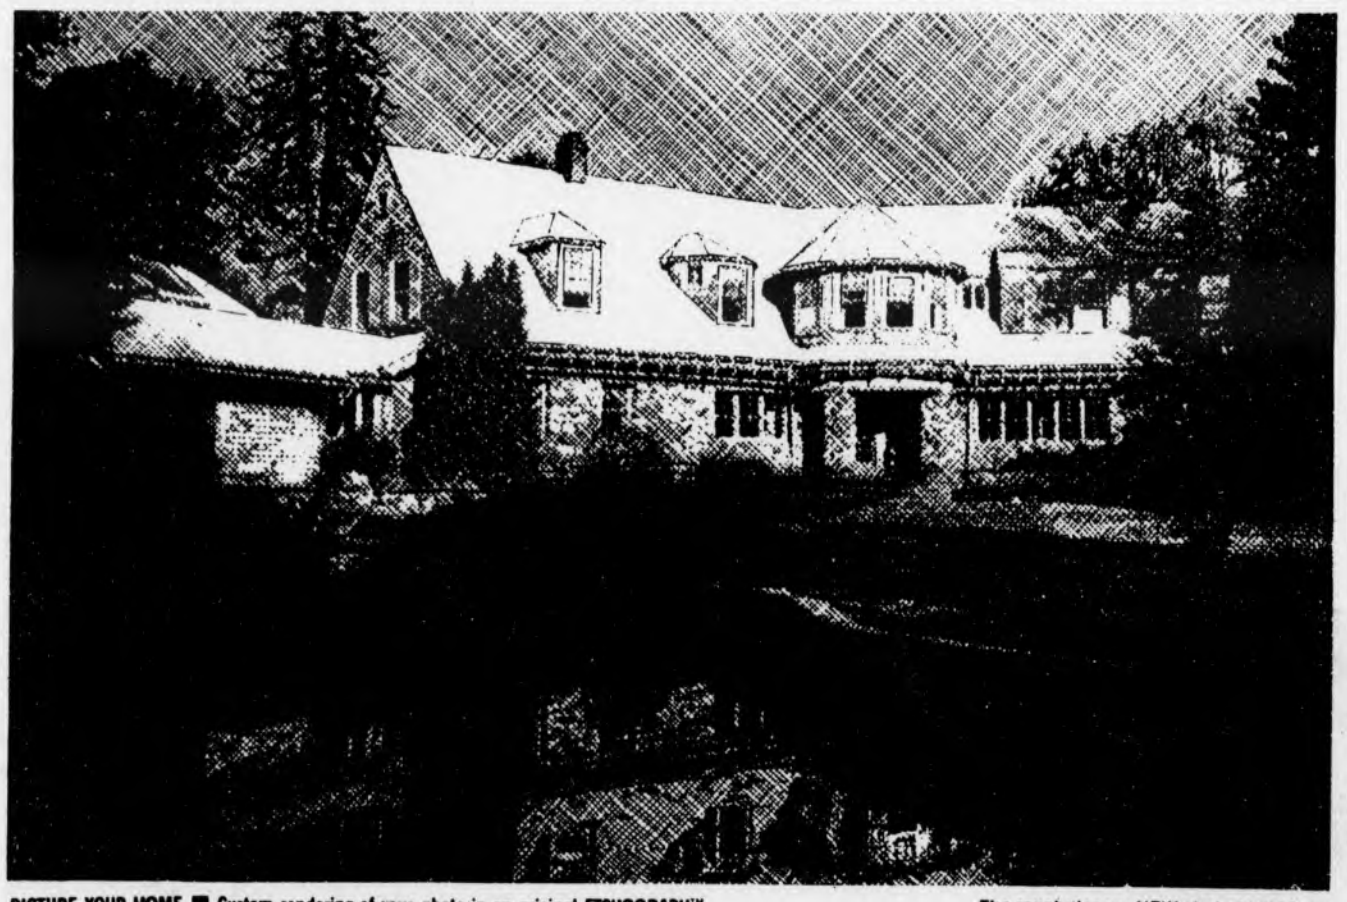
Using chalk and acrylics on blue blackgrounds, second graders composed lovely snow scenes of Cohasset that project a sense of cold and ice.

This display will remain in the children's room of the library for the next month.

Boosters Club to meet Feb. 9

The Cohasset Boosters Club will meet February 9 at the home of Joyce Hoffman, 74 Pond Street. The Winter Sports Banquet and the annual dance will be discussed.

Anyone interested in attending this meeting or working with the Boosters Club is welcome.



For further information, call 383-0292 or 383-1868. The Club continues the sale of blue V-neck sweaters which can be purchased from Carol Meers, 383-1587.

Safety poster contest

AAA Massachusetts is planning its 39th Annual School Traffic Safety Poster Contest to encourage students to think about traffic safety and to learn by doing.

1. Any student in a public, parochial or private elementary or secondary school who is less than 21 years of age may submit an entry in AAA Massachusetts' Regional Poster Contest. Posters will be judged locally and four $75 checks will be awarded as prizes.

2. All entries, including the Massachusetts contest winners, will be forwarded to AAA National Headquarters for judging in the AAA national contest where $12,000 in U.S. Savings Bonds will be awarded as prizes.

Barn fire provides a worthy training exercise

The black plume of smoke rising from a long driveway at the rear of the abandoned Beechwood fire station Saturday morning was not from a "fire."

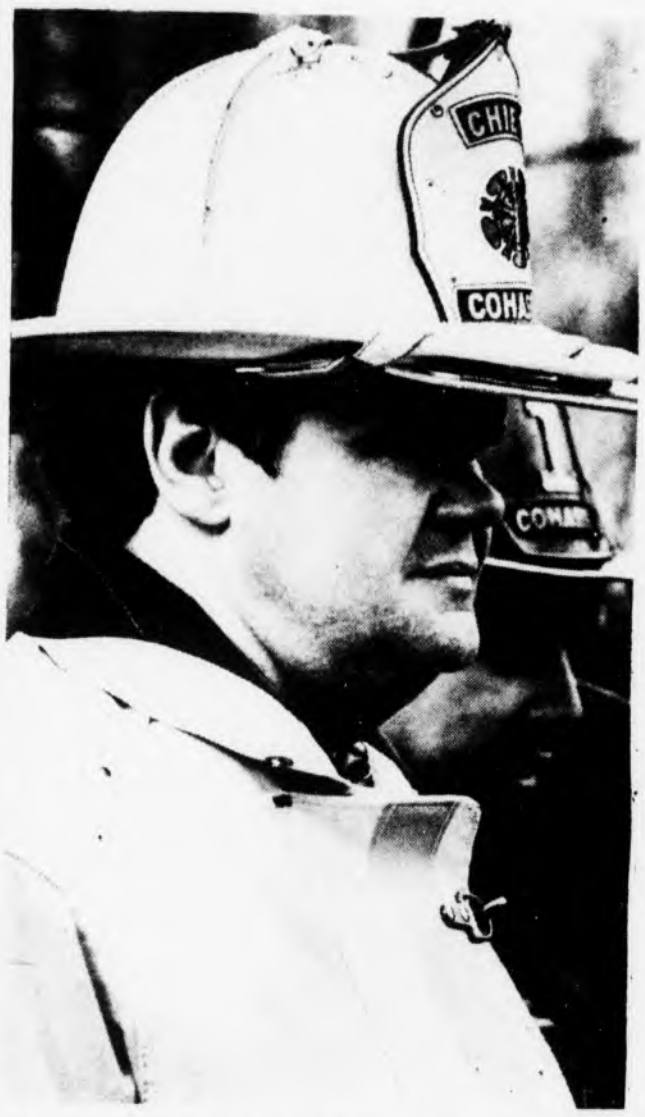
It was a 12 x 14 foot barn burning as part of a training session for the Cohasset call firemen.

Fire Chief Martin Dooley said when carpenter George Gonsalves, 43, of 508 C Beechwood Street applied for a burning permit for the old barn, which he said housed "a horse and two cows years ago," Dooley decided to turn it into a training session.

According to department policy, the owner should participate. Accordingly, Gonsalves poured kerosene on the barn and lit the fire at 8:57 a.m.

The black smoke enveloped a horse chestnut tree next to the flaming barn. Gonsalves said he planted the tree as a boy. The tree started steaming and as call firemen directed water on it, Gonsalves said he would be glad to cut it down because it was a "dirty tree" which shed a lot of litter.

Harry Silvia of Arrowwood Street estimated the number of firefighters attending was 20. Silvia, who is a welder, manned the hose connection at the Beechwood and Church Streets' hydrant.



As the flames died, the debris was hosed down. It was all over at 11:49 a.m.

Saturday's exercise climaxed a week of new beginnings for call firemen. Chief Dooley deleted eight men from the list as they had never reported for a call in two years.

Dooley said he has hired four call firefighters in the past week and added a new captain. He now has an active force of 17 call men and would like to build up the ranks to as many as 30 men.

Dooley said he hired four call firemen "through word of mouth, not advertising."

Dooley said, "this is the first of these programs for the call firemen." He wants another drill in cold weather rescue suits at the harbor in two weeks (Feb. 12) because of the recent drownings off Cohasset shores and wants to use private funding for training a scuba team.

Fire Chief Martin Dooley supervises fire drill for call firefighters.

Call firemen conclude a successful practice run at Doane and Beechwood Streets.

from the kitchen

By Joan Pinkham

For most of us, this is a good time of year for catching up, which is just what I propose to do in this week's column. This little interlude between the holidays and the lure of the outdoors has got to be good for something, even if it's only the tedium of removing the clutter of closets and attics. Not that the cherished recipes languishing in my files can be rated 'clutter' but, because there's only space for two or three in the column each week, I have quite a backlog. If the urge to tidy drawers should hit you and you come across some recipes or household hints, don't throw them away, send them to me and I'll tuck them away (neatly, of course) for a future column. Among our Hingham readers who have been good enough to send in recipes is Ann Grassie and here is how she makes

CRANBERRY PORK CHOPS

4 lean pork chops, 1'' thick
2 T brown sugar
2 T vinegar
8½ oz. can pineapple slices
½ c. boiling water
1 chicken bouillion cube
1 bell pepper, cut into strips
2 T cornstarch
Small can cranberry sauce

Drain pineapple, saving syrup. Combine all but pineapple and chops. Cook over low heat until jelly melts. In 2 T cold water stir in the 2 T cornstarch until smooth and add to the sauce and stir until thickened. Set aside. Brown chops in a large skillet. Pour sauce over chops and simmer one hour, or until tender. Put pineapple on each chop and baste to heat about 6 minutes.

Forsythia branches are full of buds, so it's a good time to bring in an armful to force into flowers. You'll be glad you did on a gray February day. It's best to submerge the branches in lukewarm water (use the bathtub) for two or more hours. A soaking wet bath towel will keep branches under water. With a little patience, the flowers can be rooted after they fade. A friend was inspired to put the rooted sticks in a bucket of sand, kept to sprinkle on icy door steps and got six sturdy little forsythia shrubs. Another friend, Sally O'Reilly, has sent us this recipe from her aunt in San Francisco.

VERMICELLI SALAD

16 oz. pkg. vermicelli
1½ c. chopped parsley
4 chopped green onions
1½ c. mayonnaise
2 T lemon juice
1/4 c. wine vinegar
1 T dry mustard
Capers — optional, but great

Cook vermicelli according to pkg. directions. While still warm, mix with other ingredients. Best made ahead of time — will keep four or five days. Serves 12.

In case you're toying with the idea of dieting now that Lent is in the offing, it might be well to have one last fling by whipping up a batch of Milly Carr's

PEANUT BUTTER TEMPTATIONS

½ c. butter
½ c. peanut butter
½ c. sugar
½ c. brown sugar
1 egg
1 tsp. vanilla
1 1/4 c. flour
3/4 tsp. soda
½ tsp. salt.
1 pkg. mini chocolate-covered peanut butter cups, 40 to pkg.

Cream butter, peanut butter and sugars. Beat in egg and vanilla. Mix well. Sift dry ingredients and blend in. Preheat over to 375 degrees. Shape batter in 1'' balls. Place in ungreased small muffin tins. Bake 8-10 min. Remove immediately and press a peanut butter cup in each until only top shows. Let set a while before removing from tins. Yield: 40 cookies.

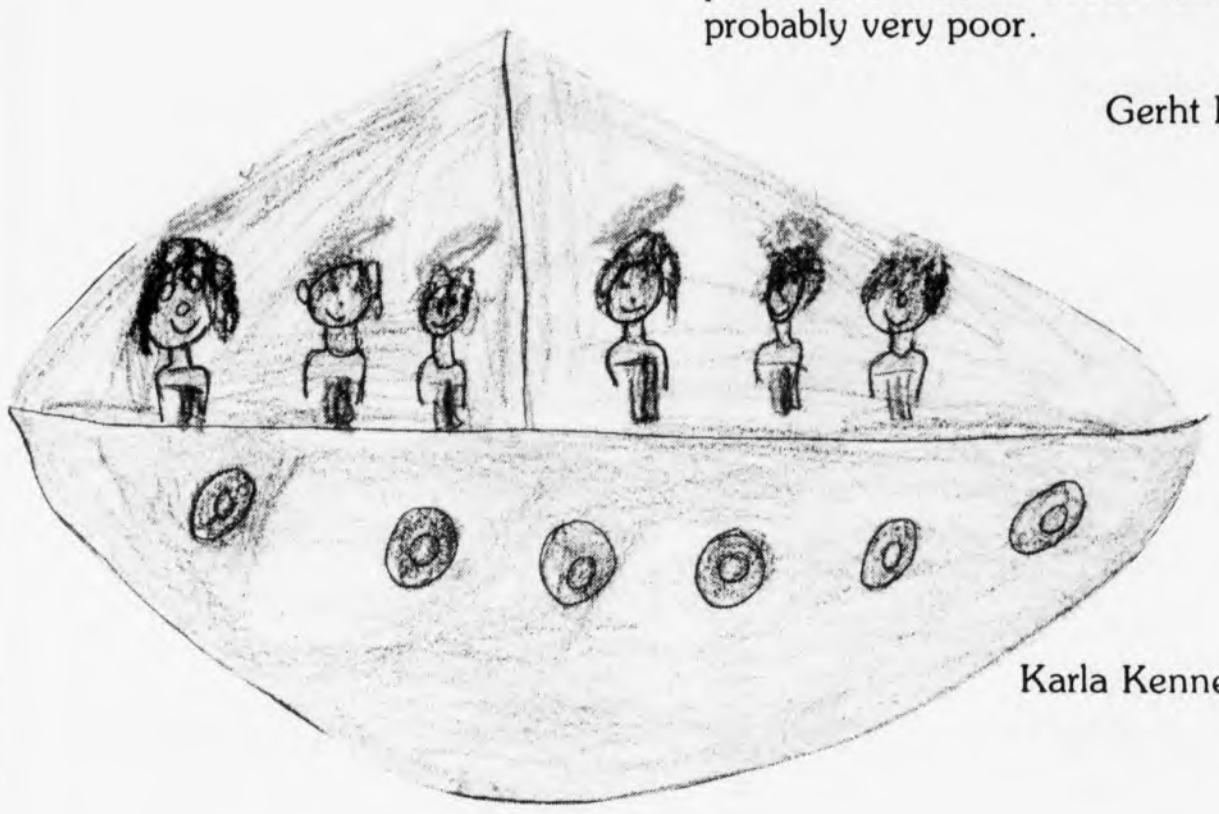
LINES FOR YOUNG READERS

This week's Marinette page comes to you courtesy of Marie Price's first grade students.

The theatre-in-residency program at the Joseph Osgood School concluded with a performance by the Just Around The Corner Company of "Orpheus," a participatory musical play about the legendary musician.



Mrs. Price's students wrote stories about the play, some with illustrations, which are presented here.

There was a man named Orpheus. He lived in Greece and was probably very poor.

Gerht Lubitz

Tyler Studds

Karla Kennedy

Cerebus was a three-headed dog who guarded the gates and they ate the stone. Orpheus was in love with Eurydice. She did not listen about the amulet. Hades, god of the underworld, got snakes who bit Eurydice. The lyre is a musical instrument now seen as stars in the sky. Jason was strong and he looked for the Golden Fleece.

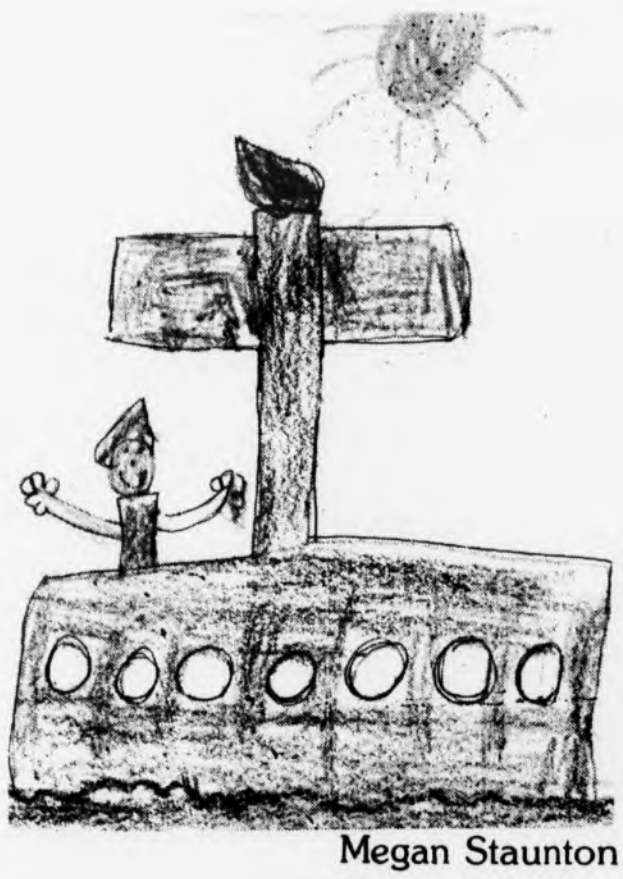
Courtney Norton

Eurydice was Orpheus's wife. Orpheus gave his magic amulet with magic power to her. Zeus wants to give Orpheus immortality. No, he said, I must not go without Eurydice. I love my wife and I must not go without my wife.

Hades was the god of the underworld. He waited to get Orpheus's wife and take Orpheus to the underworld. Cerebus was a three-headed dog. He waited to eat the rock and Orpheus. But Orpheus played his music.

Diane Saldi

There was a man Orpheus. He sang best. When he sang the birds listened to him. Eurydice had magic power. The poison snake bit her. The day Orpheus came back, Eurydice was not there.



Anne Lindgren

Anne Lindgren

Once upon a time Orpheus was in love with Eurydice. Orpheus went down to the underworld. Cerebus was a three-headed dog. The mixed-up rock was afraid of the three-headed dog. Orpheus played his music. The three-headed dog fell asleep. Orpheus went in. He saw Eurydice.

Timmy Conroy

Megan Staunton

Zeus wanted to give Orpheus immortality, but Orpheus does not want to live without Eurydice. If Orpheus finds the lyre he will live forever. His love Eurydice gets taken away by Hades, god of the underworld; he comes and drags Eurydice to the underworld. Jason wants the Golden Fleece and he called on Orpheus to come with him.

CHS sports update...

By Alana O'Brien

HOCKEY

Saturday night the CHS hockey team traveled to the Armstrong Arena in Plymouth to battle with league opponent Duxbury for first place.

Both teams went into the game with a 6-1 record. However, Duxbury who has never been beaten at home by Cohasset in the past three years, came out on top in a 5-4 decision.

Duxbury took the lead with a goal three and one-half minutes into the game. Twenty-six seconds later Skipper Dan Bowen netted a goal off a power play with John Casey and Rich Evans assisting to tie the score at 1-1.

Duxbury led 2-1 at the end of the first period with a late goal.

Early into the second period senior center Don O'Neill netted a goal unassisted to tie the score at 2-2.

Danny Bowen took over to break the tie on another power play goal with assists from John Casey and Rich Evans at the 6:51 mark.

Duxbury's Dave Warner scored two unanswered goals and Dragon Andy Johnson put in the game winner at the 12:14 mark.

Midway through the third period junior center Joe Hoffman netted Cohasset's final goal with an assist from freshman Jeff O'Neill to bring the final score to 5-4.

In a last minute desperation attempt Coach Burnell pulled goalie Mark Brown for an extra skater but the Skippers were unable to score.

Goalie Mark Brown had 25 saves for Cohasset.

In earlier hockey action Cohasset beat Abington's Green Wave, 5-3.

Senior co-captain Don O'Neill led Cohasset with four goals and an assist while junior Joe Hoffman added one goal and two assists. Senior Rich Evans had two assists and John Casey had one assist.

Coach Tom Burrell felt this match was similar to their earlier match against Abington. He said it was an up and down game and Abington kept coming back at them.

The squad is now 7-3-2 and 6-2 in the League.

Senior co-captains Rich Evans and Don O'Neill said their squad has eight games left and they have to win four of them to go to the tournament.

"We have the potential to go to the states and if we play like a team, we're there!" said O'Neill.

J.V. HOCKEY

The junior varsity hockey team is looking great this season. Even though the boys don't play a regular League schedule, they're up every morning at 5 a.m. for practice and play games as they come.

Roster: Coach Frank Evans, Jr.; Ken Ramsey, Peter Sandblom, Mike Abbruzzese, Robbie Holland, Kevin Leary, Bob Lynch, Chris Cox, Chris Kultrides, Chris Powers and Scott Patrolia.

Also, Greg Ferriera, Jim Roy, Kurt Weisenfluh, Bob Durkin, Jeff Hartwell, Todd Henry, Phil Mahoney, John Hoyler, Todd Fitzpatrick, Jamie Hoffman, Danny Pompeo, and Craig Mulcahy.

GYMNASTICS

The CHS gymnastics team lost its second League match in two years to Hanover, 110.75 to 98.7.

Senior co-captain Karen Ekberg led Cohasset with 26.5 points overall and took third place.

The squad edged over Duxbury 99.6 to 90.6.

Senior Karen Ekberg won three events and tied for first in the fourth. She led all gymnasts with 27.35 points.

Freshman Susie McMahon and sophomore Julia Sechen put on fine performances for Cohasset.

The squad, now 5-2, faces Norwell Wednesday at 7 p.m.

BOYS BASKETBALL

The boys varsity basketball team traveled to Duxbury last week and were defeated 64-57.

Coach Eddie Minelli felt his team played a solid game but were out-hustled in the end.

Freshman point-guard Tony Bogarty led the Skippers with 25 points, nine assists, eight steals and six rebounds.

Seniors Jack Maloney and Dan Anderson played a strong floor game for Cohasset.

Last Friday the squad met the Hanover Indians who are in first place in the League and were defeated (87-57).

Senior Dan Anderson and junior Dave Parcomb led Cohasset with 14 points apiece. Coach Minelli said his team gave Hanover a good game, and is expected to go far in the tournament.

The Skippers travel to Abington Friday night for League action.

GIRLS BASKETBALL

The girls varsity basketball team traveled to Duxbury, falling to the Dragons in a 38-32 loss.

Coach Fallon said the girls played an outstanding first half (21-12), but couldn't maintain their effectiveness in the second half.

High scorer of the game was Gia Barresi with 11 points, Beverly Mullaney followed close behind with eight points.

The girls team also faced the Hanover Indians. Unfortunately, the Skippers committed too many unnecessary errors which cost them the game. The final score was 50-44. Again, Gia Barresi led Cohasset with 18 points. Beverly Mullaney and Carla Lucas combined to make 20 points for the Skippers.

Both Mullaney and Barresi are among the top 10 scorers in the League.

Friday night the girls play Abington away.

ATHLETES OF THE WEEK

Senior co-captain Don O'Neill scored a goal in each period of a recent hockey match versus Abington to lead Cohasset to a 5-3 victory. Don finished the game with four goals and an assist.

O'Neill, a two-year starter, leads the League in scoring with 16 goals and five assists for a total of 21 points.

Senior gymnast Karen Ekberg took first place in three events and tied for the fourth event to lead her squad over League opponent Duxbury. Ekberg finished first with 27.35 points.

Karen, a three-year all-star, has been a key factor on this year's team and is expected to be named to the all-star team.

'Dangerous Corner' now in rehearsal

By David Wadsworth

The Cohasset Dramatic Club's 1983 winter show, J.B. Priestley's mystery "Dangerous Corner" is now in rehearsal. Production crews are readying the Town Hall stage for scheduled performances on Thursday, Mar. 3 to Saturday, Mar. 5.

Directing the play is Judy Holmes of Hingham, production manager is Betty Miessner of Scituate, Charles Wheelwright of Cohasset will create the stage lighting effect, and Wayne Miessner is scenic designer.

Priestley's play, written in the early 1930's, is an "English Drawing Room" mystery and was first produced at the Lyric Theatre, London, England on May 7, 1932. Its New York opening took place at the Empire Theater on October 27 of the same year.

Playwright Priestley, whose first name is seldom used (by his own preference) was born in 1894 at Bradford, England, and was educated at Trinity Hall, Cambridge. His full name is John Boynton Priestley, but like the famous "O.J." of current fame, (or perhaps "E.T." of today's theater), the playwright usually has insisted on the abbreviated form.

J.B. Priestley's rise to prominance in the theatrical world dates from 1931, when he collaborated with another author to write "The Good Companions," a play starring Sir John Gielgud. That play ran for 331 performances at His Majesty's Theatre, London.

Of the more than 30 plays written by Priestley, "Dangerous Corner" often is considered to be his best. Two of Priestley's other plays have been performed by the Cohasset Dramatic Club, "An Inspector Calls" and "Laburnum Grove."

A prolific writer of novels, essays, criticisms and histories, Priestley has published over 40 volumes covering a wide range of subjects. It is the plays, however, that form the best known of his works.

The Cohasset production has a cast of seven reenacting the fictional events leading to a discovery of the occurrences preceding the demise of a mutual friend. Did Martin, the deceased, actually commit suicide, or was there another cause not discovered by the police?

Priestley's characters contend with surprising turns of fact and fantasy as they persistently seek the truth. Even as the real facts finally emerge, the playwright pulls a masterful trick upon his characters and the audience, to provide a surprise ending which seems to close the matter for all time.

The cast for the forthcoming Dramatic Club presentation of "Dangerous Corner" is: Sydney Browne as Maude Mockeridge, Andrea Dassori as Olwen Peel, Sarah DiLima as Freda Chatfield, Jane Turner as Betty Whitehouse, Joe Coyle as Charles Stanton, Carol Slotnick as Gordon Whitehouse and Derek Holmes as Robert Chatfield.

The March performance of "Dangerous Corner" marks the mid-point of the Cohasset Dramatic Club's 62nd continuous year of theatrical activity on the historic Cohasset Town Hall stage.

Building Department report for 1982

By Bob Dennis
Building Inspector

The following is a report of the Building Department for the year 1982:

Building Permits issued, 395; Building Permits denied, 3; Building Permits voided, 5; Building Permit fees paid to treasurer, $14,324; and estimated cost of all permits issued, $3,861,989.

There were: 31 permits for new houses issued; 166 permits for additions or alterations; 45 permits for wood or coal stoves; 82 permits for reroofing; 13 permits to rebuild chimneys; 24 permits for signs; 11 permits for fence installations; 8 permits for solar panels to be installed; 5 permits for pools issued; and 6 permits for non residential buildings.

A further breakdown of the permits issued is on file in the Building Department Office.

Buildings inspected for group occupancy, 39; Occupancy inspection fees paid to treasurer, 1159; Plumbing Permits issued, 151; Plumbing fees paid to treasurer, 2,928; plumbing inspectors paid for services, 2,244.

A Construction Supervisor's License, under the state Building Code, as of Sept. 1, is required to pull a permit from this office.

After 10 years of dedicated service, James Litchfield resigned from his position as Building Inspector of the Town of Cohasset on Sept. 30, 1982. I was appointed to the position of Building Inspector on Oct. 20, 1982, and took office on a full-time basis Nov. 1, 1982.

Art Center invites craftspeople to join

The South Shore Art Center's gallery selection committee invites professional artists, photographers and fine craftspeople to submit their work for consideration for membership in the Center.

Original work must be delivered to the Center, 103 Ripley Road, Friday, Feb. 11 between noon and 4 p.m.

A jury of three from the gallery selection committee will make its selections for membership. Work must be picked up Tuesday, Feb. 15, between noon and 4 p.m.

Five works of art each must be submitted by artists working in painting, drawing or pastel and 10 pieces each in photography, sculpture and crafts. Slides are not acceptable for gallery selection.

Artists who are selected for gallery membership are eligible to exhibit one work each month in the Center's gallery and to have five small works in the bins. Artists may also apply once a year for consideration for a one- or two-person show in the Invitational Gallery.

The 1982-1983 gallery selection committee includes:

Don Lettis, former academic dean, Mass. College of Art, professor and painter, represented by Gallery Naga, Boston. Member of the Board of Directors, South Shore Art Center.

Walter Frost, photographer and columnist for the Boston Globe, member of South Shore Camera Club and Photographic Society of America. He has had numerous exhibits and won many awards along the South Shore.

John Lanza, painting and drawing instructor, Art Institute, Cambridge Adult Education, South Shore Art Center, and Boston University, conservationist with Iso Papo, exhibited M.F.A., Painters Exhibition.

Elaine Wentworth, noted watercolorist, Guild of Boston Artists, American Watercolor Society, N.E. Watercolor Society. Exhibits nationally, has won many awards.

Anne Belson, director of exhibits, Federal Reserve Bank, Boston. Artist Member of South Shore Art Center.

Jim Ann Howard, South Shore Art Center artist member. Exhibits widely and has won many awards.

Lee MacDonald, art historian and director of Society of Arts and Crafts, Boston.

Paul Tucker, art historian, assistant professor at U. Mass., Boston, where he is a specialist in 20th century art

T.M. sewer articles draw fire and zero support from sewer commission

By Jane Lane

There are two proposed articles included in a preliminary town meeting warrant which request town funding for an alternative sewer study.

If that fails, voters will be asked to rescind their approval of Article 4 of the November special town meeting.

Sewer Commissioner Charles DeSantis, a proponent of Article 4, emphasized he did not author the two proposed warrant articles, nor does he support them. In fact, DeSantis strongly opposed such requests.

"I want to make it very clear that I, nor the sewer commission have requested those articles be included in the warrant," he said. "As a proponent of Article 4 and as a sewer commissioner and resident of the town of Cohasset, I feel it is very ill-advised to have an article to request full town financing for a study the state and federal governments are legally bound to fund."

One article requests the town finance an alternative sewer study at a total cost of $90,000. If that fails voters' approval, there is a subsequent article which asks voters to rescind their approval of Article 4 of the November special town meeting.

That article authorized the town to seek an alternative supplemental sewer plan.

DeSantis said the three sewer commissioners never discussed submitting such requests for the spring town meeting. It was never an agenda item and never voted upon by the three commission members, he emphasized.

Because the sewer commission did not approve including the two proposed articles within the warrant, they cannot be labeled as being sponsored by

Fleming Hardware sold to Philip Smith

The Edward M. Fleming Gift and Hardware Shop, a family owned hardware store for 51 years, was sold to Philip Smith, president of Designer Creations of 17 South Main St. and two other Smith family members.

Smith told the Mariner he intends to keep the store and "not change one hair."

Smith said the gift and hardware shop has been an institution in Cohasset Village for over five generations.

Mary and John Fleming, brother and sister and the store proprieters, sold the business and the historical building last week to Alphi Trust and the Edward M. Fleming Corporation. Phil Smith is one of the three main trustees.

Smith said the corporation intends to "conduct business in the same manner and with the same fine lines of goods which have made Flemings famous."

The other new owners are Thomas Smith and Frank E. Smith.

Philip Smith is an interior designer and member of the American Society of Interior Designers. He is one of the featured designers each year at the Junior League of Boston Showhouse. He is well known throughout the Boston area for both his residential work and business interiors.

He is currently working on several homes in Palm Beach, Florida and Osterville.

Thomas "Al" Smith owns a large ski and sport shop in Oak Park Mall in Illiniois. He has owned his business for over 25 years and like his brother Philip, has been active in community affairs. He and Philip are the trustees of the Alphi Trust.

The Edward M. Fleming Corporation includes Philip, Thomas and Frank Smith, who will manage the Fleming store. Frank is a graduate of Western Illinios University, Macomb, Illinois. He left an executive sales position with the Campbell Soup Company to manage Flemings. He will live in Cohasset.

"All the Smiths will be putting their talents to work to ensure the traditions Mary and John Fleming carried on. Cohasset Village is a real, rare jewel. No other place like it in the U.S. and we all love it," said Phil Smith at the closing ceremony attended by the Flemings and the Smiths February 1.

"The Edward M. Fleming Shop has always been patronized by the 'carriage trade' because of the personalized service extended and the type of fine, unique goods offered for sale at honest prices."

Cable TV process continues on schedule

Despite the possibility of three new members on the board of selectmen this April, the chairman of the cable advisory committee foresees no delay in granting a provisional cable license by early summer.

Joseph McCool says although the committee never discussed the issue, he anticipates no difficulties having two, or perhaps three new board members voting to grant a provisional license to a cable firm.

No material has been submitted at this point to the present board of selectmen, he said any information given to the boardf will be new to all members. The committee is expected to make a recommendation to selectmen by mid-March. A provisional license may be issued by the board of selectmen three to four months later, McCool says.

American Cablesystems Corp. of Boston, the company awarded Scituate's franchise last August, was the only company to submit a final bid for Cohasset's license by last week's deadline.

Two other firms, Greater South Shore Cablevision of Brunswick, N.J. and United Cablevision of Greenwich, Conn., informed the committee they would not be submitting final bid applications. Campbell CATV of Plymouth and United Video Corp. Greenwich, Conn. also did not submit bids.

American Cablesystems Corp. has applications pending in Hingham and Norwell, McCool says.

The cable committee will hold a public hearing in early March to present final questions to representatives of American Cablesystems. The committee will make its final recommendation to selectmen soon after the meeting.

McCool said he does not see the new selectmen presenting a problem in delaying the award of a cable license. "I can't imagine how the new board members would interfere with awarding the license," McCool says.

Paint bid awarded

Selectmen again reviewed the specifications and bids submitted for the painting of eight rooms at Town Hall. Executive secretary Mark Lanza assured selectmen that their original choice, John Sadler, had been the low bidder. Selectmen awarded the bid, totaling $3,160, to Sadler.

Fire department budget

Selectmen reviewed the proposed fire department budget for next year which is about $50,000 more than appropriated total this year.

That amount will not include a possible department request for the purchase of a $12,000 ladder for the ladder truck.

Fire Chief Martin Dooley said the ladder will be tested this week, and if it does not pass inspection, town meeting may be faced with a capital request for a new ladder.

The major increase in the department's budget is negotiated salary increases, Dooley told selectmen. This is an item over which the chief has no control, he reminded them.

The call firemen force was increased by $500 in the proposed budget, selectmen noted. Dooley said he has reviewed the volunteer force and dropped inactive members and added four local men.

"If the board wants an active call force, you are going to owe them more money," he said.

Selectman Mary Jane McArthur suggested the chief take the allotment he has now for the call force and divide it among the men.

The total personal services account was recommended by Dooley at $546,123 for 25 men. Last year's appropriated total was $510,158.

The expense portion of the department budget was proposed at $28,740. That would not include the possible purchase of the ladder, Dooley said.

Dooley recommended purchasing $5,000 for five portable radios. Although he has sought funding through the Civil Defense for this expense, he has received no definite answer. Dooley said an updating of the department's man-to-man communication system is necessary. Selectmen suggested the purchase should be included in a capital outlay request.

VoTech open house

South Shore Vocational Technical High School will hold its annual Open House Thursday, Feb. 10 from 7 to 9 p.m. Programs at both the Abington and Hanover campuses will be open for visitation and discussions with staff and students.

Prospective students are encouraged to visit either or both campuses with their parents.

Four sentenced in vandalism

Four Cohasset High School students and one former student were sentenced to pay restitution of $4,060 and work 80 hours community service stemming from a November 19 vandalism incident which resulted in 75 broken windows at several Cohasset schools.

Quincy District Court Judge Lewis Whitman heard the cases Friday and charged the students with malicious destruction of property.

Andrew Spalt, 19,and a former CHS student, was found guilty on two charges of malicious damage to school buildings and two charges of malicious damage to personal property (two schools). He was placed on probation for one year, ordered to pay restitution of $1,016 and work 80 hours community service.

William Cuff, 17, of 271 South Main St. had two counts of malicious damage to personal property and one count of malicious damage to the Deer Hill School dismissed.

The charge of malicious damage to school property (high school) was continued without a finding for a year. But Cuff was ordered to pay $1,016 in restitution and ordered to work 80 hours community service.

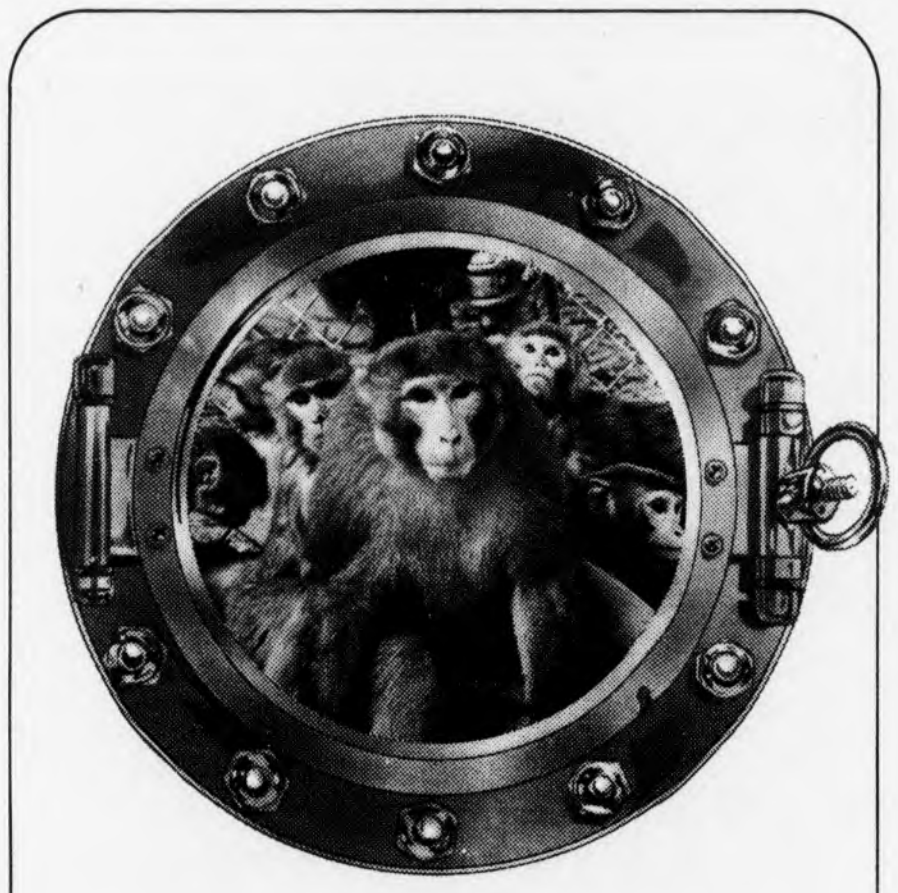
Eric Christiansen, 17, of 82 Forest Ave. was given the same disposition as Cuff.

Thomas Wright, 17, of 277 Fair Oaks Lane was charged with malicious damage to personal property and malicious damage to school property. The personal property charge was dismissed. The school property charge was continued without a finding for one year. He was ordered to pay $100 in court costs as well as $31 restitution.

Wright, Cuff, Christiansen and Spalt were all ordered to undergo alcohol evaluation. This vandalism was the culmination of a night of drinking and partying, police said.

Norman Beddows, 16, of 65 Howe Road was charged as an "adjucated delinquent." He was charged with malicious damage to personal property, two counts, and malicious damage to school property, two counts. Court Prosecutor Ptlm. Brian Noonan said he was committed to the Division of Youth Services until April 21 and received a suspended sentence. He was ordered to pay $1,007 in restitution and ordered to work 100 hours community service.

Committee approves budget



Thursday evening the Advisory Committee approved a request for $2,000 within an annual town meeting article to pay the yearly stipend for the two new selectmen. The advisors said this part of the article would be footnoted and explained to voters.

The Committee approved a $105 budget for civil defense. Nearly $80 would be spent for mileage and attending out-of town meetings.

The wire department budget of $8,182 was approved by the committee. An unexpected $800 was needed in this budget to pay for brake repairs in the new truck. However, the town hopes to recover the cost since the problem stemmed from the day it was purchased.

The cemetery has requested $1,000 for a snowblower in the next year's budget. Snow removal is a necessity in locating plots. However, Committee members wanted the snowblower to be shared by town departments. The committee will study the cemetery budget further this week as well as the fire and police budgets.

Sewer articles draw fire...

the commission. Since Joseph Gwinn (commission chairman) did not have 10 residents sign a petition supporting the articles, the two requests cannot be sponsored by the commission chairman.

DeSantis said the only way the articles can remain in the warrant is to be sponsored by the board of selectmen. "As far as I am concerned, they are the board of selectmen's articles, not the sewer commission's," he added.

Executive Secretary Mark Lanza said he received a telephone call from DeSantis requesting space reservations for two sewer articles.

Lanza added the warrants submitted are tentative and must be reviewed and approved by selectmen before being sent to print for the town warrant.

Selectmen must approve the warrant 20 days before town meeting.

Chairman Joseph Gwinn said he asked that the articles be inserted in the proposed warrant after selectman Mary Jane McArthur said two articles were being reserved specifically for the sewer commission.

Selectman McArthur said she had "no idea how the articles were placed in the proposed warrant." She said it would be too premature to publicize the list of proposed warrant articles since the list is "very preliminary — only at the discussion stage."

"By placing an article which requests full town financing on the warrant, we are weakening the resolve of the people of Cohasset," DeSantis warned.

"The present predicament that the town of Cohasset finds itself in regard to the agreement of judgement and the prohibitively expensive Metcalf and Eddy sewer plan is a direct result of a lack of resolve and commitment of the town of Cohasset.

"An article requesting $90,000 of town financing for a project that by law and precedent should be funded by the state and federal government severely weakens the rationale for Cohasset's share of federal and state funding for the supplemental facilities plan," he said.

DeSantis emphasized that he was every bit as committed to the implementation of the supplemental plan as before. And, he added, he is more convinced than ever that the people of Cohasset "will prevail in this vital issue."

Regarding the two proposed warrant articles, DeSantis said they "clearly subvert the mandate of the November special town meeting."

He steadfastly opposed rescinding the previous approval of the November town meeting voters.

Other proposed warrant articles for town meeting include a law which would authorize the police chief to create departmental rules and regulations without selectmen's approval. This articles was petitioned by police Sgt. Richard Barrow, Lt. Charles Stockbridge and several other residents.

Selectmen currently have authority over the police chief in developing department rules. The chief may recommend rules and regulations, but the board of selectmen has final authority in approving the recommendation.

Also included in the preliminary list of warrant articles is $20,000 to repair or replace the Deer Hill school roof; $342,000 to be used with grant money to rehabilitate the water distribution system on Atlantic Avenue; $40,000 for a catch basin cleaner, and $50,000 to resurface streets.

There is also a request to develop a revolving fund so the school department may keep revenues collected from non-residents, tuition-paying students and foster care children.

Village merchants, police meet on loitering teens

The Cohasset Village merchants are irked about teens loitering in front of their businesses, but they believe police are doing their best with limited available manpower.

During a meeting last week with selectmen and Police Chief Joseph Kealey, several merchants, headed by Bob Becker, voiced their concerns about the continuing problem of teenagers gathering along the North Main Street business area.

Becker, who owns eight Village apartments, said "Gangs of 14, 15 and 16 year-olds litter, loiter and drink in the area," as well as vandalize the local properties. Kealey corrected Becker, by noting the youths can't be considered "gangs" but are more simply groups of teens who gather in the area.

Kealey said the telphone booths in front of the Texaco station and the Curtis Compact store across the street, are major reasons why the youths are lured to that particular sec□tion.

Becker said police have always been "fantastic" and quickly respond to any calls from harried merchants.

However, they would like to see an additional officer patrol the business area, similar to those in Scituate and Hingham, Becker suggested.

The officer could walk the area from 4 p.m. until midnight during the particularly busy season from mid-spring through the summer and eariy fall.

Kealey noted it would be a luxury the town could not afford at this time. The town seldom has the luxury of having a foot patrol, he added.

"The population in this town and the number of young people have grown, but I don't think the police department has grown accordingly," Becker answered.

"The community needs additional police. The patrons here see the youths drinking and swearing, and it is detrimental to their business," he said.

Becker was representing a group of merchants and businessmen from the village area. Texaco station owner George Roukanakis, historical society curator David Wadsworth, merchant Dick Straley and St. Stephen's Church custodian Steve Cameron, attended the selectmen's session with Becker.

Roukanakis said the telephone booths attract customers into his business. People may want to use the phone, he said, and will decide to purchase gasoline at the same time. He has no intention of relocating or eliminating the booths from his property, he said.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle suggested that the station owner relocate the booths to the middle of his property. The teens would be less likely to congregate near the telephones if they were located within Roukanakis' business property, he said. Becker agreed with the suggestion.

Cameron told selectmen he has continually found smashed bottles on the church grounds. He said kids loiter in the area every day after school, and fires have been set near the building. The church was recently flooded, the doors have been carved, and graffitti has been scrawled over the building, he said.

"If he had a choice to assign an officer, Joe (Kealey) would have done it already," Selectman Henry Ainslie told the men. "But I see things getting worse rather than better."

Kealey assured the merchants the police department "wants to address your problem, but we simply do not have the manpower."

He suggested parents "should have some responsibility in this," and they should cooperate by ensuring their children are not loitering in the business area. In the meantime, he told the merchants, police will continue car patrols in the district and will work with the merchants to solve this dilemma.

Selectmen candidates agree

Stay the course with Norfolk County

Cohasset should not switch to Plymouth County, four candidates for selectmen told the Mariner this week.

Last week the Mariner examined the historical aspect of the question and asked current selectmen their views on whether Cohasset should remain in Norfolk County.

The four candidates, John DeBassio, Ted Ford, Frank England and Cliff Mitman agreed with the current board: Cohasset should remain in Norfolk County even though surrounding communities are located in Plymouth County.

Mitman said he doesn't know much about the question and would like more time to study it. But he did acknowledge the town has built up "present lines of communication" and if the county changed, it may be more difficult, at first, to establish good communications. He said the Cohasset electorate and selectmen must first agree there is a need to change.

Selectman candidate Ted Ford said unless he can be shown "good, economic reasons for changing" Cohasset's affiliation with Norfolk County, he will be against such a move. "Unless I can be shown an example of how it would be less expensive for Cohasset to be in Plymouth County, I see no reason to change the town's present status," he said.

In fact, Ford said he would oppose such transition, because as he views it, it would cost the town money to move to the neighboring county. "To me, it seems the transfer into Plymouth County would entail the shifiting of documents, deeds and extensive records. To move the county seat from Dedham to Plymouth County would unquestionably include a lot of costs and headaches.

Unless I can be convinced that the benefits outweigh the costs, I would be opposed to a transfer," he concluded.

Candidate John DeBassio also disagreed that Cohasset should abandon Norfolk County for Plymouth County. As the former police chief, he said there was "somewhat of a problem because officers would have to travel to court in Quincy rather than in Hingham, to superior court in Dedham instead of Brockton. In that aspect, it may be more cost-effective at times for the Cohasset Police Department to be associated within Plymouth County.

"But I have come to appreciate that most of the people in Cohasset are very conscious and proud of their history and the traditon linked to Norfolk County," he said. DeBassio said there is no practical reason that Cohasset should revert to Plymouth County, especially since specific issues such as court jurisdiction may be changed by order of the court magistrate. It is simply an administrative process which can authorize the Cohasset Police Department to reroute its legal cases to Hingham District Court, he said.

"It is a selective administrative decision that could be used to correct any deficiences that we might have, without going to the extreme of transferring from Norfolk County to Plymouth County. A lot of people look at Cohasset as a unique situation, being in Norfolk County. But there is something to be said for being unique," DeBassio added.

Candidate Frank England said at this time he does not see Cohasset's county affliation as an issue. "I have never heard anyone comment either way about the issue," he said.

Since he has not received any negative coments regarding the town's Norfolk County membership, he has not explored reasons to transfer into Plymouth County. On that basis, England said, he thinks Cohasset's status should remain the same.

Candidate Diane Sullivan was unavailable for comment.

Kealey gets nod, named the new Cohasset police chief

Selectmen last week unanimously appointed Joseph Kealey permanent Cohasset police chief.

After sifting through about 50 resumes, and eight interviews, selectmen narrowed the choice to three finalists. Former Scituate Police Sgt. William Stone, Sherbourn Police Chief Daniel Manning, and Kealey were the three men from which the chief was named.

Selectmen chairman Henry Ainslie said that after the press publicized Stone's comments regarding the neighboring police department, "it would be somewhat impossible to choose him as chief." He personally felt the press "did an injustice" to Stone by publicizing the remarks.

Ainslie was alluding to comments made by Stone during his public interview two weeks ago with the board of selectmen. At the conclusion of the interview, Ainslie asked Stone why he decided to leave the Scituate Police Department two years ago.

Stone said he and present Police Chief Walter Driscoll "did not see eye to eye" and that he led his department by "threats and intimidation." Although he never mentioned Driscoll's name, Stone said he wanted to reply to Ainslie's question as candidly as possible.

Manning, a 33 year-old Sherbourn police chief, was also highly regarded by selectmen.

Ainslie said he had received several unsolicited commendations regarding Kealey's efforts during the recent murder case in Cohasset.

The other board members said they too had heard many impressive remarks regarding Kealey's abilities throughout his four-month administration as acting chief.

There was a question brought to selectmen's attention whether selectmen had sole authority to appoint a police chief. Selectmen turned the question over to Town Counsel Richard Henderson who ruled that although article 35 of the 1978 town meeting provided for the appointment of a police chief committee, that committee's authority concluded with the selection of a successor to Chief Randolph Feola.

Henderson wrote that since town meeting never appointed another committee after Chief John DeBassio's resignation, the committee was dissolved and selectmen had sole authority to appoint the new chief.

That question was brought to executive secretary Mark Lanza's attention by one of the local candidates who was not named police chief, selectmen said.

Kealey is a 17 year veteran of the Cohasset Police Department. He hd told selectmen it was his career goal to be made chief of the department.

A 48 year-old police officer, Kealey told selectmen at the outset he had no immediate intention of moving from his home in Marshfield to Cohasset. He has children in college, and because of financial and personal reasons, he did not want to disrupt their lives until their educations were completed.

The major problem within the local department now is that it is lacking two officers. Because the department "is down" two men, it has cost the town more in personnel overtime, he told selectmen. He would like to see the department operating at a full compliment.

A major advantage for the department is that the majority of officers are under 40 years old. Because the department is young, most of the men have long careers ahead of them, he said.

Kealey officially begins his duties as permanent police chief Feb. 28 after he returns from vacation. He will receive an annual salary of $29,000 the first years of the three-year contract, with $1,200 in holiday and vacation pay.

The school department notified selectmen they would not be allocating $1,000 to the police chief to serve as the schools' truant officer.

The school department will handle that duty within its own department, according to the letter.

Nicole Greco is Little Miss Heart Fund

By Sallyann Chatterton

Last summer Nicole Greco underwent open heart surgery to correct what is known as an atrial septal defect.

After the operation she was selected as the 1983 Little Miss Heart Fund and has recently appeared on television with WBZ's Dave Maynard.

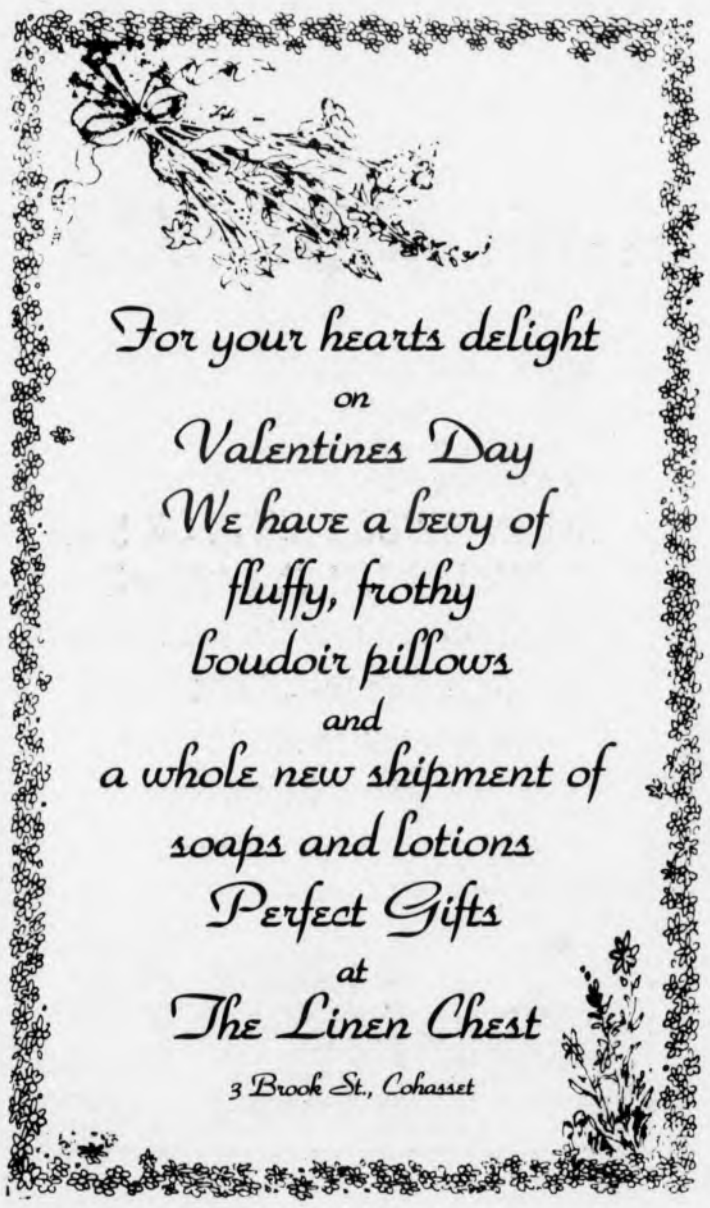
Nicole, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Greco of No. Main Street, was born with the heart defect which could have seriously affected her life.

"Open heart surgery," one of modern medicine's most significant advances, made it possible for Nicole to resume a completely normal life after surgery.

Mr. and Mrs. Greco are thankful for Nicole's good health and feel Nicole's serving as Little Miss Heart Fund is a great way to show how public contributions have been put to good use.

Nicole is a beautiful girl with sparkling eyes and wavy, dark hair; she is full of vitality and feeling "great." She likes being on television with Dave Maynard. "He's nice, but not as funny as the ad he does on TV where the lightning hits him," she said.

Sunday, Feb. 13 is Heart Sunday. Community volunteers will canvass Cohasset for contributions to the Heart Fund.



Remember Nicole, who certainly wouln't be the vivacious little girl she is today without the research donations helped to provide.

Watch for Nicole on television and on Heart Fund posters — she's an inspiration.

John Ayer and Mary Jeanette Murray

☐John Ayer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Ayer, interned at the State House with Mary Jeanette Murray (R) 3rd Plymouth District for six weeks. John is majoring in government and administration at Colby College, Maine.

His six weeks of internship was an enlightening time. Experiences included being at the inauguration of the Governor, swearing in of the legislatures and training of the legislative aids for the new session.

John learned the legislative process for the thousands of bills filed; committee assignments of legislators and the many steps taken before the enactment of bills into law. He also attended hearings and press conferences pertinent to Rep. Murray's 3rd Plymouth District.

Murray has a year round youth program with the high schools and students in college in her district which consists of Cohasset, Hingham and Hull.

☐And the winter is...Rev. Jol Keohane. During the recent Historical Society dinner, the drawing for the quilt depicting many favorite scenes in Cohasset was held. Many women made squa which were sewn together to make a beautiful heirloom quilt. Over a thousand chances were bought.

☐Staff Sergeant Benjamin Hagan III, son of Elizabeth Hagan of North Main St., has arrived for duty at Clear Air Force Station, Alaska.

☐The Tenants Association of Harbor View held their January meeting recently. Elections were held with the following results: Dorothy Russell was elected chairman; Ruth Bacigulpo, vice chairman; Margaret Doyle, secretary; and Mary Conway, treasurer. Mr. and Mrs. Andrew O'Keefe are in charge of the Valentine Luncheon February 14; all tenants are invited. There will be a program of music during the Valentine afternoon.

Bingo is still on the agenda every Tuesday at 1:30 for all the seniors, and the last Thursday of the month at 7 p.m.

☐Kevin Mulcahy is the undisputed pogo-stick champ of Red Gate Lane. Kevin can go for ages without a mistake.

The Stork has been busy in Cohasset. A baby boy, Jason Richard Brown, arrived weighing 7 pounds, 15 ounces, making Mr. and Mrs. Richard Brown of Elm Court very happy.

January 25, Steven and Denise (Wheelwright) Gardner, of Mill Lane, had a baby girl.

They will be members of the 2001 graduating class.

☐J.T. Price, a freshman at Mt. Allison College in Sacville, New Brunswick, Canada, receives the Mariner every week, and shares it with fellow wrestlers who love reading Cohasset news. J.T.'s mother reports that Tanna's attic window had the "kids in Canada worried," as they hadn't read the answers when Marie talked to J.T. By this time they've read the multiple choice answers; wonder which one they chose. Maybe Tanna will find out when the wrestling team comes to our area...they will oppose Plymouth State Saturday, Feb. 12. Knowing the Price family and their hospitality, the kids will be spending time in Cohasset.

James Reilly

☐James Reilly has joined Marvin and Leonard Advertising as executive vice president.

Reilly was formerly vice president and management supervisor at Hill, Holliday, Connors.

"We're very happy about this appointment," said Len Kanzer, agency president. "Jim has a perfect blend of large corporate marketing experience and agency account management with some of the country's leading advertisers."

A Boston native, Reilly grew up in Boston and graduated cum laude from Boston College before getting his MBA in marketing from Columbia.

Reilly's appointment is part of senior level management reorganization at the agency.

Parental stress: How one woman makes a difference

By Jane Lane

She is a woman who seems to have everything life could offer.

She has a loving family, a beautiful home overlooking the ocean from the mountainous ledge in Cohasset, and an abundance of material wealth.

Still, she cries for those born less fortunate. She cries, and she makes a difference.

Jan Pyle describes herself as a homemaker with some spare time on her hands. During those free hours, she devotes her energies to helping other mothers in desperate situations. And the children born into that desperation.

'I can't solve the problem, but I can help defuse the crisis for that moment. I can talk with the parent, tell them to get help to get the child out of the problem, and calm the parent.'

A few nights a week, sometimes from 10 p.m. to 8 a.m. the next day, Jan listens to callers on the Parental Stress hotline. This is a 24-hour telephone number for parents to call "just to talk with someone," Jan says. Most often the greatest deterrent for a mother or father about to physically harm their child is to talk with someone.

Callers remain anonymous, if that is what they want. But most important is that the enraged parent separate himself or herself from the child who is the focus of their anger.

"You might not expect that we'd get calls from Hingham, Scituate, Cohasset, Marshfield or Hanover, but we do. Parents in stressful situations are in all communities. People who need help are simply people who can't seem to place their stress in the right place," Jan says.

One recent night, Jan received a call from a frightened 34 year-old single mother. This woman was a college-educated professional who had recently begun to psychologically abuse her 10 year-old son.

Jan and the woman talked for an hour about her problem, but Jan felt the caller was omitting some significant information which would clue her into the mother's inappropriate reactions to her youngster.

After almost three hours of conversation, the woman finally admitted a 20-year unshared secret. Since she had been 12 years old, her stepfather had sexually abused her. In her absolute terror of the man, she had succumbed to him until a few weeks ago.

At that time, when she had summoned all her courage to defy her mother's husband, she began to take her simmering anger out on her young, beloved son.

Through the telephone line, Jan could feel the woman's emotional exhaustion after she released that dark secret. Jan advised the woman and gave her resources to receive further professional assistance.

But the difference with Jan is that she dares to care even more. Rather than hanging up and terminating the conversation, Jan waited until the next morning to talk with the woman again. She called from her home. She wanted to know that the young mother was going to be alright, and that she would seek the help she needed so desperately.

It might seem a depressing pastime for a woman simply wishing to fill a few spare hours. But Jan quickly disagrees. She feels that once in awhile, she makes a difference in someone's life.

She will be there for someone whose one incredible need is for someone to talk to.

"I can't solve the problem," she says, "but I can help defuse the crisis for that moment. I can talk with the parent, tell them to get help to get the child out of the problem, and calm the parent."

Parental stress, she feels, is a symptomatic problem of the modern world. Lawyers and doctors and their wives — people of all nationalities and races, have times of stress which may often be released upon their children.

Women who are mothers 24 hours a day without time for themselves, may vent their anger toward their children.

Housewives who feel a sense of unfulfillment may begin to abuse their offspring. Parents who are having difficulty financially supporting their families may strike out at their children.

Jan feels a sense of worth in her efforts to save these children from harm, and to save their parents from the momentary crisis that ignites their frustration into destruction.

But this 34 year-old woman who would appropriately be described as a blonde pixie, full of warmth and smiles, does not limit herself to the hotline alone. The college graduate with a degree in sociology is also involved in Family Dimensions Foster Home Program.

This program, sponsored by the Protestant Social Service Bureau, seeks emergency, short-term and long-term foster families throughout the South Shore.

The program places foster children into volunteer families. Families can consist of a single mother or father, or a family with a number of children who still have room to love another member.

The Family Dimension Program coordinates a particular foster family from the time of application through their training period and placement of the foster child and until the child leaves the family.

Foster children are youths who are taken from a home where they have been either neglected or abused. Or perhaps their parent is hospitalized and there is no one to care for the child. Whatever the case, the child needs an immediate home where they can be loved and cared for on a temporary basis.

That is a problem that some people feel they can not deal with — loving someone temporarily, knowing their stay within the family will come to a definitive end.

Jan says that a good foster parent must realize that love never terminates. Knowing the family did the best they could for the youth — providing the child with the best food, shelter and clothes they could during his stay, is an unending gift to that child.

"Experienced foster parents know the child had the most love and nurturing they could provide and that they will carry that with them throughout their lives," Jan says.

The program provides intensive training for all foster parents to help them deal with the various emotions which reveal themselves during and after the child's stay. The six-week training period educates the prospective foster parents concerning questions most often shared by other families.

Support groups are sponsored by the program in which parents help each other deal with the foster care experience. Foster parenting is not without problems, she adds. These children have often lived in five or six homes, and are difficult to relate to, or have deep-rooted stigmas emanating from their "birth" homes.

There is also the typical fear that bringing a foster child into the established family will disrupt the members of that natural family.

"It takes a lot of work, and the product of that work then leaves. The foster child has to have an effect on the other children within that home. But my experience has been, if the parent can handle the situation, the children can," Jan said. "If the parents have a handle on it, it may be difficult, but it will work. It doesn't have to affect the children negatively, but will often have a positive effect on their lives as well as the foster child's."

Phyllis Speciale, program director for the foster care program, said, "The foster home is an opportunity for families to help a child develop a personal identity and self respect and to discover the personal satisfaction that comes from family life.

"The need for foster homes is great, and we will talk with anyone who would like to take any age child."

Jan Pyle

The greatest single need is for emergency foster homes. These are families who are willing to take a child without advance notice. Very often, the child has been ordered from the home after being physically abused, or neglected by the biological parent.

If an emergency foster home can not be provided to the child, the agency will have to place the child in a hospital or group home. And Jan quickly adds a group home is "no place" for a young girl or boy to reside.

"Every child deserves a home," she says. "Every child should have the right to be nurtured and to grow to his or her full potential."

Jan is firm in her convictions about children's rights. She and her husband, Charles, are the adoptive parents of two beautiful Korean children, Kate, 10, and Greg, 8.

"Parents need and deserve help too. But what do we do about these children whose lives are being wasted because no one will care. Kids are our most precious natural resource," she said.

"We have to save them. We have to help every child reach his or her own full potential. If not, they'll end up in jail or back on welfare raising their own children.

"We all have to care, so everyone can have the chance to make the most of their life."

Anyone interested in more information regarding the Family Dimensions foster home program should call 773-6203 in Quincy.

The Parental Stress hotline is a statewide, toll-free number, 1-800-632-8188.

The SAT minimum

By its nature education is an unequal business. The affluent have advantages over the poor, fast learners over slow, and children of the educated over children of the uneducated.

Into this cauldron of inequality the public education system must step; and out of that cauldron it must somehow give succor to the widely divergent strivings of an entire population.

Moreover, in the last several years the burden of public education has been complicated by acute crisis. Enrollments have declined. Taxpayers have revolted. Unions have gotten surly. A narcissistic Viet Nam generation has challenged the fundamental educational assumptions of a goal-oriented World War II generation.

Amid these forces test scores began to decline — first perceptibly, then steadily, then precipitously. This decline brought about a countervailing trend, one that generally rejects the perceived permissiveness of recent years and seeks to restore old-fashioned concepts that were thrown out in the heady but sometimes foolish sixties.

In our view some good "heuristic" ideas came out of the sixties, but the burden of the period in education was negative. The typical mistake that was made was that in giving children too much choice, schools thereby denied them later choice. Adults who had read Shakespeare and now chose to read comics allowed children who had never read Shakespeare to choose Shakespeare or comics as it (or "relevance") pleased them. Children who thus chose to read comics were thereby effectively denied the privilege of ever reading Shakespeare — and in many too real cases, ever to read.

Thus did adults who supposed they needed more freedom project their wants onto children who cried out for more control. The countervailing trend can never be too strong and it can never come quickly enough. It is a trend that must be nurtured and defended. Repairing a system of education is a little like rehabilitating an ancient house: five minutes of tearing out old plaster requires five days of replastering.

In a "best-case-scenario" it will be several years before those of us who partook of the energetic public education system built by our parents after World War II are able to provide our children with a system that is as good.

But in trying to bring about improvement it is easy to latch onto that which is easy to latch onto, i.e. numbers, scores, grades, dollars, brick, mortar, and the like. And it is very much harder to latch onto spirit, caring, respect, honor, and the nexus between teacher and student — which are the things that really bring about education in this world.

An error in latching onto "scores" is probably being made at this moment by the State Board of Education. The Board is considering a minimum standards plan for admission to the state's four-year colleges that would require the following: a minimum 400 average scholastic aptitude score for those in the top 4/10 of their high school class, and a minimum 425 score for those in the fifth tenth.

Students in the bottom half of their class and/or those with less than a 400 average would ipse facto be excluded from the four-year colleges, regardless of character, personal history, or high merit exclusive of college board scores and class rank.

Thus, a student in the bottom half of his top prep school class might hope to get into Harvard, but he could forget about U.Mass. So could a brilliant student whose first language was Greek or Spanish or Vietnamese, and whose so-called "verbal aptitude" was too low. So could many able students from inferior school systems — Boston's being only the most prominent example.

This proposal doesn't seem to us to be the American way, let alone the solution to the problem of declining standards. The basic flaw in the plan is its obsession with a score.

College board scores do mean something. A high score definitely indicates ability. A low score sometimes indicates limited ability - but often it indicates poor high school preparation, poor testing ability, illness on the testing day, and many other extraneous factors. College boards, in fact, have been shown to be a poorer predictor of college success than high school grades and class rank.

What it comes down to is this: college admissions, like anything else in the field of education, involve hard work. For admissions people there is no substitute for knowing the applicant. There is no single number that can provide a safe short-cut, any more than there is any way save hard work for the students they will admit to get educated.

We therefore oppose the "minimum standards" proposal as fervently as we support the principle of higher standards throughout the public education system. The difference between what we favor and what they propose comes down to two words that are often erroneously interchanged: vigorous and rigorous.

"Vigorous" means "ready to act with energy and force." "Rigorous" means "without abatement or mitigation." "Vigorous" means going to work. "Rigorous" means letting the numbers do the work.

Book money earmarked for heating costs

By Donna Cogliano and Mike Berger

Next year's preliminary town library budget calls for the purchase of fewer books. The proposed budget has been juggled to provide adequate heating at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

Chief Librarian Richard Hayes told the Advisory Committee Thursday that book money had been transferred to pay for heating. Last year the library bought 37 percent fewer books. Several years of that will hurt library service, said Hayes.

Since the cost of a routine biography these days is $25, the library is being very selective in their purchase of books said Hayes.

"You've done a good job on your budget," said Advisory Committee Chairman Jean Cotton, who was pleased with the backup budget information which presented a clear picture for the advisors. The committee agreed that things are running just about as tight as they could be at the library.

The committee gave their unanimous approval of the $143,643 proposed library budget.

In an interview, Hayes said the library absorbed a $400 cut in the book budget to cover the expected heating increases. "The problem," he said, "is the cost of books and magazines is rising at a greater rate than the cost of living. This fiscal year's book budget was first cut 17 percent and the prices jumped 15 percent." The adult non-fiction purchases were reduced 37 percent. The Advisory Committee had restored 17 percent of the book budget which put it at 1981 levels.

But Hayes still anticipates a 15 percent rise in costs next year.

Will it hurt the quality of the Cohasset Library? Hayes said Cohasset has one of the highest per capita (per person) user rates in the state. The state average is one per 14 residents use a public library. One of every six Cohasset residents use the Paul Pratt Library.

"The demand continues and the question is what do we give up? Last year it was adult fiction. This year, I'm not sure," said Hayes.

"We are receiving the same kind of demand and there are 40,000 new titles published every year. But we have bought fewer than five percent of the new titles. Adult fiction is expensive. You could say we are buying a lot of paperbacks but even those are going up," said Hayes.

Staffing costs will remain the same for next year. Last year the library suffered a 12 percent cut which closed the library Wednesdays and cut 36 staffing hours weekly.

Still, Cohasset remains one of the few libraries in the state which is open Sunday, despite Prop. 2½.

Hayes said increasing the book budget also means increasing labor costs. "It would be foolish to keep the book budget growing with the present staff."

Cataloguing, selection, processing, circulation and shelf maintenance are some of the labor costs involved in the book budget, Hayes said.

Still, Hayes is happy the library won't have to cut staff this year. He is also pleased the Cohasset library has been spared the prop. 2½ cuts experienced by other communities, especially Quincy.

Inter-library loans are down 28 percent showing that other libraries are suffering from level funded or drastically cut budgets.

NO NANTASKET FUNDS

The Advisory Committee also voted not to fund the Nantasket Library in the West Corner section of town next year. The board's decision was based on Hingham's and Hull's plans not to appropriate their annual share of $2,000 toward the small library.

Thus Cohasset saves $2,000.

Storm damage minimal

Besides some skidding accidents, flooded water basins and slippery ice conditions, Cohasset fared well in Sunday night's and Monday's snow and ice storm. Highway Supt. Harold Litchfield said his crews had no problem clearing away the snow but the basins were reported flooded Monday night by the rain. Crews were sent to clean the basins Monday night and by Tuesday morning Litchfield reported all was clear. Snow removal crews were sent out 7:30 p.m. Sunday and worked straight till Monday at midnight. Salting crews were called out at 3:30 a.m. Motorist cooperation was good, said Litchfield, as for the most part cars were kept off the roads. Police reported four minor accidents on Route 3A Tuesday morning. Monday, a police cruiser skidded into a town sand truck. Acting Chief Joseph Kealey said the accident was minor and no one was hurt.

Murray's memo

Report from the State House

By State Rep.
Mary Jeanette Murray

TV RULE

The 173rd Legislature got off to a solid and productive start with three days of debate on Rules under which the House will operate for the 1983-84 term. While not all of the reforms proposed by a coalition of Republicans and Democrats were adopted, a couple of significant changes were made.

Perhaps the most dramatic change from prior years was the very close, 78-75 vote to allow television cameras and radio tapes to record Legislature in action. Proponents argued that such monitoring would not only bring the process of representative government closer to people, but might well prevent leadership from ramming through some special interest legislation.

The Speaker will appoint a committee to determine how the new TV rule will be implemented. Currently, television and radio reporters are allowed to bring their equipment into the House Chamber only with permission of the Speaker and for ceremonial events such as the inauguration of a new Governor, or a State of the State Address. Newspaper reporters monitor House action from a press box located in a balcony overlooking the Chamber. No cameras are allowed in the House.

END TO LATE NIGHT SESSIONS

"Government by exhaustion" is a frequent complaint during the several late night sessions held in the House. During budget debate, end of the session and emergencies, legislators may be kept in the House long past midnight. One of the reforms adopted would limit this by requiring that the House meet only between the hours of 10 a.m. and 10 p.m. unless a majority votes to continue later.

ITS ONLY LOGICAL

The third calls for a printed calendar (agenda) for all meetings of the House. Under current practice, when the Legislature reaches the end of the session, the leadership dispenses with the printing of a calendar and bills come up for debate and votes in a rather helter-skelter way. By requiring a printed agenda except when two thirds of the Representatives vote to waive the rule, legislators will be better able to track pending legislation.

Another rule change that passed on the first vote but failed on the second vote was one proposed by the new Republican Whip, Representative Steven Pierce of Westfield. It would have required that legislators receive a printed copy of conference committee reports (compromise legislation worked out when the House and Senate disagree on the contents of a bill, such as the state budget) 24 hours before the final vote is taken. Too often in legislative practice the final vote on important bills is taken before members have a chance to fully study changes made by the conference committee.

FEDERAL HIGHWAY REVENUE ACT

Approximately 12,000 unemployed Massachusetts workers who have exhausted unemployment insurance benefits under the Federal Supplemental Compensation (FSC) program are now eligible for up to four additional weeks of benefits. In addition, about 12,750 claimants currently collecting FSC benefits will now be eligible for up to 14 weeks of benefits rather than the maximum of 10 weeks originally provided by the program.

According to federal law, the FSC program will end on March 31. Claimants who exhaust State unemployment insurance benefits after January 10, and who are unable to find employment, will also be eligible for the FSC program until the end of March. Unemployed workers may be eligible for the FSC program if they meet the following requirements: they exhausted regular or extended unemployment insurance (UI) benefits after June 1,1982 or were eligible to collect extended benefits in June.

To be eligible for this program, claimants must have had a minimum of 20 weeks of work in the 52 week period prior to filing their initial claims for regular state UI benefits. In addition, claimants collecting under the FSC program are required to conduct a more active work search than is presently required under the regular State program.

FSC benefits and DES administrative costs for the program are funded through federal general revenues and not employers' taxes.

The increase in the number of weeks a claimant may collect under FSC was included in the Highway Revenue Act passed by Congress on December 23, 1982 and signed into law by President Reagan on January 6, 1983.

INCREASED FEDERAL FUEL ASSISTANCE ALLOCATION

Massachusetts will receive $3.2 million more in federal fuel assistance money than it received last winter. The higher federal allocation coupled with the state appropriated supplement should provide ample funding for eligible fuel assistance recipients throughout the winter.

The federal allocation for the 1983 Massachusetts Fuel Assistance Program is $81,674,169, an increase of $3,213,718 over last year's program. The state supplemental appropriation of $17 million — one of the nation's highest state supplements brings the total amount of money available for the Fuel Assistance Program this winter to $98,674,169.

Fuel assistance applications were running ahead of last winter so far, but expenditures were down compared with the same period last winter. Applications taken during November and December totaled 136,583, up 22,349; but expenditures totaled only $11,185,151 down $1,785,657 compared with the same two month period last winter.

LOCAL AID

The first half of the $483,249,042 fiscal 1983 additional local aid for cities and towns and other amounts for a total of $308 million has been distributed.

The following is the distribution breakdown: Local Aid Fund: Additional Assistance, $241,624,521, Lottery, Beano and Charity Games 47,570,156, Highway Fund 11,715,524, Urban Redevelopment Corp Excise Fund 7,102,646.29, Total Submitted $308,012,847.29.

The law requires the 70 percent of the fiscal year appropriation for Additional Assistance and Highway Fund be distributed on or before the last day of December. City and town share of lottery etc. revenue collected during June 1 through November 30 must also be distributed on or before the last day of December. Urban redevelopment excise payments are distributed twice a year, in December and June, in accordance with established departmental policy.

The $308,012,847.29 now being distributed compares with $229,666,476.04 distributed last December from the same sources.

DSS MATCHING FUNDS PROGRAM

The Department of Social Services has established a program to match charitable and municipal contributions for social services with state dollars. Through a new arrangement called the Public/Private Partnership Program, the Department has obligated $12.2 million in state funding for fiscal year 1983 as a 75 percent match with funds donated by private businesses, foundations, and local governments.

For the past several years the Department has operated a program which matched contributions from non-profit groups and local governments. The new program has more flexible guidelines and is aimed at increasing participation of businesses and foundations.

The program supports the wide range of services which DSS provides, including protective services for children and families, day care, counseling and other services to help keep families together, services for adolescents, and services which plan for and provide permanent homes for children in the State's care.

CHAPTER 607-COST OF TRANSPORTATION

This law transfers the transportation costs for mentally retarded clients attending programs approved by DMH from the public schools to the Commonwealth, i.e., the Department of Education.

COLLEGE AID HANDBOOK

The Association of Independent Colleges and Universities in Massachusetts (AICUM) has published a pamphlet titled "Handbook for College Admissions and Financial Aid." This publication provides information about financial aid for college, including the state supported programs to assist students. The pamphlet also contains profiles of the sixty Massachusetts Colleges and Universities that are members of AICUM.

Any prospective college students and their parents who would like a copy may obtain one by contacting Rep. Murray's office at 722-2400, or write to Room 134, State House, Boston, MA 02133.

MURRAY APPOINTED TO TAXATION COMMITTEE

In addition to serving on the Committees on Counties and Local Affairs, Rep. Murray has been appointed to the Committee on Taxation for the 1983-84 Legislative session.

She also was unanimously elected by her G.O.P. colleagues as the Republican Caucus permanent secretary.

Maki resigns from ConCom

It is with deep regret that I submit my resignation as Chairman of the Cohasset Conservation Commission, and also regret that I will not be able to continue as a Commissioner.

Recently, the accomplishment of my duties on the Commission has been impacted by my full time job with the federal government and by my family responsibilities.

As a federal employee, I have been affected by recent administration policies that have effectively eroded government salaries to the point where we are receiving some 18 percent less than our counterparts in private industry, and more recently, the proposal to eliminate our cost of living pay increases for the coming year will cause to me seek part time employment in order to supplement my present salary.

Cohasset is very unique with regard to its multiplicity of wetlands and the time and care that should be taken to evaluate development in its wetlands. During the past few years I have discovered that the proper administration of the Wetlands Protection Act in Cohasset is almost a full time effort, and I regret that I was not able to have given more. I leave, however, with the knowledge that I gave all I possibly could, and I think we have accomplished much.

I am grateful for having been afforded the privilege of working with some very dedicated people on the Commission, and I will miss them, but my family must now come first in the order of my priorities.

I will continue to my present capacity or in any subordinate capacity as the Commission desires until March 1, 1983.

Total Loans For Home Use				97,651

Loans equal 14 per capita, compared with the state average of six per capita.

Loans are down 3,195, or three percent from fiscal year '81. Loans are down in every category of materials except periodicals and AV equipment.

Twelve percent of adult books purchased and 25 percent of children's books purchased are added or replacement copies of titles previously owned. Fifteen percent of books purchased are paperbound.

BUDGET CUT IN FY '82

In fiscal year 1982, year one of Proposition 2½, the Library's book budget was cut 17 percent. Coupled with an increase in book prices of 14.5 percent, a significant reduction in purchasing power resulted. This accounts for a decline of 23 percent in books and audio-visual items purchased. Adult nonfiction books purchased were down 37 percent, and magazine subscriptions were cut 11 percent.

Staff hours were cut 12 percent, and open days reduced 17 percent by closing Wednesdays. Nearly the same level of work was conducted, however: loans per open day were 17 percent higher than in the previous year. This increased workload means some non-urgent tasks take longer to get done than before, or simply are not done.

INTERLIBRARY LOAN

Of 352 requests to other libraries, 287 (82 percent) were filled by Hingham (145), Quincy (66), Boston (31), and seven other libraries through the Regional Library System. This is a decline of 28 percent from last year. The libraries which receive our ILL requests are also suffering from Proposition 2½ cuts in staff. Hingham honors our ILL requests in lieu of granting free access to nonresidents, standard practice among other Massachusetts libraries. Collections of "large print" books totaling 80 volumes were supplied by Quincy and Weymouth.

NEW BORROWERS

Adult, 424; children, 158; the total of 582 is equal to eight percent of total population. Of these new borrowers, 143 (25 percent) are from Scituate, Hingham, Hull and other towns. As libraries close different hours of the week, users seek memberships in more than one.

CHILDREN'S SERVICES

— Professional staff on duty during all out-of-school hours to select, catalog and maintain the collection and to assist children, parents and teachers in use of materials.

— Forty-one preschool story hours, total attendance 450; conducted by 11 volunteers recruited and trained by the staff.

— Six family story hours, evenings, July-August, total attendance 195.

— Summer Reading Incentive Program: 127 participants, with 92 reading 20 or more books and earning a free paperback book, gift of the Friends.

— One-hundred ten story hours and class lectures at Osgood, Deer Hill and the High School.

— Fifteen film programs at Osgood and Deer Hill, total attendance 2,630.

— Nineteen class visits to the Library for library instruction.

— Sixty-seven classroom deposits totaling 557 books.

— Prepared reading lists for fourth, fifth and sixth grades.

VOLUNTEERS

Loan desk and office, 2,484 hours; 42 nursing home visits (483 loans), 168 hours; Friends' board activities (10 hrs./mo.), 120 hours; story hours, 118 hours; and 38 Junior Volunteers (children's room), 587 hours.

Total hours: 3,477, averages 67 hours a week, equal to two fulltime employees, or to 25 percent of paid staff. We estimate the value of this labor to be about $20,000.

GIFTS

Mrs. A. Werk Cook, $100 to Friends' book fund; Mrs. Alice Nisula, $100 to Friends' book fund; Cohasset Savings Bank, 10,000 library book marks.

Gifts to the memorial book fund: Miss Isobel Grassie, in memory of Ruth Enders Hunt; Esther J. Stearns, in memory of John Bishop; Ruth S. Cumner, in memory of John Bishop; Barbara Ellis, in memory of Paul Blackmur.

Maurice E. McLoughlin, Jrs., $100 for children's science books in memory of Adele Froehlich.

Thousands of used books were donated to the Library and to the Friends' book sale.

Twenty-nine of the Library's magazine subscriptions are donated each week or each month by members of the community.

FRIENDS OF THE COHASSET LIBRARY

In June, the Friends reported membership at 183, down from the 263 members in May, 1981. In an effort to strengthen the organization, a follow-up mailing to past members was conducted in November.

Major gifts to the Library in 1982 were: the outdoor book return box, $925, needed since the Library is now closed Wednesdays all year and Sundays in summer; memberships to the Museum of Science, Museum of Fine Arts, Children's Museum and New England Aquarium, $1,135; these passes admit a family of four free; $675 for the Encyclopedia of Science and Technology; and $508 for filmstrip projectors and a cassette recorder.

Citizens who wish to help maintain quality services in a year when the Library cannot ask for increased tax support are urged to join the Friends. Membership forms are available at the Library.

Drama Workshop hopes for festival appearance

By Ron Emmons

Saturday, February 12 the Cohasset Drama Workshop will take what it hopes will be the first step toward yet another appearance at the Massachusetts High School Drama Festival when it performs at the regional competition in Duxbury.

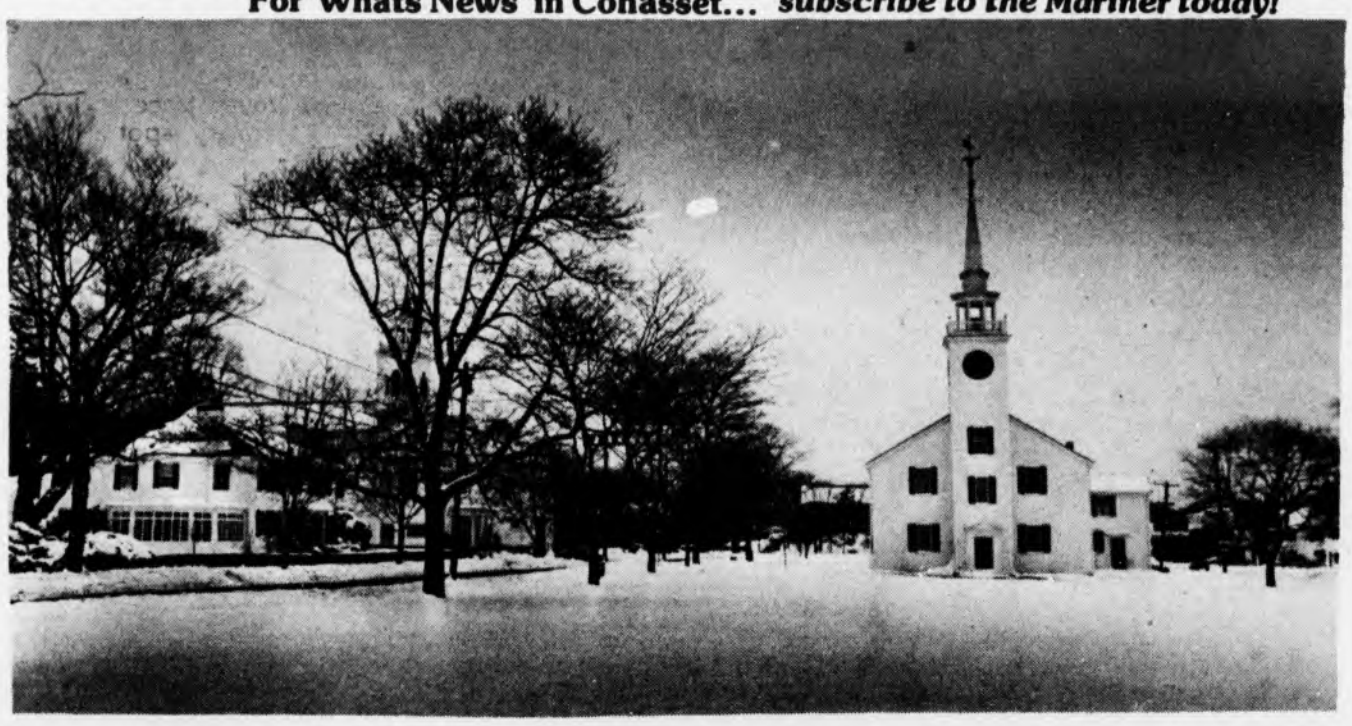
Cohasset's entry this year is a story theatre adaption of Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night" entitled "What You Will!" prepared especially for the Drama Workshop by director Ron Emmons. Combining Shakespeare's own language with narrative passages from Charles Lamb's "Tales from Shakespeare" and the words and actions of such contemporary characters as a Valley Girl and a maid from Brooklyn, a work has been created that will amuse even the most determined Shakespeare hater.

"What You Will!" keeps the basic plot of "Twelfth Night" but presents it in a humorous, fre-form manner similar to that employed by "Story Theatre," the play with which Cohasset won the state festival in 1979. Original music to song lyrics based on those of Shakespeare's play coupled with dance movement adds yet another dimension to the production.

Appearing in "What You Will!" are junior Linton Young as the love-sick Orsino and senior Karen Ekberg as Olivia, the woman who is sick of Orsino's love. Junior Nancy Walls plays Viola, the ship-wrecked girl who disguises herself as a boy to get to know Orsino better. Her brother Sebastian is senior John Ryan.

Other members of Olivia's household are her perpetually drunken cousin, Sir Toby Belch (senior Andrew Long), her maid Maria (played with a decidedly non-English accent by senior Maureen Buckley), and her hypocritically straight-laced butler Malvolio (junior Tom Jones).

Confusing chaotic affairs even more is Sir Andrew Aguecheek, whom junior Kurt Hochkeppel presents as a demented John Travolta direct from a low-budget production of "Saturday Night Fever." Helping to narrate the production through words are juniors Jenny Mitman and John Replogle and senior Samantha Barrett. They are assisted by the dance and mime movement of junior Richele Sargent and freshman Jenny Long.



Also appearing in the cast are sophomores Jillian Ayer, Karlin Isele, and Mike DeSantis as a spaced-out secretary, a female spy, and a detective respectively. Senior Susan Douglas as a minister and freshman Jacqui Fahey as a gypsy, round out the list of actors. Performing the music for "What You Will!" are junior Lily Carbone on vocals and senior Jeff Giles on guitar. Sean O'Connor and Paul Johnson, both seniors, are stage manager and lighting director.

"What You Will!" will be presented at Duxbury High School at 2:25 p.m. February 12. All who wish to attend are reminded that festival rules demand that no one be permitted to enter the theatre once the play begins.

Other schools competing at the Duxbury regional are Hingham "The Madwoman of Chaillott"-9:15 , Norwell "Endgame"-10:05 , Weymouth North "Theme Song for the Married"-10:55, Scituate "Nicholas Nickleby"-12 :45, Duxbury "More from Story Theatre"-1:35, and Hanover "Touch the Bluebird's Song"-3:15. Awards should be announced by 5:00. The public is invited to attend one or all of the performances for a single admission price.

Winners at the regional level will proceed to the semi-finals March 12 and then to the finals March 25 and 26 in Boston.

Local cost $225,000 for Government Island project

By Patricia Anne Walsh

Cohasset residents will be asked to spend $225,000 of the estimated $450,000 total cost for construction and dredging for the granite extension to Government Island Wharf.

Residents also will be asked to approved storing 5000 cubic yards of dredging materials for months on the high Government Island parking lot.

Twelve Cohasset residents attended the second open meeting hearing on the proposed wharf extension, February 2.

Attending were F. Burk Ketchum, Anderson-Nichols' supervisor of the project, Cohasset Resident, William Richardson, project engineer, and Kenneth Alley, structural engineer. Also attending were four of the seven members of the Cohasset Harbor Committee, Charles Fink, chairman; Harry Ritter, Harbormaster; Bernard Salvador, fishermen's representative who owns a 42-foot vessel and Richard Barrow, recreation committee representative; three local fishermen, Glenn Salvador, son of Bernard Salvador, William Figueiredo, who owns a 40-foot Novie, and Laurie Gibbons, who has a 20-foot lobster boat and runs approximately 150 traps. Jeanne and Thomas Gormley, Jr. of Beach Street and William Kleinz of Atlantic Avenue were also present.

Fink said the wharf project was first outlined in the Cohasset Harbor Master Plan developed by Anderson-Nichols, published in April 1980. The design construction project was then estimated at $350,000. Its implementation was scheduled for 1982, but delayed because of loss of expected federal funds from the U.S. Commerce Dept. and Coastal Energy Impact Program.

Fink described the benefits as an all-tide, deepwater pier, four-fold increase in tie-up space, improved parking, improved gear-handling, increased efficiency and maximum economic potentials of commercial and recreational fleets.

He stressed the value of Cohasset's fishing industry. It employs 60 people (small businessmen), generates $1.2 million wholesale or $3.7 million retail, spends $800,000 to $1 million locally in fish money, triggers "2.64 to 3.3" million in revenues, and generates local jobs.

Richardson said studies done at the Universities of Maine and Rhode Island show every dollar a fisherman or processor spends on wages, insurance, fuel, food or equipment results in over three times that much spending by the people with whom he does business.

Richardson said that borings had been completed which show too much ledge for erecting wood pilings. Construction and dredging costs for a granite extension are estimated at $450,000. Granite has a 100-year life before extensive repairs and gunniteing are necessary. With tides, storms and ice, the wood would only have a 30 to 50 year life expectancy. He expects that under pending legislation, $225,000 might be realized through a State Fish Pier Grant, leaving $225,000 for the town's share.

Richardson estimated the town could generate $23,173 in annual income composed of $11,298 in moorings fees at $2 a ft., $10,000 from the proposed new wharf usage fee for 40 boats at $250 each; $1,250 from the proposed dinghy tie-up fees for 25 dinghies at $50 per year; and $625 from 50 transient boats at $12.50 per day.

Richardson figured the annual finance cost of the town's $225,000 would be $26,325 over 20 years.

If the $23,173 annual proposed income were realized, he estimated a net annual cost of $3,152.

The 5000 cubic yards of dredged material would be deposited on the parking lot on the top of the island. Richardson feels the state would reject any proposal to dump it on Bassings Beach. The dredged material would have to dry out for several months before it could be used by the highway department.

Figueiredo said the dredgings would give off an undesireable oder. "Do you realize the smell of that stuff? I do. I worked on the dredging years ago when they dumped the stuff on Bassings Beach! What about the people living nearby?"

Richardson said that the dredgings would be dumped in the fall, and soon freeze, so the smell wouldn't be so bad.

Barrows wondered if by using state funds, the state could control parking, or demand public access to Government Island.

Immediately after the meeting, Figueiredo said he did not see any necessity for enlarging the wharf, because he was well able to operate his 40-foot Novie, without any addition.

Figueiredo also said he expects his suit against the town regarding placing moorings in Baileys creek, (on land he claims his deeds give him title to) will be heard shortly in court. Figueiredo has been battling the town for several years, and is attempting to develop his marina in which he hopes to rack boats.

Anderson-Nichols Master Plan shows "widening of the town boat ramp, a new parking area for cars and trailers and acquiring property adjacent to Parker Avenue boat ramp" on lands which Figueiredo says he owns.

Figueiredo objects to being charged a mooring fee for his boat and says he paid one bill "under protest," but none since. "Why should I be charged for using property I own?" he asked.

Harbormaster Ritter said Saturday, "I would prefer the town's share of the wharf extension cost to be 25 rather than 50 percent."

Cruise buffs have long recognized the Pacific Ocean as the world's most delightful cruise area. The world's largest ocean offers a variety of islands, cultures, friendly inhabitants as well as the world's loveliest isles and lagoons. It is quite thrilling to approach many of the Pacific's exotic islands in much the same manner as the first Europeans did, by sea. Words do not do justice in describing the jutting volcanic peaks of Bora Boar and its lush vegetation which surrounds the aquamarine-turquoise lagoon. Moorea, Tahiti, Tonga, Fiji, Samoa, Hawaii and the "Continent in miniature," New Zealand, all await you.

A romantic get away, a time of excitement and adventure are all available to you when you let the professionals at COLPITTS TRAVEL CENTER arrange your vacation holiday. Homelessness is unacceptable for one or for many

By Lois Martin

It was dispiriting. Unless they failed to reflect his views accurately in a Jan. 29 news story in the Patriot Ledger, the head of the state Welfare Department wouldn't give a hoot if I were out in the cold unless I could show him I was one of thousands.

The article said Commissioner Thomas Spirito had let Gov. Michael Dukakis know his administration hadn't just discovered that some people don't have homes. He said homelessness wasn't anything new, that his department had known about it, and had been working on it.

PATCHES

The tone, however, seemed to ignore one's sensitivity by showing little emanating from the commissioner.

If I am cold, I am equally as cold if I'm the only one cold or if 8000 others are just as cold. If I am hungry, I am no less hungry than if 100 of us are hungry. If I have no shelter, no place to sleep, I am as homeless as I can ever be. Pain, suffering is not dependent on its being shared by others.

I know this is out of character for anyone with Republican roots that go back to sea captains. I've heard the 'pull yourself up by your bootstraps' theory. And I want to do that and I hope others will, too. But some people have no straps and no boots.

And even if I tell myself they did nothing to earn them, blew every opportunity to get them and probably don't deserve them, that will not diminish their suffering. I can live with the reality that 'the poor are with us always.' But I can't live with the knowledge of their pain without endorsing reasonable efforts to eliminate it. I know there are bums. But nobody can promise not to be one.

And I don't think any party or any platform or any person of merit would or could persuade me differently.

The commissioner's premise seemed founded on his being satisfied that he had a good idea where the homeless were, Boston, Springfield and maybe Lynn. How does that make anything better...unless the information is used to hasten housing and help. And to say 'only' Boston has the problem in numbers. Then do Boston.

The fact that homelessness has existed is no reason to be comfortable with the continuation of the situation. Anyone who's always had acne would not be relieved to hear the doctor say, "You've always had it anyway." Who wants to get used to having pimples or to being homeless.

What kind of attitude is it that puts away a problem, accepting it more, because it's always been there. A shallow one, a pale, paltry, truly disheartening response, if, as I said, his attitude was fairly reflected and interpreted.

And about the large shelters, the suggestion was he discourages those because it won't help families get out of the cycle of homelessness. So what do we do, come a big storm and a bitter cold night? Does that mean if I have no bed that night, it wouldn't be good for my psyche or my sense of striving if I have a warm place to sleep? I'd take a large shelter or a small one, any one if I needed it.

Hang my cycle. Get through the night.

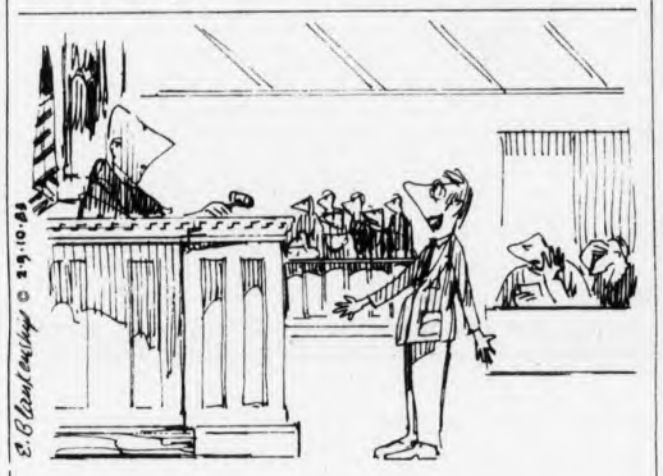
The department chief said no one should rush into a program that could jeopardize or discredit the concept. Hog wash!

For Lord's sake, what do we do with the cold, hungry and homeless, set up 12 more study committees, hold three public hearings at several month's intervals, bask in the laurels of knowing there really aren't as many homeless as we feared there might be?

Rush. Can rushing do more harm to us as individuals or as a society than meandering? Is it ever appropriate to be slow to respond to human need, even that of only one person?

In some ways the attitude represented reminded me a bit of that scurrilous rape case last year when five young men were at first given a $5 per week fine to pay...to the court, mind you, for having admitted they were guilty of raping a woman whose character was categorized as being less than pristine. She'd been around anyway. That infuriated me, the stupid $5 fine and the characterization of that woman. It was as if the court said it was okay to hurt someone if she hadn't managed to sustain a glowing reputation. What would it have cost them if they'd have raped a 'nice' woman, $15 bucks a week?

There's a dight of that inhuman pomposity in the welfare story as reported. It's okay for a few to be hungry or cold, nothing to worry about, no big crisis.



It's an emergency if any one of us needs help.

Oh, I know what they're saying, those who mutter about the revival of an interest in the homeless, a political handle or logo to put spotlights of holiness on Dukakis, some say.

Or a fad. Well if it's a fad I hope it lasts a while. And when it's over, may homelessness be gone too.

May it ever by stylish, a whim, a craze to be humane.

State sewer ban hinders business growth

By Patricia Anne Walsh

Several Cohasset businessmen, served by the small Elm Street sewer plant, would like to expand their firms, but find the state sewer ban a hindrance.

Other residents feel building a $13 million central sewer facility will result in development that would unalterably change Cohasset for the worse. Some say Cohasset could "become a Marshfield or a Weymouth."

Kimballs-by-the-Sea Motel is also being hindered by former restrictions on the permit required by the Zoning Board of Appeals eight years ago, and by the recent decision from the Town Counsel's office. This advised Selectmen that they should adhere to one condition — "restricting the public promotion and advertising of the restaurant to the general public."

Kimballs-by-the-Sea wants to open the motel dining room to the public, "provided that no more than 125 persons may be served at any one time."

The motel owners, who contemplated purchasing the nearby Cox Estate, have also proposed to use the Cox property for "functions, etc.," as well as "a center specializing in 'Think Tank' and 'Problem Solving' activities, seminars, and business meetings."

At a Jan. 11 meeting, the Sewer Commissioners received an application from Charlotte's Hair Stylist, 1 Pleasant Street, to add two new sinks. The Commissioners said state approval would be required before they took action.

Nov. 23 Sine Pounder appeared to discuss her application to bake cookies at the Bread Shop, 11 Elm St. She was later given temporary approval to sell cookies. Pounder said because the Commission does not want an increase in water flow, she is unable to provide a full-service bakery.

Sept. 21, 1981, builder Richard Farwell wrote to the Commissioners on behalf of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Bravo, who own the small pie shaped "Christmas Tree" lot between Curtis Compact and Cohasset Central Market.

Farwell said the Bravos wanted to "build an addition" to Central Market, which they own. "The addition will probably have one half opened up to the Central Market for additional store space, and the other half to a new tenant." He added they wanted permission "to tie in two new toilets and two sinks for a possible two tenant situation."

In a letter dated Nov. 18, 1981, Bravo said he wanted "two commercial stores," and the unapproved plan by Farwell in the building inspector's office shows no connecting door into the Central Market through the common wall.

Jan. 3, 1978, Thomas McMahon, a Cohasset resident and Director of the State Division of Water Pollution Control, wrote that in view of the sewage overloard on the existing treatment plant, "I feel it is necessary at this time to prohibit any further connections, of any amount, to the municipal sewerage system without specific approval of this office...until a new or expanded facility is actually under construction or the Town is consistently reducing the flows reaching the treatment facility to below its design capacity, this sewer ban will remain in effect."

Two years later, McMahon wrote regarding the request by the motel to open its facilities to the public. "While our existing sewer connection and extension permit regulations exempt existing sewer connections, any increase in flow of such connections is not exempt and must be the subject of an application to this Division."

However, Nov. 20, 1981, McMahon wrote to Bravo that "the project you have described would result in an insignificant modification to an existing connection," and also wrote to the Sewer Department Dec. 22, 1981 regarding this approval: "...an insignificant modification to an existing connection which would not require a permit from this Division."

Oct. 12, 1982, Kimball-by-the-Sea owners, the Roy family, met with the Sewer Board to discuss "their advertisement which appeared Sept. 1 announcing the expansion of a dining facility from serving meals to motel customers only to opening the dining room for dinner."

McMahon sent a letter addressed to Kimballs telling them to "immediately cease serving the general public (as opposed to motel residents) until such time as the new municipal wastewater treatment plant is on line."

McMahon wrote that after members of this regulatory branch met with the motel owners and their engineer submitted data, the Division of Water Pollution Control "would interpose no objection to the Town's issuing any permit(s) to Kimballs-by-the-Sea necessary for opening its dining room to the public provided that no more than 125 persons may be served at any one time."

After learning about approvals to Bravo and the motel, several residents questioned whether these approvals would result in increasing the problems of the present plant and lead to mandated construction of the $13 million facility, rather than allowing Charles DeSantis' alternative plan to proceed.

The Sewer Commissioners also had reservations and voted to send a letter to McMahon. This letter dated Jan. 18 utilized State Sanitary Code averages for daily flows, and said, "We are concerned that the low 1982 daily flow of 4,922 gallons from the hotel-restaurant may be caused by hotel low occupancy and not from water saving procedures." The present plant permit is for a total of 72,000 gallons per day.

The motel was built by John Carzis on land that was formerly occupied by Kimballs, a picturesque but delapidated restaurant and function facililty, by a gas station which he demolished, and by "The Shack" which burned.

During Prohibition, Cohasset was famous as a rum-running port. Carzis once showed many trap doors over the building's pilings and through which the bootleggers hoisted their "catch."

When Carzis demolished Kimballs, residents realized what a spectacular view of the harbor the site afforded and opposition grew against construction of a modern motel.

During construction, the motel was picketed one day by many marching mothers. Pictures of the march and the late Jessie Cox arguing there with Carzis were shown on television.

Neighbors opposed the permit, and focused on parking problems in the area. As a result of the hearing, in which the 58 rooms and 71 parking spaces were discussed by Carzis and his designer Ernest Herzog, the Board of Appeals in 1975 rendered a lengthy decision with 12 conditions and limitations. Among the most important were:

The motel shall not occupy space above the second floor, which is the second story above the basement. (Carzis then enclosed the third floor, with plumbing in a wrap-around roof. It is not used for motel rooms).

The owner shall provide an employee trained to park cars to utilize parking space to its best advantage (valet parking).

Cars of all employees, visitors and owners will in no event be parked on the street.

All sewerage disposal must be by and through connection with public sewer constructed as an extension down Elm Street of the existing town sewer.

Each owner or operator of the motel shall faithfully comply with the undertakings by John Carzis set forth in his letter dated Aug. 30, 1974 and the facilities of the motel shall be maintained for the benefit of occupants of motel rooms, and for the owner and his personal guests only.

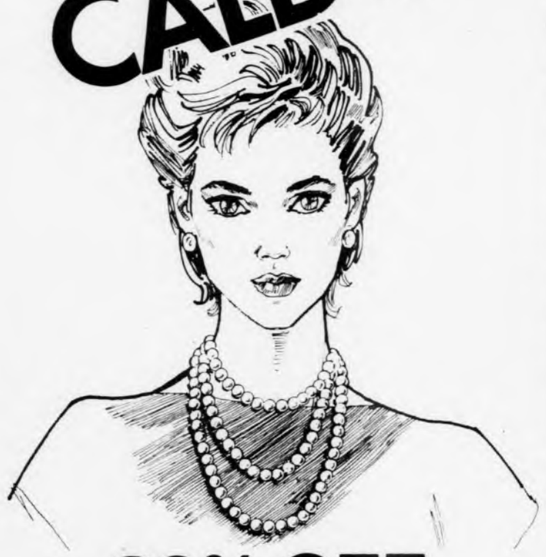
The Carzis letter stated, "This is also intended to give assurance that all facilities contained in the building are ancillary to the operation of a motel. Those areas that are not restricted to the exclusive use of motel guests will not be so operated as to produce any 'invitation' to the general public to utilize the facilities."

The Roys have spent a lot of money renovating since they purchased from Carzis, and converted two suites into conference rooms. They do not wish to discuss their various legal and permit difficulties until "things are finalized."

They were surprised by the decision of Assistant Town Counsel John J. Slater, II, because they had not received a copy.

Selectman Mary Jane McArthur said at a recent selectmen's meeting that she interpreted the ruling, which cited an innholder's licensee as having legal obligations to serve strangers, travellers, as saying the motel could "serve the public, but not advertise" — not advertising hinges on the "invitation."

The Roys will pursue their First Amendment rights with their lawyer, Charles Humphreys. It is expected they may buy or rent land for additional parking.



Building Inspector Robert Dennis said he has received an inquiry concerning the St. Anthony's Sociables Sweetheart Dinner Dance to be held at the motel Feb. 5 with tickets at $50.00 per couple. It said "whatever the church may be doing" (posters, newspaper announcements, parish flyers), "my investigation shows that the motel is not advertising the event."

By Joan Pinkham

Valentine's Day was not taken lightly when grandmother was a girl. A certain Miss Ashmore advised her readers that she did not approve of young girls giving costly gifts on Valentine's, even to the "dearest boy. It's much better to offer some simple gift wrought by your own deft fingers." And so, many a bachelor was destined to receive an eye-glass wiper made of chamois, a pansy penwiper, a sewing box "if he was at the mercy of his laundress," or, if he traveled, "strange lands for to see," the travelling case made of white Java canvass bound in crimson galloon, was suggested. Heaven forbid, that she scandalize the neighbors by turning up at the door of her dearest with a heart-shaped box containing a jar of homemade

VALENTINE JAM

1 pound dried apricots
1 no. 2½ can sliced pineapple
1 8-ounce jar maraschino cherries

Cut apricots in halves and soak in juices from pineapple and cherries, adding water to cover. Cook until apricots are tender. Cut pineapple slices into eights and add. Measure and add an equal amount of sugar. Cook until thick and clear. Add quartered cherries. Pour in hot glasses or jars. Seal with paraffin. Wrap in transparent paper. Tie with red ribbon.

Lest you forget, Monday is Valentine's Day — all day. No need to paint the town red, just as long as you remember a valentine at each place setting, perhaps a pair of red candles, but no roses for a centerpiece. Timely they may be, but last year they were $45 a dozen and could run to $60 this year "they" say. Why not a dish of raspberry sherbet, or vanilla ice cream and strawberries for dessert with these cookies made by Eleanor Bagley, filled with red jelly or jam and called

THUMB PRINT COOKIES

1/2 c. butter (soft)
1/2 c. shortening
1/2 c. brown sugar, firmly packed
1 tsp. vanilla
2 eggs
2 c. sifted flour
1/4 tsp. salt
1½ c. chopped nuts
Red jelly or jam

Mix butter, shortening, sugar, vanilla and egg yolks together thoroughly. Stir in flour and salt. Roll into 1" balls. Dip in slightly beaten egg whites then in nuts. Place 1" apart on cookie sheet. Bake in 375 oven for 5 min. Remove from oven and quickly press thumb gently into top of each. Bake about 8 min., then put a little jelly or jam in each thumbprint. Will keep 2 weeks in airtight container. Makes 48.

Sending valentines is nothing new. Some historians say it was all started back in 270 A.D. by a young priest who was beheaded. Valentinus refused to renounce his Christianity and on the eve of his execution he smuggled out a note to a young lady who had refriended him, signing himself "from your Valentinus." And that, say the romantics, is how it all began. Instead of fattening candies, why not make your sweetie

BARBARA'S TOMATO QUICHE

A 10" pie crust
3 large tomatoes, peeled, seeded, chopped
1 medium onion, finely chopped
3 T butter
1 tsp. salt, pepper to taste
1/4 tsp. thyme
1/2 lb. Swiss cheese, diced
3 eggs, well beaten
1 c. light cream

Bake crust in 425 oven for 10 min. Combine first five ingredients in a saucepan. Cook over medium heat until mixture is reduced by half. Place cheese in pie crust. Pour tomato mixture over cheese. Mix eggs and cream. Pour over tomato mixture. Bake 10 min. at 425, then reduce heat to 375 for 35 min. or until set. Let quiche stand for a few minutes before serving.

Red Cross Bloodmobile proves successful

Of 160 people who indicated they would donate blood at the Cohasset Red Cross Triannual Bloodmobile January 31, 103 came and donated 90 pints of blood.

The various groups participating in the Bloodmobile were St. Anthony's (18), St. Stephen's (15), First Parish (12), Norfolk Conveyor (5), Mason's (5), Rotary (5), Second Congregational (4), South Shore Home Care(3), Horne Memorial (1) and independents (30).

The Chapter Bloodmobile Coordinator, Corinne Cahill thanks the 25 volunteers who assisted in signing up donors and the 25 volunteers who assisted her on the day of the Bloodmobile as receptionists, secretaries, canteen aids, donor room aids, escorts and babysitters. She also thanks the news media (newspapers, radio and TV), the First Parish Church for the use of its facilities, the Red Cross staff and, most important, the donors.

Cahill estimated the overall operation of the Bloodmobile required 200 hours of volunteer services.

The next community Bloodmobile will be held Monday, June 13. Anyone wishing to contact potential donors, or any groups wishing to become part of this next Bloodmobile should call Donor Promotion Chairman, Al Odermatt (383-1283). Anyone willing to perform any of the above volunteer services on the day of the Bloodmobile should call Corinne Cahill, (383-9265), Chapter Bloodmobile Coordinator.

CHS sports update...

By Alana O'Brien

HOCKEY

The CHS varsity hockey team clinched the South Shore League title Saturday night with a 4-2 decision over Hanover.

"It was a game we knew we had to win and with it we will definately go to the state tournament," said coach Tom Burnell.

The Skippers have six more non-league games that won't affect their tournament standings.

The Hanover Indians scored the first goal off a power play, however Cohasset came back with two quick goals and two more over the second and third periods. Hanover scored the final goal to leave it at 4-2.

Seniors Don O'Neil and Danny Bowen along with freshman Jeff O'Neil and Dan Curran recorded the goals for Cohasset.

Coach Burnell praised goalie Mark Brown and defensive players Rich Evans, Kevin Quilty and David Ormisten for strong games.

In other hockey action last week, Cohasset defeated League rival Hull, 5-4.

After a scoreless first period, Don O'Neil and John Casey scored two goals a piece in the second period while the Pirates managed only two goals for a 4-2 second period.

One minute into the third period, the Pirates scored two quick goals to tie it. With seven minutes remaining, John Casey scored his hat trick and winning goal off a powerplay with assists from Dan Bowen and Rich Evans.

Coach Tom Burnell said his team played a strong game considering many players were sick and injured and people who usually don't play saw a lot of ice time.

Senior Mike Julian and junior Perry Harris played well for the Skippers.

Friday the team plays Don Bosco at home at 6 p.m. The all-star game takes place Saturday at Plymouth at 6 p.m.

ATHLETES OF THE WEEK

Senior Captain Gia Barresi scored her 500th career point Friday night in an upset victory over Abington.

Baressi, a three year starter on the basketball team, also set a school record this season by scoring 33 points against Middleboro in an 84-35 victory.

Senior forward John Casey recorded his first hat trick of the season in last week's hockey action against League rival Hull.

Coach Tom Burnell praised Casey for another fine performance in their hockey match against Hanover Saturday night.

GYMNASTICS

The CHS gymnastics squad edged over League opponent Norwell 101.3 to 100.

Senior captain Karen Ekberg and sophomore Julia Sechen led the Skippers with 26.9 points apiece.

Sechen came in second on the bars with a 6.2 and placed third with a 6.2 on the beam.

Ekberg placed second on the vault with a 7.9 and scored a 7.8 for second place on the floor exercises.

The squad is now 6-2 with their final match away at Rockland this week.

The All-League match is February 12 at 7 p.m. in Duxbury.

BOYS BASKETBALL

The CHS varsity boys basketball team improved its record 7-9 last week with two impressive victories.

Last Tuesday, the Skippers defeated the Middleboro Sachems 58-55.

In the final 30 seconds of play, freshmen Tony Bogarty and James Creed netted a pair of free throws each to clinch the win.

Bogarty led all scorers with 20 points junior forward David Barcomb chipped in 14 points and grabbed eight rebounds, while James Creed netted 12 points and blocked three shots.

Sophomore David McDonald played a strong floor game for Cohasset Friday. The Skippers traveled to Abington and defeated the Green Wave 69-50.

Freshman James Creed led Cohasset with 23 points and 16 rebounds. Junior David Barcomb tallied 21 points for the Skippers.

The team faces the Rockland Bulldogs Friday night at 7:30.

GIRLS BASKETBALL

The girls varsity basketball team traveled to Abington and beat the Green Wave in a 55-52 upset.

Abington, League champs since 1979, has never been beaten by Cohasset in its eight years in the South Shore League.

Coach Bill Fallon says this win is the biggest in recent years in girls sports at CHS. "It was a team effort all the way."

Senior Captail Gia Baresi led Cohasset with 16 points and 15 rebounds. Sophomore Janet DiGirolamo chipped in 13 points and sophmore Carla Lucas netted 12 points.

In other League action last week, the girls defeated Middleboro 51-45.

Senior captain Gia Barresi and sophomore Tracy Fitzpatrick put the game away for the Skippers with a couple of big hoops in the final minutes of action.

Barresi took the game high scoring honors with 22 points.

Senior forward Beverly Mullaney netted nine points and hauled down eight rebounds, all in the first quarter before being sidelined with an injury.

Junior Jennie Dickerman and sophomore Janet DiGirolamo had strong floor games netting seven and six points respectively.

The Skippers, now 9-7, face the Rockland Bulldogs at home Friday night.

Deer Hill 4th, 5th and 6th grade theatre core groups perform plays at Osgood School in the afternoon.

Core group plays at Deer Hill, 7:30 p.m. Fourth and fifth grade group present Hercules and his 12 adventurous feats; the sixth grade will present Perseus and stories of his mythological family. The public is invited.

FRIDAY, FEB. 18

"Greek Day" at Deer Hill School. The theatre residency culminates in all-day festival: before lunch-fourth grades present Greek culture through puppetry, dance; fifth grades have organized a mini-Olympiad competition; and the sixth grades will display five different booths featuring Greek history and life.

The core group plays will be performed for the Deer Hill School beginning at 1:15 p.m.

Parents are welcome to stop by the school during "Greek Day" and watch the various activities.

SPELLING WORDS

This week's are studying, succeed, success, sufficient and superintendent.

EARLY DECISIONS

The guidance office released the names of four more seniors who have obtained admission to colleges under the Early Decision Plan: Jill Grant to Colgate, Maureen Buckley to Bates, Fred Zotos to Northeastern, and Kristin Wilkin to Duke University.

LOLIPOPS

Grades 9 and 10 are taking orders in the cafeteria for red heart-shaped lolipops at 75 cents each, to be delivered to recipients on Valentine's Day. Profits will enrich the class treasuries. Perhaps some administrators will show their gratitude to their secretaries and clerks by having some delivered, or girls will receive them from unknown admirers.

DEBATING

Coach Edward Sheehan says the CHS Debate Team will meet Wednesday, Feb. 16, and March 2 at East Bridgewater High after school in the afternoon. They will participate in the Tournament March 16, at a site yet to be decided.

SOUTH SHORE VO TECH

South Shore Vocational Technical High School will conduct its annual Open House Thursday, Feb. 10 from 7 to 9 p.m. Programs at both the Abington and Hanover campuses will be open for visitation and discussions with staff and students.

Prospective students are encouraged to visit either or both campuses with their parents.

U/Mass Boston offers Chancellor's scholarships

UMass/Boston will offer 20 Chancellor's Scholarships for Excellence to degree-seeking applicants entering the University for the first time in the fall semester.

Applicants must be Massachusetts residents and meet certain requirements: academic standing in the top five percent of their graduating class; excellence in the arts or distinctive accomplishments in the area of public/community service.

First review for candidates is March 1. For additional information, contact Enrollment Services, UMass/Boston, Harbor Campus, Boston, 02125, 929-7105.

Art Center invites kids for February vacation

Kids who are looking for something creative to do during February 21-25 school break are invited to participate in the South Shore Art Center's "Child's Vacation Drop-In."

The drop-in is designed to allow kids the freedom to come to the center from 10:30-noon and pursue an art project as frequently as they want.

Lisbeth Koopman-Wyman, former art instructor at the Osgood School, will be at the center to work with the kids on various projects. Open to ages 7-12, the participants may elect to paint, draw or make a collage and also to work on a week-long "Surprise" project.

A nominal fee will be charged for each day's participation. For additional information call the center at 383-9548.

Greek culture, plays at Deer Hill

By Karin Bartow

Greek life, culture and mythology pervade the Deer Hill School.

Large murals of Hercules, Athena, Medusa, Perseus and others dry between applications of paint in the hallways.

Fourth grade students plan and practice dance and puppetry; fifth graders ready Olympiad competitions; sixth grade classes research and construct booths — all centering on Greece, past and present.

Just Around The Corner Company teachers Penny Perel and Marlene Moyer instruct grade level core groups as the theater residency continues. JATC teacher Josh Conescue conducted two workshops in every Deer Hill classroom at the beginning of the program. The Company rehearsed their musical, participatory play, "Orpheus" during their residency at the school and performed the play, with the assistance of all Deer Hill students January 28.

Conescue warmed up the core groups with a week of acting lessons. Perel introduced the students to the plays they will perform and completed casting last week. She and Moyer will rehearse the groups for two weeks. Perel explains that the students were given the basic story outline, but they will "write their own scenes and lines."

The fourth and fifth grade core group will enact the exploits of Hercules and are writing scenes which portray his difficult and dangerous tasks known as the "Twelve Labors of Hercules."

The sixth grade core group is creating a play based on the myth of Perseus, with Gorgons, gods, goddesses and many other interesting characters.

Casts are also creating their costumes with assistance from art teacher Jean O'Malley. O'Malley has involved her art classes in set design and art work which captures the personalities of Greek mythology.

Workshop rehearsals and grade level activities will culminate in the presentation of two core group plays Thursday, Feb. 17 at 7:30 p.m. in the Deer Hill cafeteria, and in a "Greek Day" festival at the school Friday, Feb. 18.

The "Greek Day" includes classroom presentations, Olympiad, and market place in the morning and core group plays beginning at 1:15 p.m.

The community is invited to the evening performance of the plays and parents are welcome to come browse through the school on "Greek Day."

In addition, the core groups will perform their plays for the Joseph Osgood School students Thursday, Feb. 17 in the afternoon. Following the February vacation, Deer Hill students will share their "Greek Day" activities and projects with the Osgood School.

Osgood students participated in classroom workshops, residency rehearsals and a peformance of "Orpheus" by the Just Around The Corner Company in January.

Retired Persons to meet

The Quincy Chapter No. 430 of the National Association of Retired Federal Employees will meet Monday, Feb. 14, at 2 p.m. at the Social Club, 252 Washington St., Quincy.

Frederic Sterritt, Chapter President, will conduct the meeting. Sandra Hamilton from the Dept. of Elder Affairs, will speak and will give a 20-minute slide presentation on the Silver Haired Legislature.

Q & A at the Pratt Library

Paul Pratt Library Director Dick Hayes and Marshfield's Ventress Memorial Library have agreed to write a regional library column on the questions most asked of the Reference Department of each library. This week the column is written by the Paul Pratt Library.

Q. Why is Route 3A named Chief Justice Cushing Highway?

A. "Who Was Who in America 1607-1896" identifies William Cushing as chief justice of the Massachusetts Superior Court from 1777 to 1789. He was vice president of the Massachusetts Convention which ratified the U.S. Constitution in 1788. He was a justice of the U.S. Supreme Court from 1789 to 1810. He was born in Scituate in 1732, and died in Scituate in 1810.

Q. Is there a crest for my family name?

A. The patron was satified with a crest found in "American Armoury and Blue Book" by John Matthews. Serious genealogists and crest-seekers will find several general guides to the subject in a small library, but probably will want to follow up their research in a specialized library such as the genealogy collection at Boston Public Library or the New England Historic Genealogical Society in Boston.

Q. Do you have Edward Coke's books "Commentaries on Littleton" and "Institutes?"

A. Nothing in the card catalog. We found the author's biography in a reference book, "British Authors Before 1800." Sir Edward Coke, 1552-1634 (pronounced "Cook") was the "greatest advocate of the common law of England," and his commentaries on Littleton and his "Institutes" are the bible of Anglo-Saxon legal procedure." The two works were written in 1628-1644. They are not currently available for purchase. We located copies in the Boston Public Library Research Library. The books do not circulate, but must be used in the library.

In Cohasset we fill about 30 requests a year (out of about 100,000 loans and an uncounted number of reference questions) by referring patrons to the non-circulating research collections of the Boston Public Library.

Q. Do you have a book on folk lores (sic), you know, different myths and antidotes (sic)?

A. Faced with a wealth of books old and new, and of reference sources familiar and unfamiliar, "Don't rely on memory, look it up in the catalogs or the indexes." But sometimes, the knowledge and memory of an experienced librarian is the only way to get the answer. People often ask for information without knowing the exact terminology. Often, the librarian doesn't know either, and starts with dictionaries and encyclopedias to define a term or subject. Sometimes a patron knows of a specific book but doesn't know the author or title or the exact subject. Librarians don't mind. Everyone doesn't know something. The library is a good place to go find out.

The librarian in this case understood from the conversation (in professional journals, called "the reference interview") that the patron had recently heard of a specific book, and that the general topic was folk lore and anecdotes. The librarian went to the New Book Shelf, picked up "The Vanishing Hitchhiker: American Legends and their Meanings," by Jan Brunyand. It was exactly what the patron wanted. This author has been on several talk shows, telling some of the interesting contemporary legends and tall tales that seem to thrive in today's urban oral tradition. One of them is about the hitchhiker who vanished from the car, a story repeated as fact by many people, some of whom claim to know a person to whom this has happened.

It's time to do our tax returns. The library has guides to help. New this year are cassette tapes of instruction for the 1040, 1040EZ, and 1040A, provided by the Internal Revenue Service. Books sent to the library by the IRS are: "Your Federal Income Tax for Individuals" (publication 17); "Tax Guide for Small Business" (no. 334); "Tax Information Publications 463 through 909," and a file of reproducible tax forms and schedules.

Sullivan committee formed

The Committee to Elect Diane Sullivan to a one year term on the Cohasset Board of Selectmen has been formed.

Sally O'Reilly of North Main Street was named campaign manager. Joe Mercurio will serve as treasurer and Vincent Nardo will be in charge of nomination papers.

Winnie Kuhn will organize coffee hours and publicity coordinators are Chris Conley and Barbara Vangel.

The following people will be involved with mailings: Rosemarie Mercurio, Eileen Nardo, Chris Murphy, Fran Rogers and Chris Whoriskey.

Anyone wishing to join the campaign effort should call Sally O'Reilly at 383-9462.

Homeless shelter applications

Thomas Spirito, Commissioner of Public Welfare, announced the issuance of applications for individuals and organizations wishing to operate shelters for the homeless.

"Our aim," said Commissioner Spirito, "is to help fund small community based emergency shelters for homeless individuals and/or families. Our priority consists of arranging for a place to sleep and food to eat while assisting clients in locating permanent housing and other needed support services. Those wishing applications are urged to call Elyse Jacob at 727-7120."

Fleming Hardware sold to Smith...

The Smiths will continue to offer this same type of service and will be adding a greater selection of collectables, antique items and one of a kind items since all the Smiths travel a great deal, said Phil Smith.

The Fleming bridal registry has shipped gifts all over the world for their clientele and many times the gifts would be unique to the south shore area such as tiles and Cohasset tile tables and other historical memorabilia.

Hand carved shore birds will still be made exclusively for Flemings and many new items will be added to the bridal registry.

Marine Hardware and boating supplies have always been in the Fleming stock and will be continued.

The new jardin de bon marche (Garden of Good Bargains) will be opened this spring offering unusual garden decorations and supplies for the garden and the amateur flower arranger.

Garden and pool furniture will also be available along with bird feeders and selected pet supplies. A complete housewares dept. along with a do it yourself decorating dept. will be expanded.

Traditional English style small tables, plant stands and benches will also be added.

Mary and John Fleming will continue to make Cohasset their home and will be assisting the Smiths in their efforts to preserve the Fleming traditions.

One of the traditions instituted by Mary Fleming that will continue is having a bowl of fresh gingersnaps on hand at times for customers to enjoy while browsing in the shop.

The gingersnap will be incorporated in a new logo reading Flemings "At the Sign of the Gingersnap For Over Fifty Years."

The shop will continue the Flemings hours of 9 to 5 Monday-Saturday except for closing in the afternoon on Wednesday which has been the Fleming practice for many years. A farewell party is planned for early spring by Mary and John Fleming's many and devoted friends.

At the Cohasset Community Center . . .

By Claudia Story

February and March workshops at the Cohasset Community Center feature two unique series of cooking classes.

Wednesdays from 7-10 p.m., herb savory, herb preparations. February 9 features "Winter Soup with Herb Croutons;" February 16, "Herb Biscuits with Macaroni and Bean Salad;" March 2, a main course, "Court Bouillon;" March 9, dessert, "Rose Geranium Cake;" March 16, "Herb Cooking for every meal." The series or a particular workshop may be taken.

Bread expert Sine Pounder teaches two special bread-making courses Thursdays 7-9 p.m. March 3, "Braided Yeast Bread" and March 10, "Easter Holiday Bread."

Other workshops in February are SAT preparation (high school students), basic programming, word processing and CPR.

The "SAT preparation" course begins February 16 for five weeks. Students meet twice a week for two hours of English (Ron Emmons) and two hours of math (Gino DiGiralamo).

Session two of Don Leary's successful mini-course, "Basic Programming-the Micro Way," begins February 15, 7:30-9:30 p.m. Leary teaches the use of the personal computer on the Timex/Sinclair 1000, which students must bring to class.

Kate Johnson's, "Introduction to Word Processing" begins February 21 from 12:30-2:30 p.m. Learn to correct errors without erasing, modify documents for multiple use, personalize form letters and more.

"CPR" (Cardio-Pulmonary Resuscitation) is being offered with Dr. Michael Equi and Linda Farrag. The class will be held Wednesday and Thursday, Feb. 9 and 10 from 7-11 p.m.

For information and enrollments call the Center, 3 North Main Street, daily 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. at 383-0088.

Obituaries

Lionel Street

Lionel A. Street, 81, retired owner of the M.A. Street Insurance Co. in Cohasset, died Feb. 2 in Quincy City Hospital after a long illness.

Born in Revere, he was a former resident of Dedham, where he graduated from high school.

He began his career with the Trefry Insurance Co. in Boston. He founded the Street Insurance Co. in Boston in 1921 and later changed the name when he moved the business to Cohasset in 1957.

He was a World War I Navy pharmacist's mate, serving in Puerto Rico and St. Thomas. He was a chief pharmacist's mate during World War II and was stationed in London. He was a member of Scituate VFW and American Legion posts, Konohasset Masonic Lodge of Cohasset, South Shore Commandery of East Weymouth, Aleppo Shriners Temple of Wilmington, Pentalpha Chapter of East Weymouth, Scituate Eastern Star and the Independent Insurance Agents Assn.

He was a founder of the Scituate Little League in 1950. He was also manager of the South Shore Clippers.

He leaves his wife, Ethel J. (Miller) Street; five sons: Lionel A. Street Jr. of Worcester, Gerald G. Street of Barnstable, Joseph V. Street of Concord, N.H., John D. Street of Herndon, Va., and Roydon Street of Marshfield; a daughter, Shirley E. Burke of Scituate; a sister, Beatrice Willard of Attleboro; two brothers, Charles Street of Holiday, Fla., and Richard Street of Miami, Fla., 13 grandchildren and several nieces and nephews.

Private funeral services were held Feb. 5 at the Ernest A. Richardson Funeral Home, First Parish Road, Scituate. Burial was in Cudworth Cemetery, Scituate.

Donations may be made to the American Lung Assn., West Grove Street, P.O. Box 43, Middleboro 02346.

Margaret Warren

Margaret (Ward) Warren, 88, of Scituate, a 40-year employee of the Sunlight House for the Blind in Scituate, died Saturday in the Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home after a long illness.

Born in Walton, England, she lived in Canada, New Hampshire and Quincy before moving to Scituate in 1931.

She was graduated from Manchester (N.H.) High School and earned a nursing degree from Tewksbury State Hospital School of Nursing.

She was a nurse at Quincy City Hospital before taking a job at the Sunlight House for the Blind.

She was a member of St. Stephen's Church in Cohasset and the Scituate Senior Citizens.

Wife of the late George F. Warren of Scituate, she leaves two daughters, Inez May Fisher of Rockland and Jessie M. Barbuto of Hingham; a son, George F. Warren, Jr. of Scituate; nine grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

A funeral service was held Tuesday at St. Luke's Episcopal Church, Scituate. Burial was in Union Cemetery, Scituate Harbor.

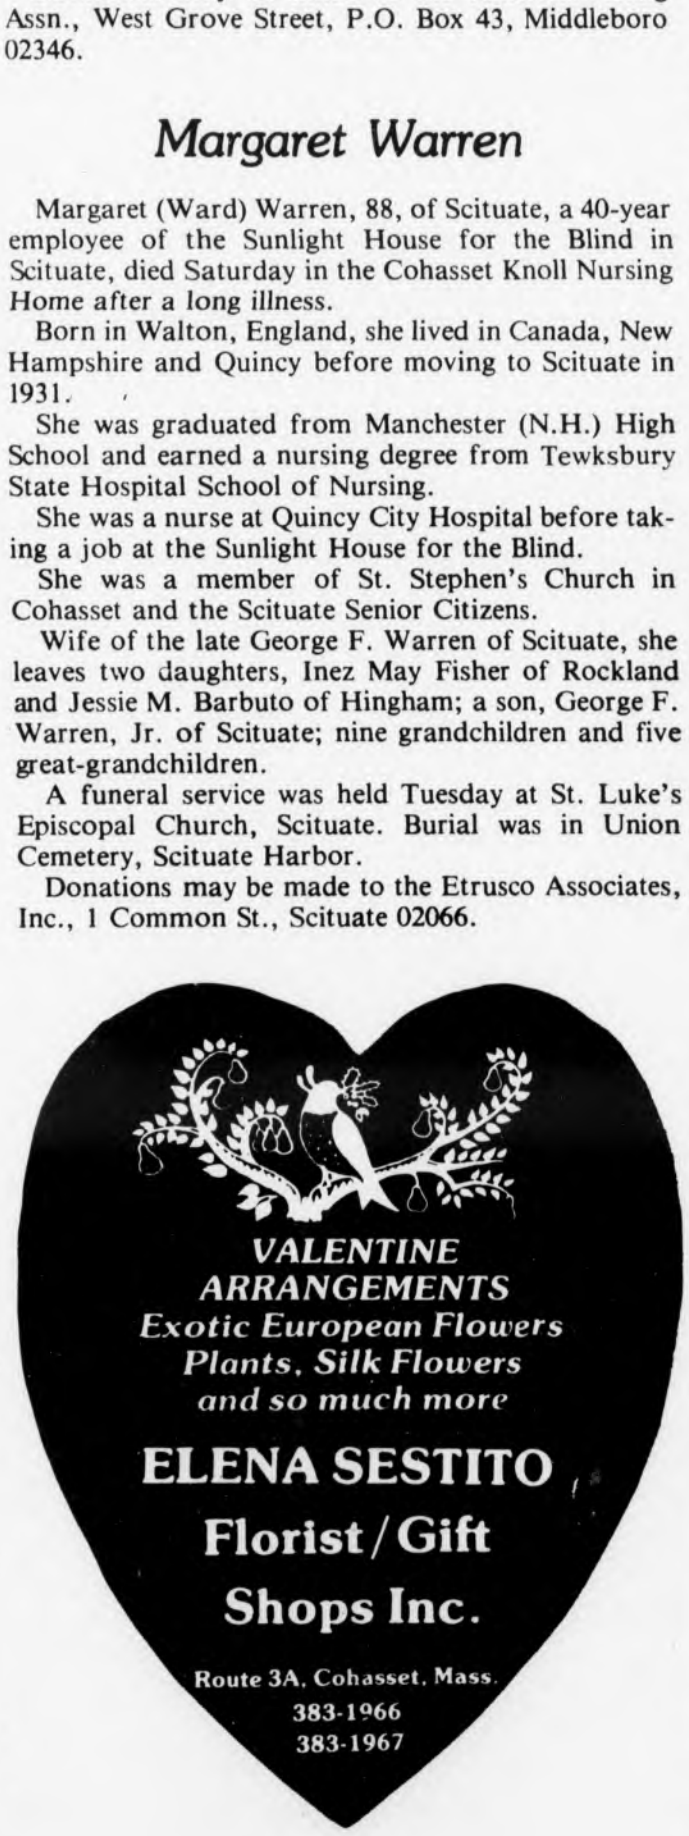
HUMILITY AND OTHER SINS OF PRIDE
By Rev. John Benbow
Second Congregational United Church of Christ

At a dinner party last summer, a lady whom I had never met wanted to talk about the importance of tolerating people of different racial, religious or ethnic backgrounds.

I thought "tolerance" had gone the way of Brotherhood Week, our annual pretense of having affection for people with whom we'd normally never associate, but the lady wanted to share her conviction that it was one of the major virtues. "I just can't stand people who are intolerant," she said at last.

I refrained from expressing my own intolerance of those who cannot tolerate the intolerant.

Her remark has led me to reflect that we human beings have a remarkable capacity to turn our virtues (such as they are) into something like vices. Almost any virtue, pursued with singleminded diligence, can be turned into its opposite, or, to put it another way, every virtue can be put to vicious use.



Being our brother's keeper can make us want to be his master; caring for the less fortunate can lead us to control their destinies; loving our families can tempt us to manipulate their emotions; going to church can make us feel a little bit superior to those who don't.

C.S. Lewis once spoke of a friend of his who liked to help others. "And you could tell the others," he said, "by the hunted looked in their eyes." Of all these virtues turned into vices, the most perverse is the laudable virtue of humility, of which it is so easy to be inordinately proud.

The logical conclusion to this line of thought may seem to be: Avoid virtues, for they may turn into vices. But consider this: if even our virtues can be made vicious, what could our vices, unleased upon the world, accomplish? If we are wise enough to see the evil capacities of goodness, humility, compassion and love, we should hardly overlook the greater evil of their opposites.

Wisdom (and even, perhaps, a measure of virtue) surely lies in the recognition that every one of us is capable of both virtuous and vicious deeds, both good and evil intentions. So beware of your vices, if you have any; and be wary of your virtues, such as they are.

TO BETSY AND JACKIE: Don't worry about your report card, I'll love you anyway! Knock them out, Mr. T! JAJ.

TO MOM: love can be given in many ways and intensities. I love my friends, my wife and of course both my kiddies. My love may vary with my father, sister and brother, but my love will always be strongest for my mother. Love James Edward.

TO ALL MY GOOD friends, especially the special one...Happy Valentines Day. DSC.

I LOVE FRANK HYNES! Jeannie.

I LOVE FRANK HYNES! Love, Beth & Kathy.

HERE'S LOOKING AT YOU Lucky Linda. To the best friend, wife and soon-to-be mother if you beat Valentine's Day. I love you always — don't forget.

I LOVE FRANK HYNES! Roberta

I LOVE FRANK HYNES! Mary Ann.

PUT DOWN THOSE CHOCOLATES! Eating isn't cheating anymore; come to weight watchers and see what's in store...Donna K. Poole

ROB: Happy Valentines at Bentley. Kay, Mike, Kristy.

VALENTINE WISHES to Eileen, Tom, Marie, Dave in Largo, Florida. Remember how you kept each other warm up North. Love, Mary, Mike, Robert, Jimmy, Steven, Michael, Oreo.

BILL: our marriage gets better each day because of your love & understanding. I'll love you "Always & Forever." Chris.

DEAR JUNE: you have made every day Valentines Day for me. This year has been a beautiful Valentine for me.

TO JIM, STEVE, BOB, SCOTT: Happy Valentine's Day. You are my sunshine! Love Mom.

DEAR JOHN: Happy Valentine's Day from your favorite sister in New York. Love you lots, Joan.

TO MY HUSBAND DAN on Valentine's Day. We'll celebrate in a "different" way for a year ago at this very time I was yours and you were mine. One year has passed since we said "I do." So instead of 1 present, you owe me 2! I love you, Brenda.

BUCKY BEAVER: What do you say we get away & have some fun in the Florida sun? Love, Lilly Pie.

HAPPY VALENTINE DAY, Josh & Ben. Love Dad.

VALENTINE: hope to get a gift certificate to bring out my Personal Best. Your Personal Best Valentine.

DEAR PORSE, you are always on my mind. Je t'aime, Judy.

HAPPY VALENTINE'S birthday to Dick Sullivan.

BRIAN: thanks for all our special times, for giving me your love, and for being you. I love you, Kristin.

TO ADAM W and family. Hope you have a Happy Valentine's Day! Love, Kerri.

ROBYN AND RON P. Have a Happy Valentine's Day. We love you both very much. Love, Mommy and Daddy, also Tom, Jerry and Spearmint.

MICHAEL: I love you more today than yesterday. Happy Valentine's Day. Love, Granny Goodwitch.

DEAR JOE: I love you so much and even though we aren't together, you'll always be in my heart. Twinkie.

WELCOME to Marshfield Nana Shea. Have a great Valentine's Day. We love you. Terry, Karen & Holly.

STAN: to our future together: May we always be as happy as we are right now. My love is yours, always & forever. Ollie.

KERRI, JOHN AND MEGAN, Happy Vanentine's Day to my three favorite Valentines. Love, Mom.

I LOVE YOU, Frank Hynes. Heather.

At the So. Shore Art Center . . .

Prominent personalities in the fields of art, sculpture, literature and psychology head the list of speakers for the South Shore Art Center's "Sunday at the Center" series.

This season's four part program "The Creative Process, Part III" focuses on the relationship between the creative person and his work, and the problems and joys of creation.

Scheduled to speak in March are therapist and lecturer at Harvard Medical School Inge Hoffman, artist Betty Kohlberg, sculptor Dennis Kowal, Boston author Dan Wakefield, art historian and Picasso expert, Dr. Paul Tucker and watercolorist Frederick Kubitz.

"Sunday at the Center" opens March 6 from 3-5 p.m., at South Shore Art Center, 103 Ripley Road, with a program titled "You and Your Art," an informal sharing of slides or actual art in progress by artists. This will offer an excellent opportunity for artists to get supportive feedback on their work.

Artists may bring in one work in progress and/or 10 slides.

The topic for March 13 program is "Creating a Watercolor." Frederick Kubitz will give a step-by-step demonstration of painting technique and his personal approach to painting on location. His training as an architect gives him a good focal point from which to draw in answering technical questions about landscape painting.

Kubitz's architectural training is evident in his potrayal of old New England buildings and in his translation of feelings of these old buildings. His work is currently in the collections of the Ford Motor Co., Western Electric, First National Bank of Boston, Touche Ross & Co., Sullivan and Worcester Attorneys and Harvey Industries. He has exhibited in the DeCordora and Dana Museum, The Salmagundi Club of New York, Hudson Valley Art Exhibition and many art galleries in the New England area.

A four-member panel discussion, "The Creative Person," Sunday Mar. 20, 3-5 p.m., will explore the needs of the creative person in relating to today's society. Panel members will be Inge Hoffman, whose private practice deals primarily with the creative personality; Dennis Kowal, nationally known sculptor; Dan Wakefield, Boston author of "Under the Apple Tree," and "Starting Over" which was made into a movie; and Betty Kohlberg, painter and visiting professor, Mass. College of Art.

Margaret Dillon, artist and director of the South Shore Art Center will moderate discussion of personal relationship of the creative person with his or her work. Debate will center on the question: Whether the creative person is unique and needs special support and privileges in personal and private life or if the creative person is not unique and should deal with their work and relationships like any other professional.

Returning for a third year is Dr. Paul Tucker, art historian and assistant professor at the University of Massachusetts. His March 27 presentation, "Picasso-Innovator in a World of Change," will examine Picasso's continuing dialogue with art history and his own times. Dr. Tucker's expertise as a 20th Century art specialist will help his audience understand Picasso's extraordinary contributions to art.

No fee will be charged for the March 6 program; a small fee will be charged for the remaining three March programs. Advance registration is required for all programs. A reduced fee is offered for those registering in advance. March 11 is the registration deadline. For further details call the South Shore Art Center, 383-9548.

Drama Club readies for 'Dangerous Corner'

By David Wadsworth

The Cohasset Dramatic Club's 1983 winter production of J.B. Priestley's three-act mystery "Dangerous Corner" is being readied for performance at Cohasset Town Hall's historic auditorium.

In preparation for each Town Hall production, numerous community theater enthusiasts devote many hours to insure that everything is ready for both cast and audience when the curtain parts on opening night.

In the case of "Dangerous Corner," opening night is Thursday, Mar. 3 at 8.

Set construction crews have transformed the Town Hall stage into the likeness of an English cottage in which the play's seven characters will act out their dramatic roles.

Working with scene designer Wayne Miessner, the set construction crew included Dwight DiBona of Scituate and Arthur Johnson, Burke and Scott Ketcham, Sheldon Ripley and David Wadsworth, all of Cohasset.

Production manager Betty Miessner has assembled a team of backstage workers consisting of Dramatic Club veterans and new members to handle the myriads of details needed to create a stage production.

Stage lighting will be done by Charles Wheelwright of Cohasset. Eleanor Whitney is in charge of stage properties, and sound effects will be coordinated by Peter and Doug Tolman.

The costume committee is headed by Natalie Urmson, and makeup by Kathy Cashin. Elizabeth Eaton is stage manager for "Dangerous Corner," and Elizabeth Dowling the stage secretary. Ellen Kelly will be in charge of ushers.

Artwork for the Dramatic Club's poster was done by Leslie McLeod Warrick, and the playbill designer is Donna Williams. The Town Hall sign has been designed by Fred Koed. Sally Rossi Langer is the offstage prompter.

The Cohasset Dramatic Club's winter play is scheduled for performances on the evenings of March 3 to 5 at the Cohasset Town Hall. It promises to be an event worth seeing.

Don O'Neill shoots in the crease during action against Hull — Cohasset won 5-4.

Cohasset Mariner

vol. V, no. 19 | wednesday, february 16, 1983 | telephone 383-6731 | 30 cents

The snow came & the snow went

Congratulations are in order for Cohasset's Highway Department. Several residents notified the Mariner the department handled the weekend's hazardous roadway conditions efficiently.

The problem now is money. Highway Supt. Harold Litchfield believes his snow and ice removal budget is almost depleted.

As of Jan. 31, Executive Secretary Mark Lanza said $22,489 remained in the budget, originally appropriated at $40,000. Lanza said $15,000 can be transferred from the town's Reserve Fund. Any further transfers will be added to the town's tax rate recapitulation sheet and recorded as a deficit on the ledger.

Litchfield said the only problems his crews found were visibility and blowing, drifting snow, "especially on the shoreline."

The first crews were called out at 9:30 p.m. Friday. Snow plows were sent out at midnight and worked 24 hours straight through to midnight Saturday. Litchfield praised his crew of seven men for their performance.

Thirteen trucks were used on the roads and seven trucks were used to plow private ways.

The Police and Fire Departments recorded no major storm problems and also said the Highway Dept. did a remarkable job of clearing the roads. The Fire Dept. had a few first aid calls but received no complaints of flooding.

Fire Chief Martin Dooley said his only concern was finding water hydrants in the mounds of snow. Dooley asked for the cooperation of household residents to help clear away snow from the hydrants.

The Post Office also asked that walkways be cleared so the mailman can deliver mail.

Besides slippery road conditions, the Police Dept. reported a minor power outage in the 400 section of Jerusalem Road.

The Highway Dept. also drew praise for clearing the Village sidewalks and school parking lots so that school was not called off Monday.

Cushing Plaza expansion continues, Corner Meat Shop moving in next

Calling it one of the flagship stores of Cushing Plaza, Cushing Plaza management announced the future opening of "The Corner Meat Shop" and plans to upgrade parking and lighting at the Plaza.

Corner Meat, known for its meat, deli and grocery selections, plans to employ nearly 30 people from Cohasset and Scituate.

Zaven Dadekian of New Jersey, owner of Cushing Plaza, Joseph Quinn, Plaza management and development director, and Corner Meat owners, David Richardson of Marshfield and Gary Robertson of Brockton, came to terms on the signing of a long-term lease.

Corner Meat is now under construction at the former Fayva Shoe Store building. Renovations have already begun on the 4,500 square foot store and should be completed by March 15.

An opening date will be announced soon.

"We at Cushing Plaza as well as the people of Cohasset and Scituate are very excited about The Corner Meat Shop joining us," said Quinn who also negotiated with Medi Mart to open a large facility in the Plaza in November.

"The Corner Meat Shop will add a new dimension to the shopping center and provide a needed service to the area; they are tops in their business," Quinn said.

Quinn said the addition of Corner Meat represents another major step in the redevelopment of Cushing Plaza. More new stores and improvements are slated for the coming months, he said.

Quinn did not elaborate on future store openings because he said town approvals are needed before the openings are announced.

"I will say it will be two or three exciting stores, not of the dimension of Corner Meat, but nice shops," said Quinn.

Quinn said the Plaza will spend nearly $200,000 to repave the Plaza parking lot, improve and "upgrade the shopping environment."

Quinn said Plaza rents are not the same as five years ago but neither is gasoline and steak, "although the price of steak at Corner Meat will be less than other stores." He said the rents are in line with other rental markets.

Since Dadekian purchased the Plaza in 1981, as many as 60 new jobs have been added. The new stores

Petitioners want Civil Service for police chief

By Mike Berger

A group of Cohasset citizens and police officers will circulate a petition around town for signatures to support reinstating the Civil Service process for the selection of the police chief.

Sgt. Richard Barrow told the Mariner the petition should not reflect personally on the recent selection of Acting Chief Joseph Kealey as permanent police chief.

Kealey, promoted from patrolman, is negotiating with selectmen and is expected to sign a final contract. His appointment is expected to begin Feb. 28.

Barrow said the petition is meant to criticize the selection process by selectmen, the appointing authority.

"I want to emphasize this petition is not directed at Chief Kealey. We find no fault at all with Joe," said Barrow.

"It's the system we find fault with. Right now there is no incentive for officers to pursue their education, to study hard and expect to be promoted. We feel reinstating civil service is the best way of getting the most qualified person," said Barrow.

He also stressed the selectmen, by virtue of bypassing the sergeant and lieutenant, do not respect the ranking officer.

School board ready to wrap up budget

By Donna Cogliano

The school committee meets Wednesday for the final presentation of next year's school budget.

At Monday night's meeting the committee reviewed the mathematics, health, social studies, business education and music department budgets.

The science, industrial arts, home economics and library budgets will be presented tonight.

Once the budget presentation is completed the committee will prepare the budget for a formal open meeting for the community. That meeting had been tentatively scheduled for Monday, February 28. However, some members doubted that the committee would be ready for a presentation to the public at that time.

School Supt. Eugene Crowell said the school committee must submit a bottom line budget figure by the first week of March for the Town Meeting warrant.

Before adjourning Monday night the school committee met in closed session to discuss the budget strategy. Patricia Walsh questioned the move to executive session saying that budget strategy talk should be held in open sesion.

Most of Monday night's meeting dealt with the high school budget.

The school committee considered some $73,000 in cutbacks for next year's junior-senior high school budget.

While reviewing the mathematics budget school committee member Martha Gjesteby told the board that the Math League had not been funded. Crowell said appropriation for the Math League was overlooked and would have to be added.

Next year, the math department will lose a computer science class leaving only one class. A basic algebra and general math class will be combined into one section.

Crowell has recommended the reduction of a math aide which would leave one aide to work in the Math

Cohasset's week...

Caravan vanpool formed

In response to interest from Cohasset residents, a Caravan vanpool is forming to downtown Boston. Caravan, a private, non-profit vanpool corporation, will be making the arrangements.

The vanpool will originate in Cohasset with a pick-up in the Village and another yet to be determined in the Hingham area. The van is tentatively scheduled to reach South Station in Boston via Route 3A and Morrissey Boulevard at approximately 7:45-8 a.m.; the vanpool will depart at 5-5:15 p.m.

Several seats are still available for full- and part-time riders. Those interested in signing up for the vanpool should call 742-2655 in Boston.

Vehicle charges

Eric Lee Christensen, 17, of 82 Forest Ave admitted to sufficient facts to warrant a guilty finding on charges of driving to endanger, refusing to stop for a police officer and failing to stop for a school bus displaying a flashing red signal. A charge of speeding was dismissed after he pleaded innocent. His case was continued to March 8 and he was placed on probation. These alleged offenses occurred Nov. 1 on North Main Street.

Christensen was one of four youths ordered to pay restitution and perform 80 hours of community service for smashing school windows.

Harbor plunge

Thomas Jarvis, 24, of 103 Mann Hill Road escaped serious injury when his pickup truck plunged into Cohasset Harbor Thursday night. Police said Jarvis was driving over Mill Bridge toward Scituate about 11:30 p.m. when he saw a car coming toward him in his lane. Jarvis told police he swerved to the right to avoid the car, hit a snow bank and lost control of his truck. The vehicle cut across the left side of the road and plunged into the harbor. Jarvis escaped the freezing water by breaking the window. When police came, he was standing by the side of Border Street near Kimball's By the Sea. The Cohasset ambulance took Jarvis to the South Shore Hospital where he was treated for lacerations to his hand and hypothermia. He was later released.

North River Marine used a crane to lift the vehicle out of the water Friday. The vehicle was towed to Paul Young Motors of Scituate. Police cited Jarvis for operating his vehicle with a restriction on his license of operating between 8 p.m. and 6 a.m.

Officer John Rhodes investigated. Police said they couldn't recall a vehicle going off the bridge into the water before.

Rescue drill rescheduled

The Fire Department's cold water rescue drill scheduled for Saturday was postponed because of the weekend storm and rescheduled for Saturday, Feb. 19 at 10 a.m. at Government Island. Fire Chief Martin Dooley said there is a need to train firefighters in this activity because of past rescue incidents. He is hoping for private funding to finance the cold water rescue equipment.

Strength in cooperation

Executive Secretary Mark Lanza received a letter from Hingham selectmen which essentially said they see no need for a tri-town commission to solve problems between Cohasset, Hingham and Hull.

In a Feb. 1 letter to Cohasset selectmen, State Rep., Murray said the towns should work together as they did during the Blizzard of 1978. This commission could be used, Murray said, during mutual aid situations, to coordinate criminal investigations and to eliminate duplication in purchasing, highway needs, landfill sites, solid waste removel, school lunch programs, transportation problems, recreation, energy and water supply. Selectmen agreed her proposal was a good idea. Selectmen asked Lanza to write Murray that the board would be willing to meet with her and selectmen from the other two towns. Selectman Rocco Laugelle also suggested Scituate become involved in the commission.

Sewer advisory appointee

Selectmen appointed William Montouri to the sewer advisory committee. The board of water commissioners requested that selectmen make the appointment to the committee.

Phone system reaction

Executive Secretary Mark Lanza is receiving good feedback to his suggestion to purchase a $5,000 telephone system for town hall and the fire and police stations. The Advisory Committee likes the idea and selectmen will consider it this week. The new system would save the town a $60 monthly charge for renting phone sets and lines, but more important would allow more extensions at town hall and at headquarters. Now if the line is busy and a emergency call comes in, a red light flashes. Individual town departments would keep private telephone numbers but the system would make it possible to set up an intercom in Town Hall and switch to another department without calling an outside line.

Aerial spraying opposition

Selectmen recieved a letter indicating the Board of Health's opposition to aerial spraying with Sevin. Selectman Mary Jane McArthur said she met with one person involved with a group of residents who are concerned about all aerial spraying conducted within the town. She said the residents have requested that Tree and Park Dept. Superintendent Peter Laugelle establish a schedule outlining when and where he will conduct insecticide spraying in the town. Such a schedule could be publicized in advance of the spraying so that all residents would be sufficiently notified, McArthur suggested.

...Cohasset's week

Selectmen agenda changes

Selectmen decided that items which will be included in their weekly meeting agenda must be submitted by Monday at 4:30 p.m. each week. That will give the office secretary and Executive Secretary Mark Lanza enough time to prepare an agenda for the Wednesday night selectmen's sessions.

If an emergency issue is to be discussed at the meeting, and has not been submitted in time, it can be included within the agenda under the topic of other business.

Town hall expansion

There are no serious plans for a new Town Hall within the next two years. However, selectmen still believe a new town hall should be on the list of the board's five-year plan of needed projects and improvements.

Between $600,000 and $700,000 would be needed for a new building. A one-story, wooden colonial structure built in the parking lot next to the current town hall is proposed. Three times in the past 15 years town meeting has rejected budget requests. The town has finished spending about $70,000 for installing new heating and ventilation systems and repainting the exterior of the building.

But Town Hall will be getting more crowded during the next year. In April selectmen will go from three to five members and by July the town should be ready to install a new computer system. It is possible the selectmen's meetings may be moved downstairs to the auditorium. It has been suggested that if the Joseph Osgood School is closed, the building would be ideal for a town hall. But the committee has no immediate plants to close the building.

Trevor Cook, 6, ascends the high school hill for another trip on his speedy sled. (Derr photo)

Democratic delegates

John K. McNabb, Jr., Edward Tebbetts, Priscilla Tebbetts and Mary Richard were elected delegates to the April Democratic Issues Convention Feb. 5 at the Cohasset Democratic Caucus. Town Committee Chairman Donna McGee is also an ex-officio delegate.

Town unemployment rate

The December 1982 unemployment rate for Cohasset was 2.8 percent, much better than the unadjusted state rate of 7.1 percent and the national rate of 10.5 percent. The 2.8 percent rate was the same rate as the 2.8 figure for December 1981. In Scituate the rate for December of 1982 was 5.3 percent.

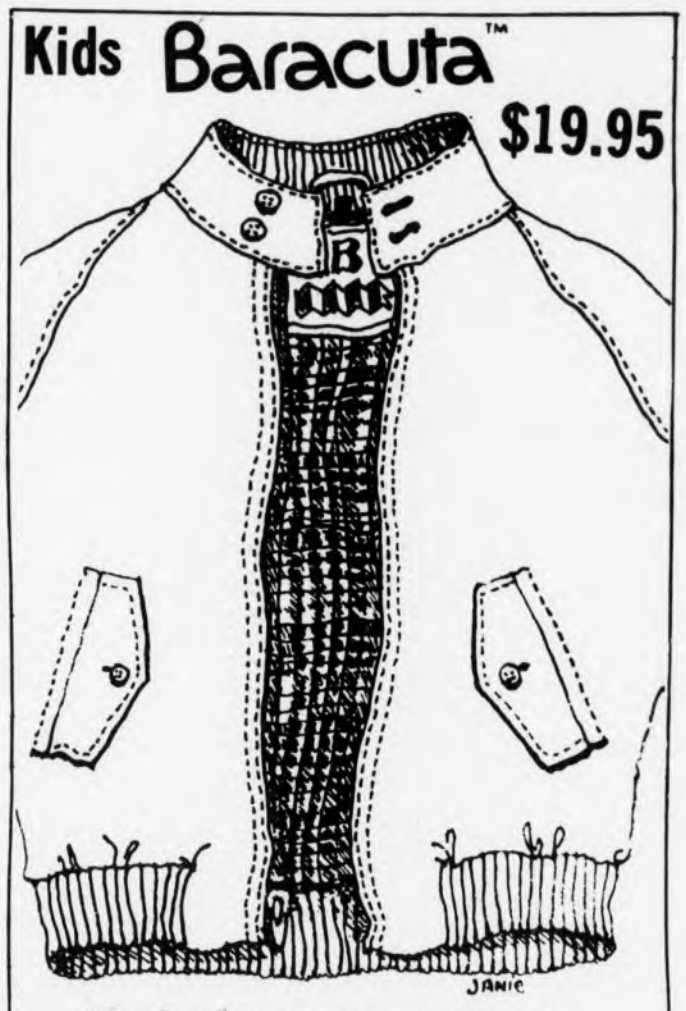
Selectmen actions

In recent action, selectmen approved the renewal of video game licenses for the Winter Gardens at $60 a machine for eight machines, pending a review of the operation by the Police Department.

Selectmen also approved permission for the Beechwood Congregational Church to use Town Hall for an Antique Show June 2, 3 and June 4.

Donald DeMichele of 264 Jerusalem Road was appointed to the Disposal Area Study Committee.

Registrar to be appointed



Selectmen were scheduled to appoint a registrar of voters, but will wait until town counsel has made a decision whether a non-resident may serve as town clerk, and in addition, as registrar of voters.

Charles Marks, who was elected to a lifetime tenure as town clerk, currently resides in Weymouth. Town Counsel Richard Henderson is reviewing whether residency is required for that elected office.

Lifeline service available

South Shore Hospital is offering residents a new push-button medical emergency alert system for $10 a month. Elderly people and others with high medical risks will be able to push a button on a beeper-like device from home and signal the hospital's emergency room for help. People who subscribe to the service receive a beeper-like unit and a communications device connected to a standard home telephone. At the first sign of a medical emergency, a subscriber pushes a call button on the beeper. That transmits a message to the hospital's emergency room. An alarm sounds and the subscriber's code number flashes on a screen. A printed tape records the signal. An emergency room staffer immediately phones the subscriber and may dispatch a neighbor, police or ambulance.

LIGHT UP YOUR LIFE

by Nancy Dooley

Track lighting has become a very popular way of achieving lighting versatility and doesn't require a lot of electrical work for installation. We carry track span by Lightolier and have it available in white, black, and bronze to match any decor. The fixtures or trackheads, as they are called, come in many styles and sizes and can blend in traditional surroundings as easily as contemporary. Flood lights are more commonly used as a source of light, but by switching to a spot light, the item the light is centered on suddenly commands a higher point of interest. Tracks come in two, four, and eight foot lengths and can be cut or added together - and are very easy to affix to any type of ceiling. We will be happy to consult you on your track lighting needs at Flagstaff Lighting Showroom at NORTH RIVER ELECTRIC SUPPLY, INC. We're open from 9-5 M-S and 9-9 TH. Our phone is 659-2272 or 749-5524. We accept MC and VISA.

Lab with students in grades 7-12. Nearly $8,000 would be saved from the reduction of a math aide.

This year one aide gives remedial help to Grade 7 and 8 while the other aide works with Grades 9-12.

Math Department Chairman Charles Davis told the committee he wanted a computer literacy course to be a graduation requirement in the future. He also requested that two computer terminals be added to the Math Lab. The lab currently has seven terminals.

School committee members criticized Davis for including textbooks in his budget for students in the advanced placement class. In other subjects, AP students usually purchase their own books.

The social studies budget has already been reduced by a two-fifths teaching position resulting in a $7,000 savings.

During review of the social studies budget school committeeman John Langmaid III said he favored textbook material over filmstrip aids. School Committee Chairman Diana Kornet said she preferred teach-student interaction instead of filmstrips also. She said students get a lot visually from television these days.

The business education department might be losing two fifths of math teacher. Teacher Doris Lahage said today's students need keyboard skills. She would like to trade in one or two typewriters each year for new keyboards.

Lahage said everyone in this year's typing II class will receive five to six weeks of word processing.

The health education budget is tentatively set at $24,326. The health education program does not have textbooks and the teachings are based on research done by health teacher Michael Gill.

The high school music department has been level funded at $42,674. Next year's budget calls for the purchase of a new electric keyboard which would be used in music classes and by the jazz band.

Tonight the board will review reductions in the high school library service, industrial arts, athletic transportation and secretarial help at the junior senior high school. The committee is scheduled to meet in the high school home economics room at 8 p.m.

Petitioners want Civil Service...

"How do they expect the patrolman to respect the ranking officer? It creates a morale problem," he said.

Barrow and Lt. Charles Stockbridge were not selected as the three main finalists in the final selection of police chief although both of them were included with Kealey as the local finalists.

Both are supporting the Civil Service petition.

Barrow said he does not feel qualifications were taken into consideration by selecten. He referred to education, and police administration courses.

"It's the system. They are bypassing people and selecting them on qualities other than their ability. It's a personality conflict and a popularity contest," said Barrow.

Cohasset dropped Civil Service selection in 1978 and chose a special task force committee to recommend a police chief to selectmen, the ultimate appointing authority.

This petition comes a few weeks after Town Counsel Richard Henderson was asked to review a 1978 town meeting vote establishing a police chief search committee.

Henderson ruled that although Article 35 of the 1978 town meeting provided for appointment of a police chief committee, that committee's authority concluded with the selection of a successor to Chief Randolph Feola.

Henderson wrote that since town meeting never appointed another committee after Chief John DeBassio's resignation, the committee was dissolved and selectmen had sole authority to appoint the new chief.

Ironically, DeBassio is now a candidate for selectmen in the April election as the board expands to five members.

According to Barrow, Henderson said the 1978 decision to dissolve the committee is unclear. "I still don't know whether this committee is a standing committee or was it dissolved. I believe the committee has a mandate to enforce," said Barrow. The Statehas been asked by Barrow to research the issue.

Barrow believes Civil Service is still the best method to choose a chief because selectmen review the top three scoring finalists on a chief's exam.

Regarding chief discipline, Barrow said the town has always been upheld by Civil Service rules and regulations if the chief had to be disciplined. "If anyone had to be punished, the town was upheld 100 percent," he said.

Barrow reiterated the petition should not criticize Kealey. But he is unsure what would happen to Kealey's appointment if civil service was restored by the voters.

Barrow said he hopes the petition will be submitted to the town clerk by Feb. 28, before Kealey signs a contract.

Between 250 and 300 signatures are needed before the article is submitted. The deadline for submitting ballot questions regarding Civil Service is March 3.

Related to the civil service ballot question is a possible warrant item calling for a "strong police chief." This would mean the chief could set his own rules and regulations and enforce them without political interference from selectmen.

Ten police officers including Barrow signed the petition. Selectmen are due to act on submitting the article to the town warrant this week.

Mass Bay Commuter announces 'Gracious Lady' launched

Mass Bay Commuter Services announce its 65-foot all-aluminum commuter boat "Gracious Lady" has been launched.

The 149-passenger vessel was completed at a cost of $750,000.

"She is the fulfillment of a 20-year dream come true," said Charles English of Waltham, President and Treasurer of Mass Bay Commuter Services, Inc.

The 38-ton "Gracious Lady" will undergo dock and sea trials in Florida before making her maiden voyage north to Boston where she will enter regular commuter service between there and Hingham.

At speeds of up to 38 mph, the white commuter craft will make a minimum of ten roundtrips daily and will begin weekend excursions in the spring.

Cushing Plaza expansion continues...

have brought a revitalization to the Plaza as well as improving the town's tax base.

Quinn said Corner Meat, as well as Medi Mart and Johnny Appleseed's, will anchor the Plaza.

The Corner Meat Shop was founded in 1977 and has stores located in Assinippi, Marshfield and Hingham. Richardson said the Cohasset-Scituate store will be a full line store specializing in personal service and custom cutting of "high quality" meats. Robertson, Richardson and his wife Erica will be active in managing the new store.

Richardson said he always had it in the back of his mind to open a store in Cohasset and Scituate as he passed the Plaza on his way to the Hingham store. "When Joe called us in September and suggested the Scituate-Cohasset area I thought it was a tremendous opportunity," he said.

The store will feature special sections for produce, bakery, dairy, frozen foods and of course the store's calling card, meat and deli.

The store will be constructed with special doors at the front. "It will be designed like a roadside stand," Richardson said.

Both he and Quinn agreed vehicle traffic will be increased, especially on Sunday. Tentative store hours will be 8 a.m. to 9 p.m., seven days a week.

Richardson said his stores emphasize a personal service "and doing things for the customer" such as special meat cuts and telephone orders. He said the store cooks its own roast beef and bakes its own rolls and bread.

The store will feature a self-service produce and prepared foods section with entrees, sauces and dressings to go with the meats and delis.

The new store opening is being financed by Rockland Trust Bank which also plans to open a double line automated teller service soon.

Rev. John Keohane's name came up first out of several thousand entries in the year-long Historical Society Heritage Quilt raffle. Rev. Keohane admires his unique work of art depicting scenes from old Cohasset designed and stitched by 20 members and friends of the Society. Shown with the lucky winner are, left, Sophia DeNapoli, who embroidered the quilt, and Connie Parker, Historical Society President. Scenes of Sandy Beach, Minot's Light, old fire station, former St. Anthony's Church and others, were created by Marie Migliaccio, Jean Salvador, JoAnne Chittick, Kathleen Palmieri, Elizabeth Ripley, Grace Mitchell, Mary Anne Mahoney, Michelle Fahey, Ann Pompeo, Marjorie Ingram, Dorothy Hoogeveen, Barbara Elliott, Karen Johnson, Karen Sause, Marian Moulton, Susan Littlewood, Doris Swain, Patricia Eaton, Adeline Marshall and Joan St. John.

Board of health briefs...

The new bin operation at the landfill appears to be running smoothly. People are reminded to utilize early morning and weekdays to dump their trash to help lessen the congestion Saturdays and Sundays. Landfill operating hours are 7:30-3:30 Tuesday, Thursday, Friday and Sunday.

Recycling — Newspapers must be placed in the large green container located at the recycling center. From there, papers are transported to Sugarman's recycling plant in Quincy. The advantages of recycling newspapers include saving valuable space in the landfill operating area and limiting the possibility of groundwater pollution. When the newspapers decompose, the ink breaks down and may create concentrations of heavy metals which may pollute the groundwater. Also, revenues are generated by the amount of newspapers, magazines, telephone books that are recycled. The revenue is based on the number of tons. Please don't put newspapers in the red containers.

Green, brown and white glass of any size or shape can also be recycled. Again, the advantages of any type of recycling are great to the town. The impact of it may be evidenced by extra years of operation at the Cedar Street landfill, thus creating savings for the town. All glass can be dropped off at the recycling center located on the left side of the road as you enter the landfill.

Aluminum is another product that we can collect for recycling. Many items that are disposed of contain aluminum. Examples are storm window frames, lawn chairs, some filing cabinets, "take-out" food containers and aluminum foil used for cooking. Consult with recycling monitor Mr. Thayer on what's recyclable.

SEPTIC SYSTEMS

Generally, septic systems should be pumped every two years. However, if a greater amount of water is used, more frequent pumping may be necessary. There are some preventive measures homeowners can take to maximize the life of their system. First, check for any leaky faucets or toilets. Even though the leak may appear to be small, it costs money in two ways. It's a waste of water and creates the possibility of overloading the septic system.

In addition to repairing any leaks, it is wise to consider placing water-saving devices on shower heads, faucets and toilets. These easy to install devices are readily available in most hardware/department stores. The investment is low while the savings can be substantial.

NURSING SERVICES

The Social Service League provides public health nursing services to all residents of Cohasset. Various clinics are held monthly and may be of interest to all age groups. Consultation on diet, nutrition, weight and other health-related topics may be received by contacting the public health nurse at 383-0771.

'An Evening with Forman'

The Cohasset Republican Town Committee invites the public to spend "An Evening With Peter Forman" Thursday, Feb. 17, 7:45 p.m. at 81 Old Pasture Road.

Forman, currently the youngest legislative representative, will discuss "Rebuilding the Party" and "Public Employee Pensions."

Nicole Greco, 9½, a Deer Hill fourth grader, is better known this year as "Little Miss Heart Fund."

Pvt. Scott Muir, son of Robert and Margaret Muir of Reservoir Road, completed basic training at Fort Leonard Wood, Mo.

During the training, students received instruction in drill and ceremonies, weapons, map reading, tactics, military courtesy, military justice, first aid and Army history and traditions.

William Brothers of Marshfield, associated with Cohasset Savings Bank for the past six years, was elected an assistant vice president of the bank.

Brothers joined Cohasset Savings as the first manager of its Bound Brook office in North Scituate when it opened in 1977. He later transferred to the bank's main office in Cohasset where he has been responsible for various administrative functions including the installation and operation of an in-house computer and the current installation of the latest in electronic terminals for banking transactions. He was named assistant treasurer in 1980.

He is a graduate of Norwood High School, attended Boston State College until interrupted by military service, and then resumed his studies at Stonehill College where he earned a bachelor of science degree in 1973.

In 1976 Brothers graduated from the School for Supervisory Personnel of the Savings Banks Association of Massachusetts, and in 1980 from the Graduate School of Savings Banking operated by the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks in Fairfield, Conn.

☐Charlie DeSantis, a pilot for Eastern Airlines, flew out of Boston Friday evening after listening to the local snow reports. After a short time in the air he knew we were in for a big storm, a difficult one to climb out of. He might take the place of the local weathermen or, at least, "phone home" the forecast.

☐"Bean Pot" talk is all around Cohasset, and Dominic Campadelli is right in the center of conversation. His outstanding defensive playing for Boston College has been super. And he's only a freshman.

☐The Cohasset Boosters are holding their scholarship dance Friday, March 25, at the Sons of Italy Hall in Hingham. There will be refreshments and a raffle.

☐The Cohasset Recreation Department will conduct a ski trip to Waterville Valley Saturday, March 5, for all ages. The cost includes transportation, one day lift ticket, and refreshments on the bus. The bus leaves the Town Hall at 6 a.m. and returns around 8 p.m. Registrations must be made by Friday, Feb. 25. Call the Recreation Office, 383-6791 for reservations.

☐Happy Birthday to Rich Evans!

☐The AFS Club went to Cazenovia, New York, last weekend. Mr. Fortin and the Gilmores drove the group in two vans. They were luckey; they escaped all of the bad weather (both here and there). All 15 students said they had a great time and would love to go again.

☐Imagine this...Meherbosh Pestonji, John Mascherin, George Fotopoulos, Mario Demarinis, Arthur Drysdale, Edward Hubbard, Brian Maley and J.T. Price serenading you under your open attic window. That's what almost took place when the wrestling team from Mt. Allison University hit Cohasset last weekend. No need to mention who the lucky lady (almost) was.

The team and their coach Doug Mitchell loved Cohasset (snow certainly didn't bother them, having left Çanada to get here). Laurie Sandblom and Arlene Humphreys, students at Plymouth State, were the only Cohasset fans present at the wrestling event. Everyone else was snowed in.

☐Rosemary (Evans) O'Connell was a guest of Channel 38 during the Bruins game last Sunday. Wife of Mike O'Connell, she was talking about the Fashion Show the Bruins and their wives are going to put on to benefit the Children's Hospital. They are even going to raffle a date with a single Bruin! Rosemary looked as if she'd been speaking before the camera for years, she had such poise (didn't seem a bit nervous). Her parents, Frank and Ann Evans, must have enjoyed watching that.

☐Diana O'Loughlin has bought every bottle of suntan lotion in Cohasset to prepare for her trip to Tortola...at least she's given local shop owners time to restock before Cohasset natives will need it.

☐Congratulations to Kristin Wilkin, who was accepted to Duke University under the Early Admissions Plan.

☐Throughout the high school the question being asked is: "How many Valentine lollipops did you get?" Wonder who won that contest.

Election briefs: Ainslie still undecided

In less than two months voters will cast ballots for a new five-member board of selectmen. Five new candidates have announced but speculation is what will Chairman of selectmen Henry Ainslie do?

Ainslie told the Mariner Tuesday night he is still considering whether he should throw his hat into the ring for a one or three-year term.

But he expects to make a final decision before Feb. 28.

News has been quiet on the school committee race. Taking out papers recently from the town clerk's office were incumbents Board Chairman Diana Kornet and John Langmaid, both for three-year terms.

A full list of candidates who have taken out nomination papers from the clerk's office include: Frank England and Cliff Mitman for a three-year term for selectmen; Ted Ford, John DeBassio and Diana Sullivan for a one-year term for selectmen; Brian Wilkin, a three-year term for assessors; Lucia Woods, Barbara Power and Richard Dabrowski for three-year terms for the Paul Pratt Memorial Library Board of Trustees; and Barbara Kern and Lawrence Mitchell for a three-year term on the Board of Health.

Others include Anthony Fasciano and Paul Laugelle for a three-year term on the Water Commission; Maxwell Pounder for a one-year term on the Sewer Commission; Richard Barrow for a three-year term on the Recreation Commission; Robert Sturdy for a five-year term for the Planning Board; and Charles DeSantis for a three-year term for the Sewer Commission.

Town Clerk Charles Marks has issued a set of rules to all voters about the election.

The Board of Registrars of Voters will be in session Tuesday, Mar. 1, from 7:30 to 9 p.m. at Town Hall; Saturday, Mar. 12, from noon to 8 p.m.; and Monday, Mar. 14, from 8:30 a.m. to 10 p.m. (Last day to register).

These sessions are for registering voters for the election and Town Meeting to be held April 2 and the town election April 9; for certification of names on nominating papers; and receiving evidence of the qualifications of persons claiming the right to vote and for correcting the list of voters.

If the name of a female who is duly registered as a voter is changed by marriage or by decree of the court, her right to vote in her former name must continue until January 1 following the marriage.

No name can be added to the voters' list except to correct omissions made by clerical error or mistake, after 10 p.m. Monday, March 14, at which time registration closes.

Last day for candidates to take out nomination papers is Wednesday, Feb. 23 at 5 p.m.

All nomination papers must be submitted to the Registrars of Voters for certification of names of the signers on or before 5 p.m., Friday, Feb. 25.

Every nomination paper must contain the written acceptance of the candidates and must be filed with the Town Clerk on or before 5 p.m. Friday, March 11.

Fifty signatures are required for nomination papers.

Following the election, all candidates are required to submit campaign finance statements even if no money is involved.

Recently, Marks sent a letter to School Committee member Joseph Nedrow about his failure to file a financial campaign statement from last spring's election. The statements were due in December. Nedrow filed his campaign statement this week.

The League of Women Voters reports there is some confusion in the community concerning this year's election of selectman. In an effort to assist voters, the League would like to clarify the position to be filled and the rules:

— two positions for selectman for three-year terms each.

— one position to be filled for a one year term.

Registered voters can sign nomination papers and vote for two candidates for selectman for the three-year terms. Additionally, candidates for selectman to fill a one-year term will appear on the ballot. Voters can sign only one nomination paper and vote for one selectman for the one-year term.

The League reminds voters that in all elections, registered voters may sign nomination papers for as many positions as there are to be filled. The deadline for filing nomination papers is Feb. 25. The League of Women Voters invites the public to attend Town Affairs Night to meet the candidates and discuss local issues March 29 at 7:30 p.m.

DeBassio committee kicks off campaign

The Committee to Elect John A. DeBassio to a one-year term on the Cohasset Board of Selectmen will officially kick off the campaign at a brunch to be held at Harrington's, Cohasset Village, Sunday, March 6 from 12 until 2 p.m. From 2 to 4 there will be a Dixieland Band and a cash bar.

The menu will be pastries, breakfast meats, eggs, juices, fruits, potatoes and a champagne fountain.

Tickets (donation: $10 per person) may be purchased from the following individuals: Maria Plante, 383-1527; A.J. Antoine, 383-1527; Tony Fasciano, 383-6797; Chet Ellis, 383-0767; Yvette Rattenbury, 383-9358; Doris Golden, 383-9319; John McNabb, Jr., 383-1818.

Maria Plante has scheduled 10 coffees to be held in March. If you'd like to attend one of these scheduled coffees or hold one for the candidate in your neighborhood, contact Maria at 383-1527.

Public coffees will be held at the Cushing Room, Cushing Plaza, March 13 from 1-3 p.m.; and at Kimball's from 2-6 on March 20. John DeBassio will also be a guest at the Cohasset League of Women Voters' Town Affairs Night on March 29 at 7:30 p.m. at Town Hall.

Topics for discussion at public coffees will be: Selectmen — Their Role and How it can be Reorganized to Provide Quality of Life for the Town; Selectmen and Their Important Role as an Appointing and Licensing Authority; Civil Service as a Recruiting Tool; and Consumer Protection.

Editorial

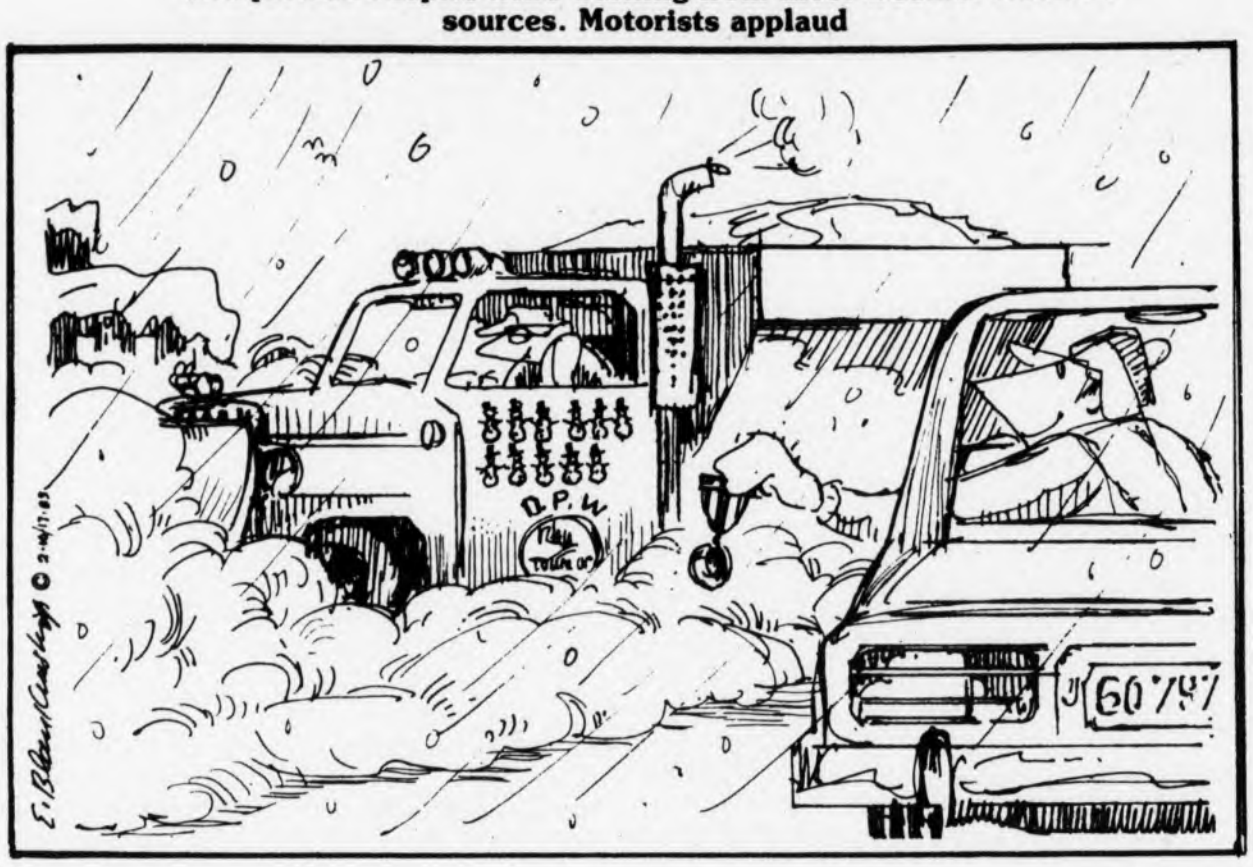
Police issues

In all likelihood there will be two articles at Annual Town Meeting bearing heavily on the way the police department is constituted and run. One, which will definitely be in the warrant, would create a so-called "strong police chief" who would have the authority to make departmental rules and regulations independently of the board of selectmen.

The other proposal, for which signatures are at this moment being collected, would return the position of chief of police to civil service. Both proposals have come about out of disgruntlement with selectmen--partly from their perceived mishandling of former Chief John DeBassio, and partly from their selection of then Patrolman Joseph Kealey to succeed DeBassio over both a sergeant and a lieutenant. Had the chief's job been under Civil Service, selectmen would have been limited to picking one of the top three qualifiers in the civil service examination. Not astoundingly the sergeant and the lieutenant who were passed over have been active in pushing this proposal.

We oppose both proposals. We haven't always supported selectmen in their handling of the police department—much to the contrary. We very much oppose political interference in the police or any other department when "political interference" means undermining professionalism while doing favors for friends and acquaintances.

But we equally oppose departments themselves becoming the independent fiefdoms of department heads who themselves can be quite capable of undermining professionalism. Selectmen have statutory authority to run the town, and they alone are unanswerable to the "boss" . . . the people.



Selectmen can't be answerable to the people if they don't have the power to do their job. We believe they ought to be able to "interfere politically" in departments to the extent of hiring and firing the department heads they desire and setting the departmental policies they desire. Then they should be answerable to the public for the success or failure of the appointments they have made and the policies they have effected.

Any management consultant worth his salt would say as much and would say that for the way for management not to work is to limit the power of the appointing authority to appoint and the policy-setting authority to set policy. One of the reasons private enterprise tends to work more productively than public is just the sort of "clear line of authority" issue as this.

So although some of the questions about how selectmen have handled the police department in the past are probably valid, we nevertheless believe that the new five-man board should retain the authority and answerability that is required to bring about good management.

As you start thinking about Annual Town Meeting, which despite weathery evidence to the contrary is but weeks away, we recommend you start thinking about voting "nay" on both articles concerning the police department.

More good stuff from the stars

I'm certain you're all aware that the sun is in Aquarius. Sure. But did you know that Venus is conjunct Mars in the sign of Pisces? Or that Saturn has just gone retrograde in Scorpio? I thought not. Naturally I boogied on over to Madam Zolar's chic little ashram on Third Cliff for advice. After all, we can't have you walking around ignorant, now can we? Not to worry. Madam came through as usual with advice for all you zodiophiles out there.

Aries (March 21 to April 20): The kind of month you love. There will be dissensions and misunderstandings in the home, setbacks and confusion in the workworld. You will have the opportunity to yell at just about everybody. A great time for bullies.

Taurus (April 21 to May 20): This will not be one of your better times. Aries natives will tend to bully and yell at you. Guard your collection of baseball cards.

Gemini (May 21 to June 20): The Gemini twins, as you know, are Castor and Pollux. Under current aspects, it is important that neither be taken on an empty stomach. Most people will tend to avoid Geminis. Fortunately, you are each really two people, so it should be easy to avoid feeling lonely.

Cancer (June 21 to July 22): Cancerians or Moon Children will do well under present aspects. You don't want to go anywhere, anyway, and with most people staying at home you will have many opportunities to point out their shortcomings. If they don't pay any attention, console yourself with this thought, "Self pity is better than none."

Leo (July 23 to August 22): Wonderful time for Leos! People in leadership positions have been doing so poorly lately, that "leaders in exile" — and we find many Leos in that group — will be greatly sought after. You can issue decrees with reckless abandon, knowing that these transits will be short-lived, and none of your suggestions will be put into practice.

Virgo (August 23 to September 22): Trying times for Virgos. Nothing will be where you feel it should be, and no one will be doing what you think he should be doing. Since, however, this is usually the case, you are probably used to it by now. Do not buy a used camel from a Capricorn.

Libra (September 23 to October 21): Be particularly wary when making out your income tax. The IRS people are not sympathetic to your creative bookkeeping. The one who audits your return will probably be a Virgo, and you know what that means!

Scorpio (October 22 to November 21): Rejoice! This month will provide many opportunities to practice deception and duplicity — an ideal time to further your political career.

Sagittarius (November 22 to December 20): Free wheeling, fun loving Sagittarians will not have an easy time of it under present aspects. Do not propose to anyone you do not intend to marry. The object of your affection will not appreciate your humor.

Capricorn (December 21 to January 20): Conditions at your place of employment will be little short of disastrous. An ideal time to further your own career by knifing your immediate supervisor in the back.

Aquarius (January 21 to February 18): You will feel impelled to exercise your zany, fun-loving nature. The local police, who will not be amused, will feel equally compelled to repress your irrepressible spirits. Certain conflict is unavoidable.

Pisces (February 19 to March 20): Lucky you! Under present aspects you will be able to cry and feel sorry for yourself on many occasions. Just the kind of month you love.

Note to all Signs: Beware of an unscrupulous astrologer who gives sun-sign advice in your local newspapers. Her opinions are, in astrological parlance, largely Taurus.

School committee briefs...

The school committee unanimously appointed Scott Ketcham Monday night as director of the senior class production. The board approved a $535 salary for Ketcham, who will direct the senior show which will feature skits and dances.

SCHOOL BUSES

The future storage of town-owned buses and vehicles will be discussed at next week's school committee meeting. Patricia Walsh asked the committee this week about the school's agreement with Charles Pape.

Walsh said that under the agreement the buses would be stored on the Pape property from July 1, 1982 to July 1, 1983 at $320 a month. School Committee Chairman Diana Kornet said the rent was to help pay the expenses of gasoline. She said the committee is in the process of reviewing other alternatives for bus storage since Pape no longer wants to house the school buses.

Kornet said the committee would address the issue as an agenda item next week.

Revaluation underway

Appraisal Consultants of New England Corp. are scheduled to begin their revaluation February 14. The areas in which the data collection begins are as follows: from the south side of Pond St. southerly to the Scituate line and westerly of South Main St. to the Hingham line including Brewster Rd., Ledge Way, Ledgewood Drive, Wood Way, Beechwood St., Mill Lane, Hillside Drive, Riverview Drive, Church St., Doane St., Aaron River Rd., Flintlocke Ridge Rd., Schofield Rd., Todd Rd., Hammond Ave., Locust Rd., Lantern Lane, Virginia Lane, Holly Lane and Woodland Drive.

All persons employed by Appraisal Consultants of New England Corp. will have identifications (with photographs) and all vehicle registrations are recorded with the Cohasset Police Department.

We realize that having someone go through your home may impose an inconvenience to you, but this is necessary if we are to assure complete fairness in the appraisal of your property. We, therefore, ask your cooperation as your property is examined. The process should not take more than 20 minutes.

Please keep in mind the person measuring and listing pertinent information is not placing the value on your property. The final value will be determined only after all the collected data is thoroughly analyzed, at which time you will be notified of the appraisal value of your property.

Harbor Committee minutes

(The following is a copy of a letter sent to chairman of the Cohasset Harbor Committee Charles Fink. Ed.)

I recently telephoned you and requested to be allowed to examine the minutes of the meetings of the Cohasset Harbor Committee for the year 1982. Specifically, I wanted to read the minutes of the meeting when you voted to recommend that Andersen-Nichols be awarded the contract for the Government Island Wharf Study. I asked if you would name a time and place when I could read the minutes.

You replied that there was "a problem with the minutes, since the person who used to take them resigned." You further stated that you would not release any minutes to me "unless the Selectmen so ordered."

Richard Barrow, a member of your committee said he was "not notified of that meeting, and only learned of it while on duty at the polls on the gubernatorial election day." At that time, he said, "Fisherman Bernard Salvador told me of the meeting the previous week, when Salvador, Harbormaster Harry Ritter and Charles Fink, (three members of the seven member board) were present."

Since the other fishermen's representative had not attended several meetings and has since resigned, and replacements for the Sailing Club and Yacht Club representatives Barrow alleged had not yet been appointed by the Selectmen, he questioned whether or not a quorum was present for that vote of recommendation.

Andersen-Nichols was not the low bidder, and the project award was for over $17,000, but I realize the Selectmen are not absolutely bound by law to contract with a low bidder.

At this time my concern is not with allegations concerning notification to all your members of meetings, your quorum, or your recommendations. My concern is that minutes of meetings of all public boards are supposed to be public record.

Selectman Mary Jane McArthur informed me that she believed all Cohasset boards had been directed by the Selectmen, a year or so ago, to keep minutes and send copies to the Selectmen's office.

However, Secretary Margaret Ramsay and the new Executive Secretary Mark Lanza assured me no letter to that effect was sent out within the past two years. Further, they have no Harbor Committee minues on file at the Selectmen's office.

Mr. Lanza said he would like to see copies of all minutes, "so he can keep abreast of things."

There are many Boards and Committees in the Town: Water, Sewer, Health, Harbor, Selectmen, Schools, Cable TV, Assessors, Advisory, Planning, Conservation, Appeals, School Facilities, Personnel, Transportation, Government Island Property Study, Capital Budget, Historical, Building Code Appeal, Bylaw Study, Drainage Advisory, Design Review, Town Office Space, Common Historic District, Cemetery Space, Disposal Area Study, Garage Facilities, etc. Since several boards may meet on the same evening and the press can't cover all of the meetings, the only way to keep up to date with their activities is to read their minutes. Health and Sewer minutes are available at Elm Street, Water on King Street, School on Pond Street, a few at Town Hall offices, and the remaining in the homes of members.

I hereby request to examine your minutes for 1982 under the authority of the Public Records Law. This law prescribes that my request be honored within a 10 day maximum limit.

If I am to be denied access, I would remind you a letter of denial to me "must include specific reasons for the denial and must state whuich of the categories of Chapter 4, Section 7, or Court decisions exempt that record from disclosure."

If by the close of the working day, March 6, 1983, I have no reasonable answer to my request, I shall assume my request is not to be honored, and I may file a complaint with the Attorney General and the District Attorney.

SAT editorial

To the Editor:

Congratulations for your editorial last week ("The SAT minimum") opposing minimum SAT scores for admission to Massachusetts four-year colleges. The editorial accurately noted that college board scores are a poor predictor of success in college.

There is another important reason to oppose minimum SAT standards for public institutions: that state colleges are paid for with public funds.

While there is a legitimate argument for state schools to have some admissions standards, there is no justification for establishing arbitrary measures which would exclude many students, whose parents pay taxes to support the schools, from admittance.

Withholding on interest

(The following is a copy of a letter sent to Congressman Gerry Studds. Ed.)

I refer to Bill No. HR No. 500 which would provide for the repeal of the recently enacted Law requiring payers of interest to withhold and remit to the Government 10 percent of interest payments — except for those who establish exemption because total interest earnings are below the established minimum.

I object to the original Law and favor the enactment of HR 500 for the following reasons:

1. It is a slick trick to accelerate the transmission of my hard-earned money to the Government.

2. It forestalls compounding of 10 percent of interest earned, which, in effect, is an added tax of about five percent.

3. It shifts to the private sector the cost of tax collection, which restricts venture capital and therefore job creation.

It is alleged that the withholding of 10 percent will "catch cheaters."There already existed IRS requirements for reporting on Form 1099 interest payments. It is not clear why actually transmitting interest withheld would improve IRS ability to detect defaulters.

I would be interested to know your position on this matter and I urge your vote in favor of repeal via HR-500.

Some questions on school spending

(The following is a copy of a letter to Superintendent of Schools, Eugene Crowell, Chairman of the School Committee, Diana Kornet and school committee members. Ed.)

As facilitators of communication between school and home, the PSO Executive Board feels an effort to bring citizen opinion on the school budget to you is important at this time.

The enclosed questionnaire with brief background remarks summarizing the budget situation, has been mailed to all parents of school children, the Cohasset Mariner and the Patriot Ledger.

The PSO does not have a position on any of the alternatives and suggestions presented in the questionnaire. They are merely intended to evoke the respondent's opinions and ideas.

Some of the questions involve complicated issues with consequences reaching far beyond the schools. We hope respondents will answer these questions with the full understanding of their implications.

We hope to receive feedback that will be beneficial to you. It is critically important that we hear from citizens and that parents, in particular, play a more active role in school matters. Our goal is to encourage parent involvement and interest in the schools.

We will share the results of this survey with you as soon as it's tabulated and hopefully discuss them with you at a public meeting at your earliest convenience.

Nancy Sandell
President
Cohasset Parent School Organization

An introduction

The Cohasset school system has been operating under budgetary restraints for the last three years. Proposition 2½, declining enrollment, (1,541 in 1980-81, 1,186 est. by 1985-86) salary and energy increases, inflation, etc., have been factors affecting the budget.

The school budget has been balanced over the last three years by reducing ancillary expenses — maintenance, supplies and aides, plus reductions in teaching staff. The system is at the point where major changes to reduce programs, facilities and staff may be required.

The PSO feels citizens should have a role in deciding the priorities for potential cut-backs. We are asking your help by completing this questionnaire and returning it to the PSO by Friday, Feb. 18. Please mail to PSO, Box 30, or drop your questionnaire off at one of the following collection points: Atlantic Avenue Area, Kirkendall, 83 Atlantic Ave.; Osgood School Area, Bartow, 48 Sohier St.; High School Area, Convery, 156 Pond St.; Jerusalem Road Area, Hartwell, 54 Rust Way; Elm Street Area, Sandell, 24 Stevens Lane; and Deer Hill Area, McNamara, 45 Fair Oaks Lane.

Also, Forest Avenue Area, Doherty, 36 Cedar Acres Lane; South Main Street Area, Corbett, 266 South Main St.; Old Pasture Road Area, McCarthy, 45 Old Pasture Rd.; Beechwood Area, Gentile, 91 Aaron River Rd., and Kinchla, 249 Beechwood St.

All residents are invited to answer the questionnaire and return it to the PSO.

The survey

The school superintendent formulates the budget on a year-to-year basis and the school committee votes on it accordingly.

1. Do you favor:

A. Continuation of present practice of large budget reductions on a year-to-year basis? ———

B. Establishment of a five-year plan to implement major changes that would permanently reduce costs? ———

2. Assuming major cuts occur in September 1984, indicate your priorities of most desirable action "1" to least desirable action "7":

A. Close Osgood School Priority # ———

B. Lease part of the Osgood School ———

C. Lease junior high wing and realign grades 7-8 in elementary schools ———

D. Increase class size from the current 25 pupil/teacher average ———

E. Reduce programs and curricula, cut electives at the high school to a minimum and eliminate "open space" and enrichment classes at all levels. ———

F. Offset budget decreases by charging fees for sports, extra-curricular activities, arts enrichment programs and school supplies. ———

G. Other — specify ———

3. Assuming major cuts occur, do you think that the effects could be offset by:

A. Greater use of computers as both instructional and administrative aids Yes— No—

B. Cooperative classes, teachers, and programs with neighboring school systems Yes— No—

C. Use of educational and cable TV to assist the teaching staff Yes— No—

D. Curriculum changes to stress only "three R's" Yes— No—

E. Other — specify Yes— No—

4. Would you support a position at Town Meeting to use surplus revenue or free cash to decrease the school deficit? Yes— No—

5. In order to provide necessary funds to maintain the standard of Cohasset education would you vote to override Prop. 2½ at Town Meeting? Yes— No—

If you answered "Yes," please continue to questions A and B:

A. Would you attend Town Meeting and support question #5? Yes— No—

B. Would you actively work to override Prop. 2½ in Cohasset and to increase the budget for the school system? Yes— No—

Recreation Department report for 1981-82

By John Worley

It is with distinct pleasure that the report of the Recreation Department is submitted to the Citizens of Cohasset.

During the fiscal year 1982, July 1, 1981 through June 30, 1982, 5,681 people of all ages participated in over 50 structured recreation programs, special events and other activities.

The budget of fiscal year 1982, while at a low $34,051, including the Director's salary, was not able to support many programs. Rather, extensive use of the $5,000 per fiscal year, revolving account fund, and increased use of volunteers made most programs possible.

While many restrictions exist with use of the revolving account fund, we were able to conduct a number of programs otherwise not possible, through the fund. Perhaps the most severe restriction of the revolving accont is that we are able to revolve only $5,000 maximum per fiscal year. This reflects directly on the number of programs we are able to conduct in a 12-month period. For instance, if the ceiling were $10,000, we would have the capability of conducting about twice as many programs during the same period of time.

Our 1982 Town Warrant Article, Article #34, "An Act Authorizing the Town of Cohasset to establish in the town treasury a recreation commission revolving account fund," passed Town meeting. However, because the Article lifted the $5,000 ceiling, it also had to be approved by Senate and House of Representatives in General Court, as it was changing a previously enacted piece of legislation. As House Bill #6044, our legislation was defeated by the Committee on Local Affairs. The result is we are still restricted to providing, through the revolving fund, no more than $5,000 worth of recreation programming per fiscal year.

Along with our budget money of about $10,500 available for personnel salaries, or as it directly translates, recreation programs, and the $5,000 use of the revolving fund, it is volunteers of all ages and walks of life that must be thanked. Without their continued help and effort year after year, many programs could not be conducted at all.

Also, during the fiscal year 1982, the Recreation Department generated for general Town use, $5,902 via fees for programs. That money is used by the Town to help offset the tax rate during the next fiscal year.

Our basic philosophy remains essentially as before, to provide as many activities and leisure services to as many residents of all ages, as possible. In order to provide a wide spectrum of exposure to residents, we are offering as much variety as our resources permit.

Aside from just conducting programs, constant evaluation and re-structuring of programs take place; hence, not only does the variety remain as wide as possible, but the quality is being upgraded wherever possible and necessary.

Obviously, a total budget of $34,051 does not go far. However, because of alternative resources we are able to provide services that would cost about four times our actual budget allotment. Our ability to generate revenue for the Town on top of that is a plus for both the Town and recreation.,

Again this year, we wish to thank the various Town boards, and committees, and departments for their continued interest and help with our programs and activities. The residents of Cohasset should know that there remains an established high degree of cooperation on an inter-department level. Manifestations of this reflect in a number of ways, including avoidance of duplication of efforts, ability to carry out work for another, that would otherwise be either technically or logistically impossible for that department.

The current members of the Cohasset Recreation Commission Richard P. Barrow, Chairman; Nancy E. Sladen, Vice-Chairman; Alna L. Ekberg, Secretary; and Gerard A. Buckley, James L. Gallagher, Mary K. Muncey and Eugene K. Price join me in thanks for your continued support of our services to you. Also, the members of the Recreation Commission should be thanked for their volunteer services to recreation and the Town of Cohasset.

A letter from Switzerland

The following are excerpts fro n letters from Amy Urmson, a CHS and AFS student living in Geneva, Switzerland, for the 1982-1983 school year. Amy is the daughter of Brenda and James Urmson of Whitehead Road.

"I am now nearly halfway through my AFS year here in Switzerland and in the past six months I have learned and experienced more than I could ever have imagined. I'm realizing now that an AFS experience means much more than simply spending a year in another country. My chief occupation throughout this year has been, and will continue to be, learning. I'm learning about Switzerland, its people and Geneva; learning to speak French; and also learning about myself. I'm finding out who I am and really getting to know myself through my daily activities and experiences and challenges. My command of the language, French, has opened up a new world to me.

"I learned early in my year that it was up to me to make the most of this experience. It was my responsibility to make the first move in initiating friendships and it was up to me to find out about and take part in activities available outside of school. My efforts have paid off. I have made wonderful friendships both in and out of school; friendships which I'm sure will last forever. Outside of school, I am taking piano lessons at the Conservatoire Place Neuve here in Geneva, which I love. I have also joined a theater workshop at school. Through this I have met many people outside of my class and it has also helped me to better my French because of the emphasis on diction and expression.

I recently did my first production with this group, in which I recited a short text. The feeling of accomplishment afterwards, was incredible.

"I have a wonderful family. My sister, Christine, is just my age and we go to the same College for the Arts in Geneva. She studies art and I am studying music. It's great having a sister for the first time. My AFS Dad is an engineer and a pilot by avocation. He has taken us flying in a small plane all over the French, Swiss and Italian Alps — the experience was incredible. My AFS Mom is a midwife. They are all wonderful and have been a great support to me in adjusting to my new life. I love them all very much. We live in a beautiful suburb about 10 minutes from the heart of Geneva and have easy access to the city by bus.

"Coping with the difficult moments of this year and living the many wonderful ones has made me more aware of myself as a person; and my experiences of adapting to a new culture have taught me a lot about who I am.

"An AFS experience means getting to know a new country, its people, its language and culture, and a new family and, maybe most of all, oneself.

"See you all in July."

AFS sisters in Geneva, Christine Keim and Amy Urmson. Amy's AFS year in Switzerland, now half over, has meant getting to know many things, most of all herself.

No school announcements broadcasted on radio

By the Fire Department

In the event of a snow storm, please do not contact the Fire Department regarding No School,because this will tie up emergency phone lines. Listen to the local radio stations and/or the television.

Box 122 announcing No School or Box 133 announcing a one hour delay in the opening of schools will be transmitted as well as a voice broadcast which can be heard on home scanners.

These broadcasts will be at 7 and 7:30 a.m. and 8 a.m. The Fire Department would also appreciate your cooperation in the shoveling out of hydrants in front of homes and businesses.

This is for your own safety and protection as it takes Fire Department personnel two or three days to locate and uncover these hydrants.

The clergy column...

By Rev. Edward T. Atkinson
First Parish Church

The great popularity of the folktale Snow White, I suspect, derives primarily from the part about the wicked queen and the magic mirror. Not one of us ever gets through a day without looking into a mirror. In most cases a look in the mirror is the way we start our day, and it can be a rather devastating beginning at that, for rarely do we look our best at that early hour. The queen's magic mirror always spoke the truth and we fear this may also be true of the plain ordinary mirrors into which we sleepily gaze each morning.

A mirror however, only presents the superficials, a few new wrinkles about the eyes, hair lost or turning gray. Too bad that the wicked queen in Snow White did not realize this. On the basis of "fair-ness" she could never hope to keep up with the lovely young princess, but unfortunately this was the only question she ever asked her mirror. On the basis of any number of other criteria such as political experience, academic achievement, psychological insight, etc. the queen might have rated far superior to her young competitor.

One of the saddest parts of the story however, is that the queen had no one else she could consult in these matters other than a mirror. The English clergyman and poet George Herbert once observed, "The best mirror is an old friend." But the poor wicked queen did not have any trusted friend to offer consolation and counsel concerning her poor self-image. Not even the huntsman was loyal to her.

If only the queen had a few trusted friends who could have reminded her of her strengths and counseled her against excessive vanity, she might have broken out of the cycle of jealousy and despair which led her to treachery and murder. Far better and much more essential than mirrors made of glass is the honest and loving counsel of good friends.

LINES FOR YOUNG READERS

Mrs. Manna's third grade students share their creative writing this week — Valentine poems and thoughts about the theatre residency which took place at the Osgood School in January.

Valentine's Day
If I climbed a tree would you love me?
If I give you a thousand wishes would you give me lots of kisses?
I'll be dandy and give you some candy.
If I give you a yard long card and a bunch of flowers
Would you be mine, my Valentine.

I didn't like some of the parts like when Orpheus was trying to find Eurydice, but I did like the rock and Hades and the three-headed dog. I didn't like Zeus because his head was so small and you could see that Eurydice was the head because she jumped down from the shoulders.

Jim Yess

I liked them. They had good impressions. I liked the play "Orpheus." It was about a Mortal. The Mortal could lift things. It ended with Orpheus and his wife on Mount Olympus.

Peter Sheppard

I liked the play "Orpheus" because it was exciting. I was one of Orpheus' students in the play. I learned a lot from the actors. One of the things I learned is you have to concentrate and sometimes use your imagination. I really learned a lot and I liked it.

Jeanne Brown

I liked the play. Sometimes it was boring, but it was still good. I liked it even though it was sometimes boring. I'm glad that we are going to have a play and glad they could come too.

Chip Kennedy

I liked it because the rock was funny and Orpheus was scared. I liked the three-headed dog.

Jed Terry

I liked the actors because they made us have a lot of fun. I sure hope they come again. Every time I hear the word play I think of the actors.

Mac Campbell

I liked the play "Orpheus." Sometimes it was boring, but then it got exciting. I liked the parts when the rock came out. I thought that the costumes were Super! I think you really had to use your imagination. I really liked having the actors.

Kim Steimle

Orpheus is a person that has to find the golden Lyre. If he finds it he will live forever. But if he doesn't find it he will live his last two years.

Chris Bartow

Cerebus, the three-headed watchdog of Hades, was charmed by Orpheus' singing and playing of his Lyre. This got Orpheus, a mortal man, into Hades, where no mortal had ever been before.

Anonymous

It was very fun to see the actors perform. They performed a play called "Orpheus." They really showed their interpretations very well. Almost everyone in the school took part in the play "Orpheus." Marlene taught us a play called "Persephone and Hades" or "How the Seasons Came to Be."

Amy Crafts

Olympus is the happy home of Zeus and all other gods. In the production of "Orpheus" done by the artists-in-residence, Zeus has just set a task for Orpheus and that is, he (must find) the golden lyre, originally owned by Zeus. Zeus, the commanding, but kind king of all gods, living on Olympus.

Ali Welz

Well I liked it because they really got me to do my part. But I am used to having a big part. And the part I liked the best was 'Cerebus' and 'Hades.' While they were doing the play I wondered how Cerebus got three heads. Then he told the story of how he did.

from the kitchen

Serving three meals a day, seven days a week, can get pretty monotonous, both for the cook and her "customers." When you have someone brown-bagging it, sooner or later one sandwich starts tasting pretty much like another and the family lunch-maker wracks her brain for something guaranteed to be eaten and not consigned to the nearest waste basket. To lessen your morning work load, you can make and freeze several lunches ahead of time. Just pull a sandwich from the freezer in the morning and by noon, it'll be perfect for eating. Another time-saver produces five batches of

BROWNIE MIX

4 c. all-purpose flour
1 T plus 1 tsp. baking powder
1 T salt
8 c. sugar
2½ c. cocoa
2 c. shortening

Combine first five ingredients; stir well. Cut in shortening with pastry blender until mixture resembles coarse meal. Place in airtight container; store in a cool, dry place or in refrigerator for up to 6 weeks. Yield: 16 cups.

Quick and Easy Brownies:
3 c. brownie mix
3 eggs, beaten
1½ tsp. vanilla extract
1/2 c. chopped pecans

Combine all ingredients, stirring until well mixed. Spoon into a greased and floured 8" square pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 35 to 40 min. Cut into squares. Yield: 16 brownies.

I'm a fine one to write about breakfast — said to be the most important meal of the day — for I can't face an egg, or get too excited about a nourishing bowl of cereal. However, there are times in mid-winter on a Sunday morning or early brunch, when I don't know who could resist Teri Isenhour's

HASHBROWN SKILLET BREAKFAST

6 slices bacon
1 (12 oz.) pkg. frozen hash brown potatoes with onion, red and green peppers
6 eggs, beaten
1/4 c. milk
1/2 tsp. salt
Dash of pepper
1 c. (4 oz.) shredded sharp Cheddar cheese

Cook bacon in 10" skillet until crisp; remove from pan and drain well; reserving drippings in pan. Crumble bacon and set aside. Heat drippings in skillet; add frozen potatoes. Cook over low heat until underside is crisp and brown. Combine eggs, milk, salt and pepper; stir well and pour over potatoes. Top with cheese and sprinkle with bacon. Cover and cook over low heat 10 min. Cut into wedges to serve six.

Having read about a Maine factory where they prepared frozen potatoes and threw the skins in the garbage until someone had the bright idea of using the skins as appetizers, I've been wanting to try them. We ordered them the other night when eating out and when I asked the waitress, she said they were frozen. The next day, reading through a new cookbook Marion Brown lent me, what should I find but a recipe for

CHEESY POTATO SKINS

3 medium baking potatoes
Vegetable oil
Seasoned salt
1 c. (4 oz.) shredded Cheddar cheese
6 slices bacon, cooked and crumbled
Commercial sour cream

Scrub potatoes thoroughly and rub skins with oil; bake at 400 degrees for an hour or until done. Allow potatoes to cool to touch. Cut in half lengthwise; carefully scoop out pulp, leaving 1/4 to 1/8" shell. (Pulp may be used for mashed potatoes or reserved for another recipe.) Cut shells in half crosswise and deep fry in hot oil (375 degrees) for 2 min., or until lightly browned. Drain on paper towels. Place skins on a baking sheet; sprinkle with salt, cheese and bacon. Place under broiler until cheese melts. Dip in sour cream. Yield: 1 dozen appetizer servings.

Men of Harmony install officers

Charles "Mac" McCorrison of Duxbury will head up the administrative activities this year for The South Shore Men of Harmony, a local unit of the International Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barber Shop Quarter Singing in America, Inc. (S.P.E.B.S.Q.S.A.)

An installation dinner and dance was held recently for members and guests at the Marshfield Country Club. Master of ceremonies for the evening was Bud Moffatt of Hingham. The installing officer was Dave McFarland, executive vice president for the Northeast District of the S.P.E.B.S.Q.S.A. Music was supplied by Pete Collins.

Other officers serving with McCorrison are: George O'Brien of Hingham, membership vice president; Tom Hogan, also of Hingham, program vice president; Don Taylor of Whitman, secretary; and Dave Annis, Plympton, treasurer.

Special presentations were made to several of the members' wives for their efforts in making uniforms for the chorus. The Barbershopper of the Year Award was presented by past president Al Lundgren to Tom Hogan. He was honored for his many contributions made to the chorus which included a successful term as the 1982 Show Chairman.

One of 800 chapters of the all-male singing organization, the local barber shop singers meet each week on Thursday at 8 p.m. at the Hingham Community Center. Men interested in fellowship and enjoyment that comes with singing four part harmony are invited to join them at the weekly meeting.

'Miss South Shore' applicants

Young ladies between the ages of 17 and 26 are invited to enter the first annual 'Miss South Shore' Pageant as a preliminary to the Miss Massachusetts Pageant.

The local pageant scheduled for early Spring is being sponsored by the Paula Stevens School. Interested participants must never have been married and be living, working or going to school on the South Shore.

Gloria Tirrell of Duxbury has been named chairman of the pageant. She is being assisted by Augusta Wallace of Hanover. Women interested in learning more about the pageant and entrance information should contact either lady, 934-6755 or 826-5280.

"This is a scholarship pageant," Ms. Tirrell stated. "No one earns any money except the winners of the pageant who also gain the opportunity for additional scholarships by competing in the Miss Massachusetts Pageant and possibly the Miss America Pageant."

Each participant will be judged on personality, poise, beauty and talent.

Committees are now being formed to present the pageant. Individuals and/or community groups who would like to be involved should also contact Ms. Tirrell or Ms. Wallace.

Insurance Women meet

The Plymouth County Chapter of the Mass. Association of Insurance Women held its February meeting at the Gov. Carver Inn, Plymouth, hosted by Beth Ouellette and Carol Colton. MAIW President, Elsie Gustafson, CPIW, was guest speaker.

Patricia Beaulieu has been named "Claim Woman of the Year" by the Mass. Association of Insurance Women and will be presented her award at the February state meeting in Worcester. The Membership Chairman, Carol Colton, reported that the association now has five new members, thus passing their projected goal.

Sandi Cornell, Safety Chairman, announced that a "Heart Saver" course will be held.

A Nominating Committee was formed and will present the club with the list of nominees of new officers for 1983-84 at the next meeting, March 10, to be held at the Lobster Bowl Restaurant, Wareham. For arrangements, contact Jean Gifford, Cross Insurance Agency, Inc., Wareham, 02571, 295-0360.

The wind blows no ill at Gram's

By Lois Martin

Last night the wind blew like it used to when it rattled the old Gulf sign outside my grandmother's house.

Gram's house is on a corner where three roads meet. You can go down the steep hill toward South Brooksville, or drive toward the shore or keep going straight toward Crosby's house, whichever you'd choose.

Gram isn't there anymore but the house is. And so's that tall sign.

Some people say they hate the wind. I've wondered, since that phobia shows up in my family, why I don't. It's because of that sign and the feather bed in which I lay when I heard it rattle.

PATCHES

When I'm down deep in bed and I hear winter wail, I feel more secure, more tucked in...because that's the way I felt when I trained on wind.

If you were to sleep in Auth Ruth's old room, upstairs in Gram's house, you'd be in a three-quarter bed that is prepared with a feather bed mattress. Inside that bed, you'd be nearly anesthetized. The blankets would be at least eight inches high, none of them electric. All of them home-fashioned and warm.

All of you would be beneath those 'bed clothes,' save your nose which of necessity would be cold in the open.

And you'd hear that sign rattle and know how secure you were in that bed. Nobody can get you there.

On the bureau, seemingly untouched in all the years I've seen it, is Aunt Ruth's graduation picture, probably from Brooksville High School. Or maybe from normal school. That's where she went. Always kind of wondered how it got called that...as opposed to abnormal school?

There was a washstand equipped with hand towels of linen on each side. And, again of necessity, there was the standard chamber mug discreetly available behind the door at the bottom. On top, of course, were your washing receptacles, a fine tall pitcher and your bowl.

From one window there was the road down the hill beyond the sign. And from the other you could see the general store. It used to be grandfather's, Fred Perkins. Since then Chester and Carrie Wescott have had it. And for more than 10 years now, I think, Gook has had it.

I've never known Gook's last name, never needed to. When you've got a name like "Gook", you're not forgotten. I for example have no trouble recalling him or it.

The store was extremely general when my grandfather had it. And it is now, though time and demand of products resulted in expansions and perhaps more regular calls from the Nissen man.

Unchanging though it is in purpose, as is Gram's house, still a haven of sorts. Auth Ruth lives there now and she has it stocked with enough food to feed 40 droppers-in to a setting. And there are the supplies that ward off winter, the flannel sheets.

Sometimes I suspect I'm one of the few remaining characters to hold a flannel sheet in high regard. And I don't even have one. But particularly I'd want the gentle pastel plaid kind that's double. You crawl in between those and reach far down with your toes to find the sheet's unending, no space for a draft.

Scarcer than that product may be the use of the heated up irons, wrapped in flannel cloth to place where your feet need be.

I like my electric blanket. I don't want to heat irons and wrap them or whomp my foot on them in the middle of the night.

But when I heard the wind last night, I almost listened for the rattling sign, that security, that made me feel cared for and special as I did in Gram's house. I liked the sound. I transmitted that cozy sensation to my room where pine trees scrape the window if the wind's just right.

Gram's been gone, I think, for about 12 years. There have been times, early in the morning, when I'm coming from a deep sleep to the present new day, that I think of her, not as dead, but as being alive.

In so many ways that's true. I just don't see her the way I did. But in moments of warmth and wind she comes again to my mind, like the rattling sign.

Living in the country is even better than it used to be. Lots of new comforts have been added—as you'll soon see when you visit The Meadows in Hingham.

This fine group of attached single family homes offers the spaciousness and fine construction of yesteryear with conveniences grandma never even contemplated. There are kitchens with sunny breakfast bays . . . lots of fireplaces . . . vaulted and tray ceilings . . . large private courtyards . . . 2-car garages . . . swimming pool, whirlpool, tennis courts and a clubhouse. The location, on wildflower-strewn meadows in the lovely town of Hingham, is idyllic.

Two and three bedroom homes range from $155,000 to $210,000 during our opening period. The furnished models are open every day from 9 to 5. Take Exit 14 from Route 3 and follow Route 228 toward Hingham four miles, turn right on Free Street one mile to our entrance. Call (617) 740-1500 for an appointment.

Cohasset viewers comment on the 'Winds of War'

By Laura Doherty

"The Winds of War" ended Sunday night and according to an informal survey of residents, ABC's $40 million miniseries was almost the success its producers had hoped for.

Billed as the most expensive and most spectacular miniseries ever made, the adaptation of Herman Wouk's novel ~~ran for 18 hours over seven nights.~~ Essentially, the movie focused on events leading to the American entry into World War II and the effects on an American Navy family.

Wouk's novel is a tale of love and war. His 962 page script was shot in six countries over a period of 13 months.

Bob Duncan, vice commander of the George Mealy Post, thought it was "terrific. It gave us a little something of what happened before and during the war years. It was also a touching love story," he added. Robert Mitchum played the role of Commander Pug Henry as "it was supposed to be." "Ali MacGraw did her best with a part that maybe was not the best for her."

A veteran of Korea, Bob felt that the picture portrayed the attitude of Americans to World War II. "Everyone. was 100 percent involved. They banded together from the very beginning." He especially remembered his seventh grade teacher who "couldn't wait to get in." She joined the WACS.

The effect the turmoil of those years had on marriages and families was also shown in the movie. Bob remembered the long separations but concluded that "afterwards, in most cases, people went back to their normal lives."

Moe Foley, bartender at the post, also enjoyed the movie but objected to its length. "Most people can't watch it that long," he said. He especially enjoyed Mitchum whom he felt "supported the whole thing."

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray was happy that she was able to watch it every night. She noted the strong interest in the movie and how many things came to a halt so people could watch it.

She also thought it was an excellent opportunity for young people to learn about that time in history. Certain that a similar situation could reoccur, she said, "We must all stay on our guard and know what's going on in other countries."

The role played by Mitchum especially appealed to her. "I loved his reaction to the bribery attempt," she continued. "He stood up as purely an American who was true to himself." She's also been busy trying to figure out the actual person he was supposed to be portraying.

Ali MacGraw did an excellent job in a very difficult part, she continued. "She's American but also she's a Jewish girl who knows what could happen to her. Her history lies heavy and now it's happening again and it's hideous."

Noting the strength conveyed by Churchill and Roosevelt, Murray commented that the movie showed that "God gave us the leaders we needed when we needed them. These are the things TV should be doing," she concluded.

Another enthusiastic viewer who served in the Army in World War II was Burt Pratt. Burt who "didn't miss a minute of it," felt that the movie gave both an accurate background to the events of that time and also information he didn't know.

He observed that the part played by Mitchum stretched the imagination. Also having rearranged his family life for a week, he felt that the movie "tended to drag a bit." Nevertheless, he noted the enthusiastic response of the Sunday morning coffee customers at the Log and Line.

Pratt doubts the possibility of the emergence of another Hitler. "The Germans wanted their place in the sun. They seized on a leader that could bring about their prominence and glory." He found it especially hard to believe "how they became so fanatical."

Peg Laugelle felt the series was too long and glossed over a lot. She commended MacGraw for doing as much as she could with a difficult part. She also thought that Polly Bergen did well in the part of Henry's wife.

Connie Parker didn't watch it. "I knew I couldn't follow it through each night and I'm tired of war," she explained. She added there was a lot of conversation about it around town.

Gerald McNabb, a high school junior, also found that he couldn't make the commitment to watch it. "Besides, my mother doesn't allow TV on school nights," he added.

"I'll miss it but for all the wrong reasons," laughed Helen Ketcham, who thought the "script was rotten, the whole thing badly acted and the accents hysterical.

"Robert Mitchum smiled exactly twice, Hitler was a riot with his lisp and how did you like Polly Bergen's strident voice?" she asked.

Helen felt that the nostalgia of that time just didn't come through. "All of the songs were cold," she noted, "I soon became detached."

Edith Cavanaugh Quigley had read the book and felt the movie followed it well. It definitely captured the time, said Edith, who recalled hearing the announcement of Pearl Harbor on her car radio.

"Everyone was backing up our country," she said.

High school senior John Kuhn felt the movie made the events leading up to World War II seem real. He especially liked the part of Pug Henry. John, a Seaman Apprentice in the U.S. Coast Guard Reserves, said the attitude today is quite different to war. He also noted how well the movie showed what war does to a family.

Whether it was the successful gamble the network hoped it would be remains to be seen. One thing is obvious, everyone interviewed had heard of "The Winds of War" and had something to say about it.

The Burns sisters — Marguerita, 100 years old Feb. 10, and Caroline, 97 years old Feb. 14, congratulate each other at a party held in their honor at Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home. The birthday celebration was given by St. Paul's Church, Hingham, where the women have been parishioners all their lives. (Greg Derr photo)

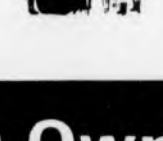
☐Next week is February vacation, and if the kids in your house can't seem to find anything to do, remember the Art Center. They are holding a "Child's Vacation Drop In" where they can go to the Art Center from 10:30 to noon and do an art project. Any child, between seven and 12 years-old, may either paint, draw, or make a collage (or work on a week-long "Surprise Project"). For more information, call the Art Center at 383-9548.



Homeless hotline proves successful

Gov. Michael Dukakis announced the statewide homeless hotline is being utilized by people seeking shelter, and could be called a successful innovation.

"In the ten days of the hotline's operation, over 300 calls have been taken," the Governor said. "Of those, 55 percent have sought emergency shelter, 30 percent anticipated needing shelter very shortly and 15 percent have wanted information or offered assistance."

"The hotline people can deal with numerous other sorts of crisis besides homelessness, and are ready on a 24-hour, 7-day basis to answer questions and solve problems. We would like to see this service utilized to the maximum extent by people facing urgent problems."

The toll free hotline number is 1-800-462-2400.

CHS sports update...

HOCKEY

Last Friday night the CHS hockey team improved to 10-3-2 with a non-league win over Don Bosco (6-4).

Senior forward Dan Bowen led the Skippers with two goals and two assists.

Others scoring for Cohasset were seniors Don O'Neill and Rich Evans who also recorded two assists. Junior Joe Hoffman and freshman defense Kevin Quilty.

The All-Star game, which was postponed due to the storm, is scheduled for Friday, Feb. 18, at Winter Gardens.

In other non-league games the Skippers will face Marion Saturday, Scituate Tuesday, and Hingham Wednesday, all at 6 p.m.

1982-83 SOUTH SHORE LEAGUE HOCKEY ALL-STARS FORWARDS

DEFENSE

Rich Evans, Cohasset senior; Chip Kispert, Duxbury senior; Ed O'Neil, Abington senior; and Steve Schneider, Hanover senior.

GOALIE

Skip Bennett, Duxbury senior and Gino DeAcetis, Hanover junior.

WRESTLING

Last Thursday the CHS wrestling squad were defeated 48-22 by League opponent Rockland.

Recording pins for the Skippers were matmen senior Paul Igo, 100 pound class and sophomore Rick Rourke, 114 pounds class.

Junior Lee Reid won the 121 pounds class with a 2-0 decision.

GIRLS BASKETBALL

The CHS girls varsity basketball team brought its winning streak to five games in a row by defeating League opponents East Bridgewater and Rockland.

At East Bridgewater, senior guard Gia Barresi scored 18 points and grabbed eight rebounds to lead the Skippers over the Vikings 47-28.

Sophomore forward Carla Lucas netted 11 points and hauled down 12 rebounds.

Junior Jenny Dickerman was defensive standout for Cohasset.

Last Friday the girls downed the Rockland Bulldogs 59-49 in a minor upset knocking the Bulldogs out of the championship.

Senior Beverly Mullaney and sophomore Carla Lucas led a balanced scoring attack with 14 points apiece while senior Gia Barresi contributed 10.

The squad, now 11-7 overall, are to finish up their season this week with matches against Hull and Holbrook.

BOYS BASKETBALL

Last Friday night the CHS varsity basketball team were down 87 to 75 by Rockland despite a great team effort.

The Skippers only trailed by six with two minutes to play.

Freshman point guard Tony Bogarty scored 23 points for Cohasset while senior Jack Maloney and junior David Barcome netted 18 points apiece.

In other League action last week the Skippers were defeated 56-37 by the East Bridgewater Vikings.

Freshman Tony Bogarty had 12 points for Cohasset.

Bogarty was recently named to the South Shore League All-Star Team, the first freshman ever elected in the history of the South Shore League.

Cohasset (7-11) wraps up its season this week with games against Hull and Holbrook.

At the Rec Department...

YOUTH JOB OPPORTUNITY PROGRAM

During the past few years the Recreation Department's Job Opportunity Program has placed approximately 80 Cohasset youth on part-time, intermittent jobs.

In a continuing effort to place youth on jobs of all types, the department is asking any businesses or individuals who have a need for part-time workers to call the recreation office at 383-6791 to file their worker requests.

Once a job is filed with the department, names of individuals who have applied for jobs that fall under the guidelines will be given out. All compensation will be worked out between the employer and employee.

Cohasset youths seeking some form of part-time employment may also call the recreation office for a job application. Upon completion of the application each name will be placed on file as a candidate for possible job referal.

SKATING

The Cohasset Recreation Department is accepting phone registrations for various levels of skating classes at Cohasset Winter Garden. Classes are scheduled to begin Sunday, Feb. 27 at 5 for 5 weeks. Classes taught by professional instructors will be offered in the following areas:

Color is a vitally important element in establishing the mood in any decorating scheme. However, many people are unable to verbally convey what they want in a house paint, often, for no other reason than the lack of the proper terminology. These explanations should help:

"Hue" denotes the actual color name such as green. A color's "value" refers to its lightness or darkness by mixing white, gray, or black with a color, various gardiations or values can be effected. Those color values closest to black are "shades" while those closest to white are "tints". "Tone" refers to a color's intensity. This is the degree to which it displays brighness or dullness.

Soft, sophisticated color is an increasingly important element in contemporary decor. Are you looking for a specific shade of color? Here at BOUND BROOK PAINT & HARDWARE we feature Kyanize paints and can mix and match 1000's of different shades and hues. We also keep a record of your blend if additional quantities are needed. To learn more, call us at 545-3624 or stop in to 763 Country Way in N. Scituate. We're open Mon-Wed 8-6, Thurs & Fri till 8:30, Sat till 5 and our staff will gladly answer all your questions.

Clipper ship models find a home at Maritime Museum

By David Wadsworth
Cohasset Historical Society Curator

The Cohasset Historical Society's Maritime Museum has become the new home for two unique and finely crafted 19th century sailing ship models.

Currently on loan from William Cox and Jane Cox MacElree, these models of the Clipper Ships "Great Republic" and "James Baines" depict two of the finest of the Boston-made Clippers whose record-shattering trans-oceanic voyages astonished the maritime world of their day.

Of the great 19th century Clippers, never before had sailing vessels of their magnitude been designed, and no equal to them has been built since.

In these "greyhounds of the sea" the ancient art of wooden shipbuilding reached the pinnacle of its success. For a few brief decades the Clippers reigned supreme on the seas before succumbing to the less glamorous but more economical steamship. The beauty and spectacle of the great Clippers still inspires maritime enthusiasts the world over as it has been captured in pictures and in finely executed models.

The two clipper models graciously loaned to the Maritime Museum by members of the Cox family accurately replicate vessels built at the East Boston shipyard of Donald McKay. McKay himself was one of the foremost designers and builders of sailing vessels during the mid and latter 1800's. Many of his Clipper Ships equalled the best made elsewhere, and the best of his ships surpassed all competitors.

The Clipper "Great Republic" was built at East Boston in 1853, and the "James Baines" was launched there a year later in 1854. "Great Republic," a four-masted bark-rigged vessel, was the largest merchant ship constructed up to its time, having the length of some 335 feet, and was able to carry a record setting 4,500 tons of cargo.

"James Baines," a three-masted clipper, smaller at 250 feet in length and able to carry 2,000 tons of cargo, was one of the fastest of all the record-setting Clippers. "James Baines" joined the select group of vessels capable of traveling more than 400 miles in a single day, and still holds the permanent record for port-to-port crossing of 12 days from Boston to Liverpool, England.

McKay's "Great Republic" was launched at East Boston on October 4, 1853, an event that led to a city-wide celebration. The gigantic vessel was to be under the command of the builder's brother, Capt. Lauchlan McKay. The ship was intended to be the apex of the evolution of clipper ship design, combining the fine hull lines with billowing clouds of sail on a scale never before tried.

"Great Republic" dwarfed even the largest of the great Clippers built before it. One would like to report the giant ship lived up to its builder's dreams, but that was not to happen. For only a few weeks after its launching, while loading at New York for its maiden voyage, "Great Republic" fell victim to the ancient enemy of wooden ships, fire. By the time the fire was out, sails, masts, and rigging had been consumed, and the vessel's hull had suffered extensive damage. Thus ending its now broken-hearted builder's dreams of the ultimate conquest of the sea.

More than a year later, after extensive rebuilding, it finally put to sea for the first time, although a diminished version of the original plan, having 1,000 tons less of cargo-carrying capacity and much less sail area. Furthermore, the vessel was noticeably slower than its intended plan had called for. Despite these shortcomings, "Great Republic" served well as a chartered British troop carrier during the Crimean War and again as a Union transport in the American Civil War.

Later the great ship was reduced even further to the rig of a three-master, and finally, in 1872 and under foreign registry, ended its career by foundering in a gale near Bermuda.

The year after "Great Republic's" launching, McKay's East Boston yard constructed four near-sistership Clippers for Liverpool shipowner James Baines' "Black Ball Line," to run regularly between Liverpool and Australian ports. "James Baines," named for its owner, was one of the four and became a record-setting ship almost immediately. Its ability to sustain high speeds for extended periods of time placed it in the record books alongside such better known McKay Clippers as the archtype "Flying Cloud" and the revolutionary but ill-fated "Sovereign of the Seas."

The great "Age of Sail" with its ocean spanning Clippers has long since receded into history, but we are fortunate indeed to be able to catch a glimpse of its greatness in the carefully crafted and accurately made replicas of 19th century sailing vessels.

The Maritime Museum's models of Donald McKay's "Great Republic" and "James Baines" represent a unique opportunity to see the Clippers as they really were.

Athletic director Clark Chatterton says Cohasset is going to enter the State Wrestling Tournament Friday, Feb. 18 at Bridgewater.

The Winter Sports Banquet is scheduled Tuesday, Mar. 1 at 7 p.m.

The CHS hockey team automatically qualified for the State Tournament when they became co-champions with Duxbury. The Tournament will start the week of Feb. 28. Dates and places of the meets will be announced on Sunday, Feb. 27, Chatterton said.

JR. HIGH CONCERT FESTIVAL

Bryan Marks and Jeff Dodge also extended congratulations to junior high music students chosen to participate at the Southeast Mass. District Concert Festival March 4 and 5 at the Wellesley Junior High/Middle School. They are: Cynthia Conklin, flute; Carson Gregory, french horn; Susan Riley, xylophone; and Andrew Glasfeld and Dave Thomas, baritone vocalists. The musicians competed with students auditioning from about 75 communities.

PSO congratulated on Shakespeare evening

School Committee Chairman Diana Kornet congratulated the PSO Monday for their successful Shakespeare evening on February 4. Even the very young children seemed to thoroughly enjoy the show, she said.

School Committee Member Martha Gjesteby said that nearly 40 parents recently heard Mary Benbow speak about handwriting at another PSO sponsored event.

"The past two years have found me with little time to cultivate an active social life due to a rapid growth in my career and professional life. Since my day is long work-wise and my job is demanding – there is little time left to seek the social life that I would like. That's where Together came in. I respected their honesty, integrity and professionalism from the very start. As a result, I have met several people with the same interests and goals in life – not to mention the great times we have shared. Indeed, Together has filled a very important part of my life."

"I'm a busy professional and both my career and social life are important to me. I don't go to bars and I don't date people I work with. For me, Together has been an economical and time-saving way of meeting other compatible single adults. The counselors are sincerely concerned with introducing me to the kind of person I would like to meet. I recommend this service highly."

Flea market & bake sale

Saturday, Feb. 19 at the Nantasket Library in North Cohasset, the Philoptochos Society of the Panagia Greek Orthodox Church (Pope Memorial) of Cohasset is sponsoring a Mini-Flea Market and Bake Sale.

The Bake Sale chairwoman, Phyllis Barkas of Hull, will provide many of the delicious Greek pastries featured at the Panagia Church's Tavernas, as well as a variety of other baked goods.

The Flea Market section chairwoman, Jane Marshall of Cohasset, will offer a varied selection of clothes, appliances and household items.

The sale will be held from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Nantasket Library.

BSO youth concerts

The second of three Boston Symphony Orchestra Youth Concerts is Saturday, Feb. 19. A bus will leave the Joseph Osgood School promptly at 9:30 a.m., returning at 12:30 p.m. Students are to bring a bag lunch.

If a student is unable to attend, please contact Mrs. James Mullen, 383-1993, or Mrs. David Sweeney, 383-1184.

Community Center movie

The Cohasset Community Center will sponsor a movie Saturday, Feb. 19 from 4 to 5:45 p.m. Refreshments will be served.

Winter sports banquet

The winter sports banquet will be held at the Cohasset High School cafeteria Tuesday, March 1 at 7 p.m. Advance reservations can be made by mailing a $4 check to the Cohasset Boosters, P.O. Box 511, or you may pay at the door. Due to limited space, only parents of students who participated in the winter sports program are invited.

Cohasset Road Race

The Cohasset Rotary Club will sponsor the seventh Annual Cohasset Road Race by the Sea Sunday, March 27.

The race starts at Cohasset Common in the village at 1 p.m. Preregistration is necessary. Applications for the race have been distributed at many running supply stores on the South Shore and in Boston. Applications are also available by request through P.O. Box 36, Cohasset 02025.

T-shirts with the road race logo, refreshments, and a book of coupons worth $3 is provided to each participant for the entrance fee.

The race is a sanctioned 10-kilometer event rated by the New England Guide to Roadracing as the silver medalist event of the season. In the past, runners training for the Boston Marathon have used this race as a tune-up for the Patriots Day event.

Team prizes for male and female team participants and prizes for the top individuals in three age groups are presented each year.

The merchants and restaurant owners of Cohasset and surrounding towns have been very generous in providing unique rewards for the top finishers.

The proceeds from the race go to a variety of community activities, including scholarships for students seeking additional education.

Art Center show

North Shore artist Suzanne Ulrich will have a one-person show at the South Shore Art Center Invitational Gallery.

"Paintings and Works on Paper" opens with a reception Sunday, Feb. 6, from 5-7 p.m., and will run through March 5 in the Center's gallery.

Ulrich's art is committed to abstract expressionism. Her themes are humanistic, universal and concerned with balancing opposition between the inner and outer life. Her images, buildings, furniture, nudes, etc., are familiar, but she simplifies them until they become spare and stereotypic symbols, similar in style to that of Matisse.

Her primary vehicle is oil, but she uses a variety of media including watercolor, gouache, ink and pastel.

Living and working in Marblehead, Ulrich has shown in and around Boston. She may well be remembered by South Shore art patrons for her works including "The Intuitive Eye" exhibit at the Federal Reserve Gallery and at the Center's 1981 All New England Juried Show in which she took second prize in painting.

Her one-person shows include the Montserrat Gallery, Montserrat School of Visual Art, Beverly; Marblehead Looms, Newbury St., Boston; the Gertrude Thomas Chapman Art Center Gallery at Cazenovia College, New York; and the Abbot Public Library, Marblehead.

Barrett completes VNA home health aide program

Beverly Barrett was one of nine South Shore women who recently completed the home health aide training program at the Visiting Nurse Association of the South Shore.

Home health aide recruits are given the 12-day paid training program covering topics from nutrition, physical therapy, and care of the terminally ill, to care of newborns, and hints for light housekeeping. They are then ready to become part of the health care team and are given full support by doctors and nurses on the team.

The next training program at VNASSI begins March 10. Anyone interested in a part-time position with a professional health care team should call 849-1710.

Sewer Commissioners complain over increased sewer flow at Kimball's

The sewer commission contends that by allowing public use of the Kimball's-By-The-Sea restaurant and lounge, the sewer permit previously issued to the establishment would be invalid.

The commission is scheduled to meet March 8 with the owners of the establishment.

By increasing the use of the facility, the owners will increase the sewer flow into the treatment plant, the commission said.

This issue was ignited Sept. 15 when former commission chairman, Gerard Stanton, informed the Roy Corporation that a sewer ban was being enforced in Cohasset, and that increased use of the sewers was prohibited by the state.

Although the state Division of Water Pollution Control originally disagreed with the commission's argument, a recent letter from the state reversed its opinion.

According to a letter from the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering, if "a significant inflow would be generated by the proposed change in use, we agree with you in denying this change in use."

The commission which met Monday night argues that there will be an increased use of the sewer system at Kimball's, and they also challenge an engineer's findings regarding the sewer flow rate.

According to commission chairman Joseph Gwinn, the motel owners hired an engineer who "came up with the right figures," and concluded that public use of the establishment would not exceed the daily flow amounts allowed by the permit.

The commission now proposes that it select an engineer to complete such a study at the restaurant owners' expense. There has been no reply from the Roy Corp. about that request from the commission.

In the meantime, Peter Woods informed the commission that a breakfast meeting of about 110 Plymouth County realtors is scheduled at Kimball's-By-The-Sea Feb. 24.

He requested the commission investigate this situation, because it would undoubtedly be a public event since the people would not be registered guests of the motel.

Woods then asked if the commission could simply close the establishment if the owners do not comply with the town's requirements.

The system there will overtax the town's sewer system until this is stopped, Woods said.

Gwinn said the matter will be decided when the commission meets with the owners March 8.

TOWN MEETING ARTICLE

In other business Monday night, the commission decided to meet Wednesday, Feb. 23 at 10 p.m. to discuss a town meeting article being proposed by member Maxwell Pounder.

Although Pounder said he has made some revisions

Ainslie won't run

Selectman Chairman Henry Ainslie, who has served as selectman for 12 years, will not run for another three-year term.

Ainslie made the announcement Tuesday.

This leaves two candidates for a three-year term, Frank England and Cliff Mitman. Ted Ford, John DeBassio and Diane Sullivan are running for one-year terms.

There are two three-year positions and a one-year term to be filled.

Here is a full text of Ainslie's announcement.

"It is with mixed emotions that I announce my decision not to seek re-election to the board of selectmen for a fifth consecutive term.

"Having devoted more than two decades of service to the town and with added responsibilities being placed upon me in my job with the county, it is time to do what I had seriously considered at the completion of each of my last two terms, but obviously with different conclusions.

"Cohasset is taking a political course in which I want no part. I sincerely hope that the trend reverses before any further damage is done.

"Recent negative attitudes towards local

Selectmen consider video request

Selectmen are reviewing a proposal by two businessmen to locate a video game center at the Cushing Plaza.

The proposal was submitted as a preliminary step by Myron Cohen of Randolph and Harvey Siteman of Raynham before they negotiate a lease at the plaza on Rte. 3A.

Cohen told selectmen last week that before negotiations are initiated, they wanted to know how selectmen "feel about licensing this type of operation."

Selectmen chairman Henry Ainslie bluntly replied that selectmen have not responded "too kindly to this type of operation." He told the businessmen that proposals made by residents to operate video games within their establishments have been denied by selectmen.

Both men currently own and operate Video Connection retail stores. They told selectmen that the video game center proposed for Cohasset would not include the sale of any video or computer equipment. In fact, they explained, this would be their first attempt to operate a coin-operated video game center.

"This will be our first shot," he told selectmen.

Cohen and Siteman said they objected to the label "video arcade," and said that with the "proper management and policy, virtually all negative aspects of an entertainment center can be eliminated."

The two businessmen said they felt Cushing Plaza would be the perfect area to operate the entertainment center. There are good parking facilities, a balanced tenant mix, easy access, business zoned, and excellent exposure.

Last week, the Cushing Plaza management announced that The Corner Meat Shop would be opening a store at the plaza.

Plaza manager Joseph Quinn said last week that more new stores and improvements are slated for the coming months at the plaza.

He did not elaborate on the future stores, because he said town approval is needed before openings are announced.

"I will say there will be two or three exciting stores, not of the dimension of the Corner Meat, but nice

Advisors are the unsung heroes

By Mike Berger

Lately they have been meeting twice a week without much fanfare.

But without this committee doing its homework, Cohasset's budget plans would remain unexamined and open to excess spending.

The Advisory Committee, chaired by Jean Cotton, is a model to all other community committees. Their meetings are open, discussion is frank and rarely does the committee use the privilege of executive session to talk finances.

During her six-year membership, three as chairman, Cotton recalls only three closed-door sessions.

She is proud of her committee's work and is happy the board is represented by all segments of the town, especially people with tremendous fiscal expertise and talent. We have financial analysts, insurance people and business executives, she said. "This is a conscientious committee. We always have a quorum and a full complement of nine people," said Cotton.

These nine members besides Cotton include Steve Bartow, Tom Burke, Gault Grant, James Lagrotteria, vice-chairman, Paul Neelon, Jacqueline Dormitzer, secretary, Nelson Pratt and newly appointed member, Fred Koed.

With the exception of the school department, the committee has finished its review of department finances. Essentially all town departments were level-funded for next year's budget. The advisory board is due to meet with school committee members during the first week in March to agree on a bottom line figure.

Cotton is reluctant to discuss what the committee will expect from the school committee budget. But she maintains that Prop. 2½ has set a definite limit on town spending and gave authority for the first time to a town appointed committee to set a bottom line figure for the school committee, unless voters approve a spending override.

Cohasset's week...

Unclaimed money law

Massachusetts General Law Chapter 200A is known as the Unclaimed Money Law. Enacted in 1907, it is viewed as the state's first consumer protection law.

This law seeks to protect individuals by assuring that unclaimed bank accounts, uncashed payroll checks, gift certificates and insurance proceeds which have been inactive for more than five years are returned to their rightful owners.

State Treasurer Crane is charged with administering this law. One of his responsibilities is to force banks and other institutions to report unclaimed funds to the state. Treasurer Crane had to sue Boston Edison, the First National Bank of Boston and Filene's to make them turn over unclaimed money. He then tries to locate the missing owners to return their money to them.

In March, Treasurer Crane will release the names of more than 42,000 Massachusetts residents who are the owners of unclaimed money. Lists of the owners' names will appear in newspapers across the state beginning March 1. Last year Crane returned more than $18 million dollars to rightful owners under the unclaimed money law.

Special meetings research

The town government structure committee is researching whether the town can prevent special town meetings from voting changes in the structure of town government. At first glance, state and local laws indicate the town cannot limit proposed changes in town government to annual town meetings.

The committee has asked town counsel for a review of the town bylaw.

In November voters opposed to a five-member board of selectmen argued that special town meetings are called for specific purposes and groups with a special interest should not be allowed to change the form of town government at a special town meeting. In contrast others said attendance is often better at special meetings. The committee will meet Thursday, Feb. 24 to discuss the issue.

Survey shows Assessors fit bill

What's the best way to operate the town's Assessing Department? The town's Government Structure Committee is researching the department for improved efficiency. Committee member Richard Silvia used material in a 1980 state survey and checked with the town's assessors to see where Cohasset fits in. In addition, he is preparing another survey where he will make comparisons of Cohasset's Assessing Dept. with other communities. Cohasset is in the ballpark as far as the items covered in the survey, Silvia said.

These items included composition of the board (three members), clerical help, outside consultants, compensation, experience and education. But the board, unlike other communities, meets twice a month while others meet once a week.

Who should run landfill?

The Board of Health is submitting a town meeting article to explore the possibility of shifting the operation of the town landfill to a private contractor. But the board will not support the plan if cost figures from private contractors exceed present landfill costs.

The board believes a private contractor might be able to operate the landfill for less than the $68,000 the landfill cost the town last year. The board must determine how much money would be appropriated to pay for the daily operation and landfill maintenance.

Board Chairman Barbara Kern said problems at the landfill such as major repairs prompted the idea. Whatever's best for the town would determine the final result, she said.

Learner's permit written test

Student drivers may have to pass a written test to get a learner's permit. Beginning April 11, those who apply for a regular or motorcycle learner's permit must pass a 10 question examination first. Now the registry issues learners permits without a test. A passing grade will be 70 percent.

Professional theater planned

A Cohasset businessman has proposed a $750,000, 400-seat professional theater complex in an industrial park off Route 3 in Norwell. Arnold Nickerson, owner of Nickerson Machinery, has made the proposal and said musicians and dramatic presentations could be offered at the theater.

The Norwell Appeals Board is considering the application. If the application is rejected, he may apply for the Assinippi Park location.

Nickerson is hoping for a year-round 42-week theater facility with seven productions which would play for six weeks each.

Jordan Marsh arrival

The long-reported arrival of Jordan Marsh at Hanover Mall is scheduled to become a reality with the announcement by Jordan's President Elliott Stone that the firm's 16th New England store will be located in the Woolworth's store and part of the Cummings department store.

A spokesman for Campanelli-Tedeschi Trust which owns the Mall, said Cummings will move to another location in the Mall. It isn't yet known if Woolworth's will also operate at another Mall location.

Jordan's is seen as the anchor the Mall long has needed. Renovation work is scheduled to start next month.

Video center request...

stores,'' Quinn said last week.

According to the proposal, the game room would be open from 11 a.m. to 11 p.m. every day, and from 1 p.m. to 10 p.m. on Sunday.

There will be between 30 and 45 video games within the establishment, they said.

There would be no drinking, eating or smoking allowed in the center, and no one of school age would be allowed during school hours. There would be fulltime management and staff.

Executive secretary Mark Lanza noted that the only written policy pertaining to video games in Cohasset prohibits the establishments selling liquor.

Ainslie said there are already problems with groups of teens gathering at Cushing Plaza, which he felt would be increased with the addition of a video game center there.

The selling of beer and wine at Papa Gino's at the plaza tends to attract teens to the vicinity, he said.

''It is an area I personally would not look too kindly toward, even if we were to issue this license,'' he said.

Ainslie noted there are eight video games at the Winter Gardens skating rink, but skating, not the games, is the main activity at that establishment.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle said before selectmen made any decision, he would like input from the police chief regarding the proposal.

Sewer Commission...

to the proposal, he would like to discuss his ideas with the commission.

The commission will meet at that late hour to fulfill the requirements of the open meeting law in which a public board must post notice of a meeting within 48 hours of that session.

Pounder said he would discuss the value engineering concept applied to the existing contract with Metcalf and Eddy in order to attempt to gather the same information that was intended under Article 4 of the special town meeting. Pounder said he would attempt to simplify the proposal at Wednesday night's meeting.

RED LION INN

In other business, the commission reviewed a request for a permit to the Red Lion Inn to eliminate one of the seven bedrooms at the inn in order to create another bathroom.

The commission said it would need a more detailed drawing of the proposal and more specific comments as to how the sewer flow would be reduced by this proposal.

The sewer advisory board will meet Thursday, Feb. 24 to form a consensus of the five alternative sewer engineering finalists.

The board will interview two engineering firms that night. A special meeting is scheduled for March 1 at which members will determine their selection for an alternative sewer engineering company.

The recommendation will be forwarded to the sewer commission, which makes the final determination toward a contract.

Preliminary town warrant list released

Selectmen last week reviewed a proposed preliminary list of about 36 articles for the annual town meeting.

Many of the articles proposed for the warrant are routine matters which are considered annually.

The largest money articles include a $40,000 request from the Highway Dept. for a catch basin cleaner; a $24,000 Tree and Park Dept. stake body truck; a request for $50,000 to resurface certain streets, and a request for either $342,300 to rehabilitate the water distribution system along Atlantic Avenue, or an option to appropriate $220,600 for a smaller portion of property in that area.

Although it will not be included in the April town meeting, executive secretary Mark Lanza suggested that selectmen begin to ponder a proposal to amend the zoning bylaws to limit the location and establishment of adult entertainment businesses in town.

Lanza questioned whether such an amendment should be introduced for April town meeting consideration. He said the town would have no authority to deny a license to such businesses under the current zoning bylaws .

He added that such a bylaw change would require significant study by town counsel.

Not wishing to be "an alarmist," Lanza said maybe the time to present a detailed proposal to the town would be at a special town meeting next fall.

Selectman Mary Jane McArthur said she would not make a hurried decision on such a proposal which necessitates further study. Selectman Rocco Laugelle supported Lanza's request to have town counsel review the suggestion, saying, "I believe we should jump before someone else does."

As listed in the preliminary town meeting warrant, article 12 requests money to be used in conjunction with state grant funds, to rehabilitate the water distribution system along Margin Street and Atlantic Avenue from Elm Street to Nichols Road. The state's share of this project totals about $296,000.

Option two, which is tentatively scheduled as Article 13, would request the town appropriate $220,613 to rehabilitate 750 feet of the system from Elm Street to Cunningham Bridge.

Although Lanza felt it might be an inappropriate article to include the warrant, selectmen said it will be up to voters to decide whether to appropriate money to contract the daily maintenance and operation of the Cedar Street landfill.

This article has been proposed and sponsored by the Board of Health.

According to the article, the unspecified funds will be used for specification preparation, advertising, engineering review and consultation regarding bid acceptance.

Selectmen said they would not recommend the proposal, but said it could be included for voters' consideration.

There is an article requesting $50,000 to resurface with bituminous concrete certain streets in the town. The town would borrow $23,472, and raise another $21,255 by taxation, and $5,273 through state funds.

Article 14 requests $40,000 for the purchase of a new truck with a dump body and a mounted unit to clean out catch basins. The DPW would trade in a 1969 truck in the purchase. The Tree and Park Dept. requests $24,000 for a stake body truck, including a trade in on a 1968 stake body truck.

One of the more interesting articles proposed for the town meeting warrant is a request to amend the zoning bylaws to allow the construction of windmills by special permit. The planning board has proposed this article. According to planning board chairman Barbara Power, the alternative energy structures must meet specific setback requirements. Since Cohasset now has a 35 foot limit on all structure ceilings, windmills are not allowed. There will be a public hearing on this proposal at 8 p.m. March 2 at 43 Elm Street.

There is a proposed citizens' petition article to amend the town's bylaws to provide "generally for the establishment of a police department to be under the supervision of a Chief of Police, who shall be in immediate control of property used by the department and of the police officers whom he shall assign to their respective duties and who shall obey his orders or act on anything relating thereto."

This article was proposed by Sgt. Richard Barrow and signed by several residents. It has been labeled the "strong police chief" law.

The school department has proposed two articles, including a request for $20,000 to repair or replace the roof over the kitchen at the Deer Hill School. The other article proposes to establish a revolving fund for non-resident and foster care students. Tuition receipts would be applied directly to this fund. The school committee will address this issue at the town meeting.

Among the other proposed articles is an amendment to the harbor bylaws to require the display of mooring decals, and to fine all boaters who dock at the town pier for more than 30 minutes except in emergency situations.

Proposals to amend the personnel bylaws include recommendations to establish a longevity payment schedule and to allow one personal day; and to provide a grievance procedure for non-union employees.

There is a proposed article to sell the North Cohasset Fire Station and a follow-up option to demolish the station.

There is an article to design and construct a ramp for handicapped accessibility to the town hall. Voters have complained that handicapped persons are unable to enter town hall during elections, selectman Henry Ainslie said.

The selectmen will make a final review of the proposed warrant this week. Meanwhile, the advisory board is reviewing and making recommendations on the warrant articles.

Water deliquents face shut-off

There are Cohasset residents who owe the Water Department some $120,000 in overdue bills and face a three-week water shutoff deadline.

Water Department Superintendent Ben Curley doesn't know how many delinquent customers are causing the deficit but he said there are some customers who owe $900 and there are some overdue accounts which date back two years.

Water bills are sent quarterly or every three months. Curley said the average bill for a family of four is in the vicinity of $55.

Customers have 60 days to pay before a 3.5 percent interest is compounded quarterly on the unpaid balance.

Curley said delinquent customers have been called once by phone and in some cases were sent letters and certified letters of the overdue bills.

The next deadline is in two or three weeks when those overdue accounts with no payments may face shutoffs.

Curley said the water commissioners have agreed for some payoff arrangement to avoid a shutoff. Customers can submit a partial payment of at least 50 percent of the bill and arrange for weekly payments until the balance is paid off.

Those whose water meters are shut off also face a $10 turn-on fee.

Curley said last year the overdue bills were "a little late" but overall the collections went well. But now the $120,000 "knocks the hell out of the budget" because the department depends soley on the collections to balance its operating budget.

The water department was set up to become a financially self-sufficient town service. If the overdue money is not paid, the account is reported as a deficit at the end of the fiscal year, June 30, and must be paid off when the department begins the next fiscal year.

Closed-door meeting questioned at school board meeting

By David A. Mittell, Jr.

Acrimonious exchange between Patricia Anne Walsh and several of her erstwhile school committee colleagues punctuated last Wednesday's school committee meeting.

The agenda called for Superintendent Eugene Crowell and several of his department heads to continue their routine presentation of the school department's proposed 1983-1984 budget for the high school.

But Chairman Diana Kornet had barely sounded her 8 p.m. gavel when Walsh rose from her front row center seat in the audience to declare that after reviewing the text of the state's open meeting law she continues to believe that the executive session held at the previous committee meeting last Monday night was illegal.

Walsh asserted that "planning budget strategy for town meeting" is not included in the seven lawful reasons for entering executive session.

Therefore, she said, she has taken the matter to Attorney General Bellotti and Norfolk County District Attorney Delahunt.

Chairman Kornet called upon Superintendent Crowell, who replied that in his opinion the committee had been justified in going into executive session by a paragraph in the law allowing an executive session "to consider the purchase of real property...if such discussions may have a detrimental effect on the negotiating position of the governmental body."

Kornet thanked Walsh for apprising the committee of her legal action. Walsh immediately rose to raise another issue: the cost of parking school buses on private land. She asserted that $320.00 per month paid to Charles Pape is too large a sum considering the cuts in school programs being entertained by the committee.

Kornet responded that she believes this a reasonable rental fee in the present market, and when the Papes retire as planned in 18 months' time, the cost of bus storage is likely to increase over what the Papes have charged.

SCHOOL FACILITIES COMMITTEE

Chairman Kornet then asked for nominations for the school facilities committee.

When Irene Brown and Dan Dormer were nominated, Committee member Martha Gjesteby objected.

"I volunteered for this," she said, "and in the past it has always been a courtesy to take a committee member who volunteered."

Kornet replied that the consensus of the present school committee is that "in order to get a cross-section we not appoint ourselves" to these posts.

She asked Gjesteby if she wished to be an ad hoc member of the school facilities committee. "No, I want to be a full member," answered Gjesteby. Brown and Dormer were elected by votes of 4-1 and 5-0 respectively.

Kornet then turned the meeting to the agenda for the evening, the budget, but Walsh immediately interrupted, saying she fully agreed with Gjesteby that in the past, members' requests to serve on such "subcommittees" have always been honored.

With apparent annoyance Kornet urged the meeting forward to the budget issue.

By the watch on the wrist of the Patriot Ledger reporter, it was 35 minutes past eight.

THE BUDGET

The committee reviewed proposed budgets in the high school for science, guidance, physical education, home economics, and athletics, all of which are essentially "level-funded" over 1982-1983.

The greatest discussion concerned the question of "user fees" for athletics. Athletic Director Clark Chatterton said that a few years back he was unalterably opposed to such fees, but given present budget constraints he now believes they are necessary.

Committee member Joseph Nedrow said that user fees are probably coming, and are permissible provided there is some mechanism for assuring that no child is deprived of athletic participation because of inability to pay.

He suggested that children legally qualifying for the free lunch be exempt from user fees.

Even on sports issues, rancor between Patricia Walsh and the committee could not be constrained. Member John Langmaid stated that since cross country costs $1,400 and serves only 15 students, consideration of its termination ought to be entertained.

Walsh objected, allowing that at least one of the 15 participants is her own offspring.

Member Richard Connelly, agitated, objected to Walsh. He said, "I have kids who play baseball, yet I'm considering dropping some baseball teams."

On a happier note, Athletic Director Chatterton announced Cohasset's boys' hockey team, representing one of the smallest schools in the league, has once again this year qualified for the state tournament.

officials takes away any incentive to devote countless hours, often at great personal sacrifice and usually with little appreciation, while conducting the busines of the town.

"I am grateful to all my friends and supporters who, through the years, have honored me with nearly 60 percent of the vote in every election against all challengers. They have asked for nothing in return except competent, honest government.

"The years that I have served as your selectman have been personally satisfying and I hope of some lasting benefit to our town. I am thankful to everyone for allowing me the privilege," said Ainslie.

In other election news, Raymond Kasperowicz of 172 South Main St. has taken papers out for a one year term on the Sewer Commission. Frank C.J. Hamilton of 244 Beechwood St. will be running for a five-year term on the Planning Board.

☐Congressman Gerry Studds has announced his area nominations for appointment to the service academies and the Merchant Marine Academy for the class entering in 1983. The names have been forwarded without a preferential listing to the academies, where the nominees will compete for final appointments.

The nominees are: Patrick J. Broderick, Buttonwood Lane, and Paul Winn, North Street to the U.S. Merchants Marine Academy, King's Point, N.Y. and Christopher Mahoney, King Street and Sean O'Connor, Woodland Drive to the U.S. Naval Academy, Annapolis, Md.

☐Laura Pompeo has been named to the Second Honors List of Archbishop Williams High School of Braintree.

☐Penelope Joan Paton, sophomore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Paton of Jerusalem Road, has been named to the Dean's List at Wheaton College for the first semester of the 1982-1983 school year.

☐Beverly Williams, New England area sales manager for Sitmar Cruises, recently earned the professional designation of Certified Travel Counselor (CTC) from the national Institute of Certified Travel Agents in Wellesley.

To receive certification, Williams had to acquire a minimum of five years travel experience and complete a two-year, graduate-level course in ethical and efficient travel agency management. She also had to pass four four-hour exams and write a travel paper.

☐Thursday, March 3, South Shore Vocational Technical High School will hold a "Tour Day." Interested parents and students are encouraged to attend and take part in a tour of facilities and meet the students. Interested juniors and seniors are invited.

☐After five generations in business, the Edward M. Fleming Gift and Hardware Shop has been sold. Mary and John Fleming were the proprietors for the past 51 years. They will continue to make Cohasset their home and will be on hand to help the new owners, the Smith family, to preserve the Fleming traditions.

☐Belated congratulations to Bob Winkler, Jr. and Tom Healy's son-in-law, for passing the bar in California. Bob and his wife Susan enjoy reading the Mariner and Cohasset news every week.

☐Town Fuel Assistance Representative of the South Shore Community Action Council, Alfred Odermatt, wishes to thank Tony Laugelle, Alco Oil Company, for his assistance in transfering oil in a recent Fuel Emergency.

☐If you haven't seen Vi Tuthill walking (at her vigorous pace) recently, it is because she is recovering from recent surgery at South Shore Hospital. Knowing her, she'll be up and about in no time, walking faster than she ever did.

☐Warren Bates, long-time resident of Cohasset and organist for the Second Congregational Church for 50 years before his retirement, celebrated his 80th birthday last week.

☐The birth rate in Cohasset is still climbing. Congratulations are in order for two families this week. Feb. 2 Thomas and Karen Coyne of 57 No. Main Street became parents of a baby boy, and Feb. 3, Kevin and Ann O'Connor of 55 Lantern Lane had a baby girl.

☐The first annual "Miss South Shore" Pageant will take place in the early spring. It is a preliminary to the Miss Massachusetts contest. Here's hoping we have several applicants. Karen Ekberg, our "Miss Cohasset" who was crowned last summer, certainly should apply; she is indeed a winner. Contestants must be between the ages of 17 and 26.

☐Torin Sweeney and Dave Rourke (CHS Class of '82), two ambitious guys, have formed their own cleaning service. "T & D Domestic Cleaners" is currently booking customers and provide total services. "Totally Dependable" is their slogan. They can be reached for estimates at 383-9179.

☐Keith and Sue Megathlin were visiting their old hometown last week. They are now residents of Portland, Maine, and they couldn't get over the snow we have. More than they do...that must be something for the record books.

☐Speaking of snow, Dr. Roger Pompeo and his wife, Ann, were supposed to be in Lake Placid last weekend for the World Cup try-outs, where he was to be one of the team doctors. It was cancelled, due to lack of snow!

A streamlined version of the school budget

By Jane Lane

Overwhelmed by the voluminous size and content of the school department's proposed fiscal 1984 budget, advisory board member Jacqueline Dormitzer has devised a more streamlined version.

Although the school department has been allotted a $3,790,161 total budget for 1983-1984, Dormitzer began her budget computations from point zero.

From that base, she added those items most necessary to maintain the quality of education in Cohasset.

In reshaping the budget, Dormitzer divided it into personnel and operating costs, subdivided into the three schools and the central administration.

She then separated the basic school needs from additional resources which she felt enhanced, but are not essential to the function of the school system.

Dormitzer, who is a member of the advisory board's school subcommittee, has sat in on several school budget sessions. It was her contention that the emphasis during those meetings was on reducing personnel, programs and dollars.

She viewed the budget from a more positive angle. Therefore, if she began at zero, she could only add things to the budget, rather than make large scale eliminations.

A third portion of her budget method was to insert comments on the individual budget items, or to suggest alternatives. This was a precise manner in which to establish budget priorities, she said.

For more than 40 hours, Dormitzer compiled this document and concluded with a basic school budget of $3,619,205.

This figure does not include the additional resources and does include all reductions listed by the school superintendent in previous school budget meetings, except for a second grade teacher.

It does not include an $18,000 sum from the activities fee, she said.

The balance of $170,956 would allow the schools to "buy back some additional resources such as teacher aides. With additional funds received by the schools, the balance would be increased to $215,636, she explained.

From that total, Dormitzer subtracted items which have been suggested for possible elimination because of declining enrollments, and personnel positions such as the business manager which could be fulfilled in another manner, she said.

From there, Dormitzer subtracted her "non-riffed resources account" of $169,076 for a total of $46,560 which could be used for capital improvements, she suggested.

She said capital improvements might be one use of the "extra money," although the school committee may prefer to use the money to finance some of the reductions mentioned in the superintendent's list of possible budget cuts.

Dormitzer noted that she would have to add on $16,000 to the balance, because the school committee's proposal to eliminate one physical education teacher and to keep the subject as an elective for grades 11 and 12, is not allowed by state law.

In addition, the school committee also decided not to reduce a guidance department computer for $5,300, so that was subtracted from Dormitzer's balance total.

"I wanted to clarify the budget in my own mind. I did not want to make unreasonable demands on the school system, but I needed to supply a factual basis for the budget for the advisory board.

"The school department presented a budget that made the education in this town look pretty bleak. I thought a different approach was necessary. By zero-basing the budget, I pared the budget down to what was really needed, and added from there," she said.

Engagement

Quilty—Roy

Mrs. Beverly Quilty of Cohasset and Mr. John Quilty of Duxbury announce the engagement of their daughter Susan Elizabeth to Peter A. Roy, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Roy of Cohasset.

Miss Quilty will graduate from Fairfield University Nursing School in May. She is planning to work in a major medical center in the Boston area. Mr. Roy attended Harvard University and is presently active in various family enterprises.

A September wedding is planned.

Notes & Comment

...As we report on the front page, Selectman Chairman Henry Ainslie has decided to retire after four three-year terms. Twelve years is a lot of service at what is oftentimes a thankless job. Mr. Ainslie's friends, of whom there are many, will miss him greatly. His enemies, of whom there are a few, may, depending on the calibre of his successor, have reason to whistle the old Joni Mitchell tune: "You don't know what you've got till it's gone!"

We would say this about Henry Ainslie. We haven't always sided with him on issues. But what are disagreements about issues among good folks? The character of the man is typified by the fact that even on weeks when we've "let him have it" on the editorial page, our reporters have found him as gracious as ever at the Wednesday night selectmen's meeting.

In short, he is a gentleman of the first order. His service has been extraordinary...how many eyes that will read these words can match his 12 years of faithful service to the town? Arthur Clark's are two such eyes...and we can't think of many more.

Mr. Ainslie, we hope we may count ourselves as among the friends who will miss you.

...Fran Johnston's letter to the editor describing the loss of his cat to three vicious dogs is one of several such unfortunate incidents that have happened of late.

We do not favor a leash law, which is a nuisance for pet owners and a bigger nuisance for town government to enforce. But if such a law is to be avoided, pet owners must start taking proper responsibility for their animals. Dogs, cats, horses and, of course, people have a right to be safe from the small number of dogs that are a public nuisance.

If owners won't restrain their dogs on their own initiative, a leash law will become necessary. Should that happen it will be one small, sad sign of the breakdown of the simpler world of days gone by. But folks and their innocent pets must be protected, and owners of nasty pets will have only themselves to blame if they force the town to enact a leash law.

...Two items juxtaposed in the "news digest" of last Thursday's Boston Globe bring to mind the way in which government officials sometimes wallow in their rhetoric while at the same time failing to comprehend their own shortcomings.

The first item reported that the deinstitutionalization of mental patients over the past few years is now threatening to "disintegrate public psychiatry." In the second item, Gov. Dukakis railed against the "regressive" policies of the Reagan administration which he blames for the homeless in Massachusetts.

Now President Reagan's policies may or may not be regressive, but its an absolute fact that irresponsible deinstitutionalization during the first Dukakis administration created a sizeable portion of our homeless.

In short, the Duke should "duke" himself before going after the president.

Kids are a different species

By Claire McDonough

The Dragon sat in a corner cursing softly.

"I cannot make Tanya's computer game work. I've pushed every button on the thing and nothing happens. When I put it down it plays music and makes rude noises at me. Tanya plays with it for hours, and every few minutes she yells, 'I won another game!' She also uses it to tell time, the day of the week and the date. I am a mature adult, I've read the directions, and I still cannot make the benighted thing do what she can."

"Of course," I told him. "After all, Tanya is seven years old. She can also do Rubik's cube, recite all of the 'Jaberwocky Song,' and open child-proof medicine bottles."

"It doesn't make sense," he growled. "I should be able to do anything Tanya can do — only better. After all, I have years of wisdom and experience behind me."

I shook my head.

"You're operating under the common but erroneous belief that kids are just like regular human beings, only smaller. Not true. They are a different species entirely."

He shot me a disbelieving glance. "I find that hard to believe. After all, I was once a child, and I have matured into a reasonable, intelligent adult. It stands to reason that I should be able to do everything a child can do, plus those things that are proper to an adult."

"Can you touch your toes?" I asked gently. "As a matter of fact, can you see your toes? Why do you always call Tanya to pick up the things you drop?

"No," I continued, "the relationship of a child to the adult he will become is akin to the relationship between an untamed savage and the civilized person he is capable of being.

"For example, take mornings. You and I know enough to sit quietly inhaling the steam from our cups of coffee until some of the caffeine has seeped into our bloodstreams. If you say anything at all, it'll be something like, 'see the Mariner's giving the selectmen what for again.'

"That statement not only doesn't require an answer, it practically precludes one. Now that's civilized."

"Kids, on the other hand, wake up buzzing and sawing the air like mosquitoes. Not only are they able to function without coffee, before they even have orange juice someone will have written 'Larry is a pig' on the bathroom mirror with toothpaste. Everything they say requires an answer. Like, 'Where are my socks?' 'What was the basis of the alliance between German, Italy and Japan prior to World War II? I have to know for social studies,' and 'How come you're pouring orange juice instead of milk on Tanya's cereal?'

"Frankly, I can't cope with any of the above questions before 6 a.m.

"And if you have any lingering doubts as to whether kids are just like us, let me ask you this: How many of them do you know who pay income taxes, worry about halitosis or take transquilizers? I rest my case."

Just then Skipper entered the room.

"Here, Skip," the Dragon said, "let's see you make this thing work."

Without a minute's hesitation, Skipper won three games of Pacman, showed the time and date, and timed a race between his dog and Breida's cat.

"Show us how to make it display the days of the week," the Dragon demanded.

Skipper studied the hand held computer for several minutes.

"I can't figure it out," he finally admitted.

I looked at the Dragon and smiled fondly.

"It looks like our little boy is growing up."

The loss of 'Big Kitty'

Letter

To the Editor:

He was only three years-old and perfectly trained. Of course, he got a little nasty and standoffish if we left him alone for any period of time but that was to be expected. He had the run of the house except for the living room but we knew he snuck in there to better view the birds from the bay window.

He really didn't have a proper name; he was always "Big Kitty." I don't think he minded the lack of proper credentials. He always came when he was called that name though I wish my wife had called him in a little lower voice fromk the back door.

Saturday, Feb. 12 was like any other Saturday though we awoke to snow covering the yard and the drieway; something in the distance that we could only imagine from the past.

My son had started to tackle the monstrous job when I arrived downstairs. I thought I would give him a little moral support and went out to cheer him on. Of course, "Big" was at my heels and jumped out to observe the high drifts and try to catch one of those elusive birds by the bird-feeder.

We returned into the house to have breakfast; leaving "Big" to his devious ways.

The next moment my wife, looking out the window, started to scream. Three dogs had "Big" on its back and were...you need not know the details though I ask you to give them some thought for a moment.

We were out the door in a second but it was too late. Though "Big" was just alive, the end was near. We gently carried him into the house and wrapped him in towels while my son and myself made a frantic attempt to clear the driveway so we could take him to the hospital. It was too late. "Big" died in my wife's arms.

You may ask, why am I writing this sad story? Well, I really don't know. I love dogs and I really can't blame them. Should I blame the three neighbors who let their dogs out? Should we have a strict leash law that might prevent something like this from happening to your dog or cat? Is it fair to the animal to be tied up all day?

I could fill this whole column on the pros and cons of the leash law. That is not my intent. I only wish to bring to your attention a sad story of a loved animal that needlessly lost its life. It really wasn't necessary. That's the shame.

I guess I am really writing this story to warn those owners of small animals to be careful of your pet. If you have thought enough to have given your pet a home and hopefully, a lot of love, then take heed of my sad story.

I wouldn't want our experience to become yours.

We "lost our friend." Don't lose yours.

Selectmen briefs...

CONSERVATION VACANCY

Selectmen postponed appointment of a Conservation Commission member for about two weeks. Selectmen have received only two applications for the commission vacancy. Anyone interested in serving on the commission should submit a resume to the board of selectmen as soon as possible. Conservation Commission chairman John Hubbard will participate in the selection of a new member.

DOG DECISION

Following a Dec. 30 hearing at which a dog owned by Thomas Greco of North Main Street was accused of running after horses and injuring a young rider, selectmen decided to have the dog permenantly restrained.

Dog Officer Richard Yokum issued a restraining order after the dog was accused by the Ronald Massa family of running after their daughter, Michelle, who was riding the horse. The horse was startled and threw the young girl. She broke her arm in the incident.

Although Greco denied his dog ran near the horse, and he did not see the young injured girl, the dog officer immediately ordered the dog be restrained on the Greco property.

In their final decision last week, selectmen supported Yokum's decision, and informed the Greco's to keep the dog within their property.

NEW TELEPHONE SYSTEM

Selectmen voted to support a $5,500 capital outlay request for a new telephone system at the town hall and the fire department. Executive secretary Mark Lanza has reviewed various systems, and proposed purchasing a central phone system which will include more extensions into the various offices.

If someone wishes to call the fire department and the line is busy, the call will be connected to another extension so no one receives a busy signal, Lanza explained.

Lanza said the system would solve the more critical needs of the town hall and fire department, and could be expanded and upgraded in the future.

Report from the state house

By State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray

DRUNK DRIVING UPDATE

Last week the Senate Committee on Post Audit and Oversight issued a report, "Driving Under in Massachusetts: The First 100 Days."

The statistics in the report pointing to the success of the new law are impressive. State Police drunk driving arrests have increased from 1,128 in FY'79 to 3,564 in FY'82 (up 251 percent). The number of arraignments for drunk driving in all the district courts is up from 28,625 in 1981 to 33,290 in 1982 (up 16.3 percent). Finally, alcohol related fatalities between dusk and dawn decreased from 629 in 1979 to 378 in 1982 (down 40 percent).

On first glance, the purpose of the law has been achieved. That purpose is to make our highways safe by cracking down on those not in condition to drive. By increasing public awareness about the harm that can be caused and the legal deterrents to driving drunk, loss or suspension of a driver's license, mandatory sentencing for repeat offenders, and excessive surcharges on insurance policies for convictions, the law appears successful.

Is the law working? Are there cracks in this crusade to increase public safety? The answer is yes to both questions. For those who have been removed from the road and for those who may think twice about driving drunk, the law works. However, there are loopholes. No longer are the Governor and Legislature on the stage of this controversy. The players are now the courts and the criminal defense bar. According to the defenders, the key problem centers around the definition of a "second offender." Chapter 373 (the drunk driving law) states:

If the defendant has been previously convicted or assigned to an alcohol education or rehabilitation program by a court of the Commonwealth because of a like violation within six years preceding the date of the Commission of the defense for which he has been convicted, the defendant shall be punished by a fine of not less than 300 nor more than 1,000 dollars and by imprisonment for not less than seven days nor more than two years, provided that the sentence imposed upon such person shall not be reduced to less than seven days...

This section has been called unconstitutional because of "double jeopardy." Some claim the law punishes one for a prior offense. Others claim that going into a rehabilitation program instead of contesting the charge was cheaper and a quieter way of disposing the case. Therefore, this participation in an alcohol rehabilitation program is not enough to qualify one as a second offender. The "Massachusetts Lawyers Weekly," November 8, 1962, went so far as to print this on DUI defenses. This seven point check list is geared to this troublesome section of the law. The Committee report deals squarely with this issue. The Committee obviously endorses the general rule favoring a strong presumption of constitutionality and hopes that the district courts grant due deference to the primary of the appellate courts in making such constitutional determination.

The report, however, gives its own interpretation of the Constitution. The committee believes that since the problem of drunk driving is so serious, that this approach of finding one a second offender is warranted. The committee believes this group should be treated more severely than one not previously charged with the offense. "In the arguments surrounding fairness (treating one who participated in a program as a first offender), one forgets that these offenders have already had the benefit of alcohol education and more than perhaps any other group have been apprised of the seriousness of the offense."

According to the report, it is the intent of the Legislature to punish more severely this "clearly defined class of offenders."

The public, the Legislature and the courts all want to get rough with drunk drivers. It is the job of the defense bar to get a clear definition of this passage. Whatever the outcome, it is apparent that Massachusetts is healthier with Chapter 373 of the Acts of 1982.

If you have any questions or ideas you would like to share, please contact me at 722-2400 or write to me at the State House, Room 134, Boston, Massachusetts 02133.

H-5000, 5001

In his first two legislative request as Governor, Michael S. Dukakis has given new meaning to the seasoned adage "old bills never die, they just become part of new bills."

The Governor's Capital Outlay Jobs Request Bill H5000, and his Housing Capital Outlay Bill H5001 are actually not original proposals. Both pieces of legislation were formulated from bills which died in the 1982 legislative session.

Taken from the FY '83 House 1 and House Ways and Means Capital Outlay request, H-5000 is this Governor's $92 million answer for providing 2,400 emergency building and construction jobs for the unemployed. Most of the projects will begin sometime this spring and have a quick turnaround time.

Governor Dukakis recently submitted to the Legislature his Capital Outlay housing package to the tune of $171.6 million. H-5001's sections regarding h housing for the elderly, low-income assistance and low-income handicapped housing were included in H-6666 of the 1982 House Ways and Means housing recommendation of $107.6 million.

The following are the major features of this current request: $66.6 million for low-income elderly housing; $40 million for housing authority assistance; $10 million for low-income handicapped housing; and $55 million for renovation and modernization of existing housing.

In addition, Governor Dukakis believes H-5001 will directly produce some 5,000 jobs in the construction trades.

Interestingly enough, while Governor Dukakis strongly believes he has discovered new problems in the Commonwealth's employment and housing areas, his proposals are directly borrowed from his arch political rival, former Governor King.

The survey

The school superintendent formulates the budget on a year-to-year basis and the school committee votes on it accordingly.

1. Do you favor:

A. Continuation of present practice of large budget reductions on a year-to-year basis? ———

B. Establishment of a five-year plan to implement major changes that would permanently reduce costs? ———

2. Assuming major cuts occur in September 1984, indicate your priorities of most desirable action "1" to least desirable action "7":

A. Close Osgood School Priority # ———

B. Lease part of the Osgood School ———

C. Lease junior high wing and realign grades 7-8 in elementary schools ———

D. Increase class size from the current 25 pupil/teacher average ———

E. Reduce programs and curricula, cut electives at the high school to a minimum and eliminate "open space" and enrichment classes at all levels. ———

F. Offset budget decreases by charging fees for sports, extra-curricular activities, arts enrichment programs and school supplies. ———

G. Other — specify ———

3. Assuming major cuts occur, do you think that the effects could be offset by:

A. Greater use of computers as both instructional and administrative aids Yes— No—

B. Cooperative classes, teachers, and programs with neighboring school systems Yes— No—

C. Use of educational and cable TV to assist the teaching staff Yes— No—

D. Curriculum changes to stress only "three R's" Yes— No—

E. Other — specify Yes— No—

4. Would you support a position at Town Meeting to use surplus revenue or free cash to decrease the school deficit? Yes— No—

5. In order to provide necessary funds to maintain the standard of Cohasset education would you vote to override Prop. 2½ at Town Meeting? Yes— No—

If you answered "Yes," please continue to questions A and B:

A. Would you attend Town Meeting and support question #5? Yes— No—

B. Would you actively work to override Prop. 2½ in Cohasset and to increase the budget for the school system? Yes— No—

Milliken Field flag

Selectmen Rocco Laugelle said the United States flag at Milliken ball field will be repaired soon. The rope along the flagpole has been cut and the flag can not be taken down until the rope is repaired. Laugelle said the problem will be alleviated with the help of some volunteers and their trucks.

FISH volunteers provide a safety net for seniors

By Moira McCarthy

There isn't a senior citizen in Cohasset that need worry about emergency transportation, thanks to Cohasset Fish.

"We provide up to 100 hours a month in driving time," said Martha Hurtig, a four-year member and current chairman of Fish. "Any kind of transportation at all that a senior needs, we give, except for emergency medical, which we leave to the ambulance for obvious reasons.

"Seniors who can do so are encouraged to use the Senior Shuttle for around town shopping, but we're more than willing to help out when the Shuttle is too difficult."

Fish membership nears 100 volunteers, most of whom are housewives. But many working men and women give up their only free day to help out.

Each volunteer is assigned one day a month to be on call, and there are two volunteers on call each day. A senior who needs transportation calls the Cohasset Fish hotline, and the hotline sends a volunteer to the senior's home.

On a day with few or no calls, a volunteer will usually visit one of the local nursing homes and bring seniors out to shop, sightsee, or simply get some fresh air.

Fish volunteers are asked to attend an annual meeting but, "We're not a strict organization," Hurtig said. "The volunteer is just asked to be there when needed."

Many of the experiences can be "uplifting." Hurtig recalled one trip when she brought a temporarily blinded woman to a doctor's appointment.

"She was so frightened, so I asked is she'd like me to stay with her (in the doctor's office). When the doctor took the bandages off, she was elated. She could see. It was a great experience to be with her."

But Fish volunteers are encouraged to remain impersonal. "For the sake of the people, we don't ask questions. If they want support, we give it. If they don't, we remain impersonal," Hurtig said. "This eliminates any uncomfortable feelings."

Fish is financed by local churches and private industries. Many times a senior who received a service will donate money, or some of their time as a way to "return the favor," Hurtig said.

"We're a subtle, quiet group. We have no big fundraisers or publicity," Hurtig said. That may seem surprising for a worldwide organization.

Fish began in England, where it was a custom to put a fish, the ancient symbol of Christianity, in a window "so that people, and especially children, would know that a sympathetic and caring person was inside," Hurtig said.

"We're thinking of putting Fish decals on volunteers' cars, just for a little exposure."

Since their start in 1974, Cohasset Fish has enjoyed a steady rise in volunteers. But this year they're worried about a drop. "With women going back to work, we're losing (volunteers) quickly. We're hoping to get some retirees or something.

"Without volunteers, Fish wouldn't work. If we don't get more people, we'll have to cut down from seven days a week to five. I'd hate to see that day," she said.

Alternative sewer plan bids narrowed to five

By Jane Lane and Patricia Anne Walsh

The sewer advisory committee has received 13 engineering proposals for an alternative sewer system, ranging from a low bid of $29,000 to a high of $146,000.

They have narrowed the search to five men, Committee chairman Charles DeSantis said.

Since the state and federal government will be funding at least 90 percent of the total costs, DeSantis said. Price is secondary to the quality of work described in the proposals.

According to the committee chairman, the state and federal government will combine to fund 90 percent of a serew facilities plan.

The state and federal government will share 94 percent of an innovative and alternative sewer plan.

Since Cohasset's project falls somewhere inbetween the two, the percentage of government funding would subsequently average out between the two figures, he said.

"But right now Cohasset is talking about a facilities plan that is going to cost about $31 million. Whether we are talking now about a proposal that will cost $29,000 or $146,000, we are still going to save $20 to $25 million," he added.

The chairman said all of the proposals answer the full scope of work requested by the committee. Since the engineering proposals will include basically the same amount of work, DeSantis said the quality of that work will be the ultimate deciding factor in recommending a company.

"If I felt the $146,000 price would do the best job for the town, I would leap right on it," he said.

Although engineering firms agree with DeSantis that something can be done about Cohasset's sewage problems, he faces two important obstacles.

DeSantis received a letter from the selectmen's Executive Secretary, Mark Lanza, limiting his access to special counsel, unless specifically approved by Town Counsel, Richard Henderson.

It is also expected that a 17-page report from the state may be received this week, which will say that the state will not fund the proposals submitted by the engineering firms.

Two engineering firms believe Cohasset's present sewer plant may be upgraded to function properly. When three out of five finalists presented their study proposals Thursday, Feb. 17, one company, LEA, estimated this would cost less than one million dollars.

Paul Guertin, senior vice president, of LEA, a firm with over 100 employees, believes their proposal may be eligible for funding because it would be more cost effective than the $13 million dollar new plant proposed by Metcalf and Eddy in 1980.

This figure will rise to $20 million by the midpoint of construction, using a seven percent increase inflation factor, he said.

LEA's alternative sewer study proposal expectation is "between $70,000 and $80,000, with a worst case estimate of $86,410. If a geohydraulic survey is required by WPC, the figure might rise to $96,410."

Goldberg Zoino, a nationally recognized expert on geology and soils, displayed infra-red aerial photographs of properties where cesspools and septic tanks with their leaching fields are distinguishable.

He said although some people believe that 90 percent of Cohasset has poor soils and ledge, he has had success in finding pockets of sand and gravel with qauifiers.

This could mean one to 50 homes may be piped, and utilizing careful capacity estimates, the groundwater will not be contaminated. He discovered one area, now used for the new Pond Street development.

LEA proposes to modify the existing sewage plant on Elm Street and estimated the cost at between $800,000 and $900,000 in 1985 dollars. Guertin says if this is done, it would not be necessary for an outfall in Cohasset Harbor by 1984, as presently mandated, because Cohasset would be meeting its discharge permit.

The most recent estimate for cost of an outfall is $4 million. Guertin proposed two new settling tanks, each 20 feet in diameter, and a sand filtration bed as well as a new chorine tank and controls.

William Montuori, former sewer commissioner, said LEA would not be allowed to do any additional construction in the marsh around the present plant.

Guertin stressed his firm is experienced in negotiating permits with state and federal agencies, and had persuaded changes for several other Massachusetts towns. "I believe we can put in two small tanks and sand filter bed in the marsh.

"However, if we can't, I can tear out the existing tanks in the present plant, which are not working properly, and put them there, Guertin continued. "It will just cost a little more." It is possible to get clean water without the sand filter bed, but LEA recommends it for improved long-range operation. These modifications will even allow for a small increased capacity in the present plant, Guertin said.

Those who oppose having work done in the marsh do not realize that the Metcalf and Eddy plan calls for replacing the present plant with a pumping station.

The construction of this pumping station will require digging up the marsh.

After the meeting, DeSantis said the pumping station will stick up high and be visible. "Further, we expect an odor may emanate from it, since it will not be continually manned," he said.

M. Anthony Lally Associates, a small firm with 15 employees, estimated their cost at $46,000 for an alternative sewage study. Lally proposed several specific modifications to the existing plant, including a sand filtration bed, which he said would "result in clean water."

Lally focused on infiltration as a problem in the present system. The plant which is rated at 72,000 gallons per day averages 50,000 gallons infiltration, he said.

Infiltration is caused by groundwater getting into the pipes, because of unauthorized sump pump and drainage connections, cracks or breaks in the pipes or joints, frequently caused by improper installation and lack of a proper gravel foundation. He said his firm could investigate any infiltration sources by using cameras. He predicted a substantial increase in plant capacity if all his recommendations were followed.

After the meeting, plant supervisor Manuel Salvador and DeSantis said they believed the 50,000 gallon figure to be a little high. "We corrected a big leak on Stockbridge St.," Salvador said. DeSantis said the latest monthly reports show a 30,000 to 40,000 gallon infiltration average.

Both men agreed infiltration is particularly severe after a heavy rain.

Anderson-Nichols' proposal for alternative sewer study places their cost at $98,000. Pio Lombardo bid 97,093 and Ward Engineering Associates big $94,391. Lombardo and Ward will explain their proposals Thursday, Feb. 24.

Anderson-Nichols, unlike LEA and Lally, did not make specific plant changes part of their presentation. "We do not have a predisposition," officials said.

They stressed their experience with sewer projects and conventional systems, as well as their familiarity with Cohasset, and experience with state grants.

Advisors are the unsung heroes...

Under advisory committee guidelines, the school committee has a $3.8 million operating budget. Increased salaries and other costs will require a minimum cut of $268,071.

"This committee has the responsibility to guide the budget proceedings and provide for a tax levy within the restrictions. This one committe has an overview of the whole town and must ensure that all departments are fairly treated," Cotton said.

"Pressure groups are a natural phenomeon and we expect each department to promote its own responsibilities. We try to make sure that no section of the town bears the brunt of spending," she said.

In a preliminary review of the town's fiscal status for next year, Cotton predicted about $300,000 may have to be pared from the budget.

The chairman told advisory committee members recently that although most department budgets have been level funded for next year, certain items which the town has no control over may cause the total budget to exceed a two and one-half percent increase.

Fixed budget items, such as health insurance, pension funds and the town's debt service, will contribute toward this estimated budget increase.

Cotton emphasized that this is a rough estimate, but in January there seemed to be about $308,401 which may have to be trimmed elsewhere in the budget to meet the state mandate of a two and one-half percent overall budget increase.

These estimates do not include the school and fire department budgets, Cotton said. Nor do they include state aid and revenue appropriations.

Although the budgets submitted to the committee for its review have been level-funded, there are numerous capitol outlay requests from many departments, she said.

A brief review of the requests indicate several of the items should be included as special articles in the town meeting warrant, and not within the annual budget, Cotton said.

Each department submitted its budget to the advisory committee with an additional separate sheet containing requests for capitol expenditures. Cotton said there are requests for things such as a $50,000 truck which would more appropriately belong in the town meeting warrant.

This is the third year of Prop. 2½. But according to Cotton, people seem to forget communities were limited to a four percent tax cap before Prop. 2½ was approved.

"In all of this, I think it has made people think hard about spending money and what priorities are," Cotton said.

What priorities are these? "It depends on who you talk to. Some people feel it is plowing of the roads, ambulance service and maintenance of the harbor. There are all different groups of people and I guess it's only natural they have their own set of priorities," she said.

Cotton would like the advisory committee's recommendations given to residents at least a week before town meeting so people have an idea of where the committee stands. "None of us feel good telling people how to vote at town meeting without first letting them read about it."

This is Cotton's sixth and last year as an advisory committee member. She has been a League of Women Voters member and manager of the Cohasset Consignment Shop.

During budget season, the committee meets twice a week, usually for three hours. The committee is divided into subcommittees which examine each department budget with department directors.

The committee is also the watchdog of the town's reserve fund which was established for any unforeseen emergencies.

Cotton said community advisory committees were originally called finance committees. But then communities decided there were other fiscal issues than the budget which needed to be examined and anlyzed before town meeting.

The state Legislature changed the format of the finance committee to advisory committee so the committee could study all aspects of town meeting.

What makes budget preparation and analysis of fiscal items for the town warrant tough is what to expect from state aid and town revenue.

Cotton said Cohasset is fortunate to have Town Accountant Bill Signorelli who is working with state officials on new accounting principles and procedures for all communities. "His knowledge of the whole area is greater than all of us. We're lucky to have him," she said.

Cotton also praised the department heads for being cooperative and preparing level-funded budgets despite rising costs.

She now has the tools for the job

By Lois Martin

There's a man in town who made wonton soup this winter.

Now on the surface that wouldn't seem to be a news grabber. But you take a person whose high cuisine has been grilled cheese paled in the microwave, and then catch him buying select pork strips, and you've found yourself an evolution.

That's one of the by-products, you know. Thirty years ago men played helpless around saucepans, Ajax and "white loads." Women used similar ploys when anyone mentioned carburetors, liability clauses and two penny nails.

PATCHES

With the implementation of the women's revolution, which has served to confuse as well as to clarify, people have been undertaking skills hitherto left to "the little woman" or "the man of the house." They were otherwise known as Signature B and Signature A respectively and respectfully on forms that bind...a lot.

Anyway, I've joined the thrill-seekers of new dimensions.

I have tools. Really I do, First time in my life. You're looking at a woman with her own hammer, her personal Phillips screwdriver as well as a more standard one, a set (I think they say set though it's one unit) of plyers and a wrench kind of thing that adjusts.

These were Christmas gifts. I'm given to understand my sister and other women have had caches of tools under the sink for a while. But I never did.

My equipment, most of it, came in what was warmly termed "a reusable vinyl pouch." I dallied with the notion of buying a sturdy belt on which to strap my pouch, like the experts do. I could stash the stuff next to the broom and the cat food in the kitchen closet, which needs a knob repaired incidentally. But I was dissuaded from the belt because it would have been nothing without a "Coors" buckle. I don't do those.

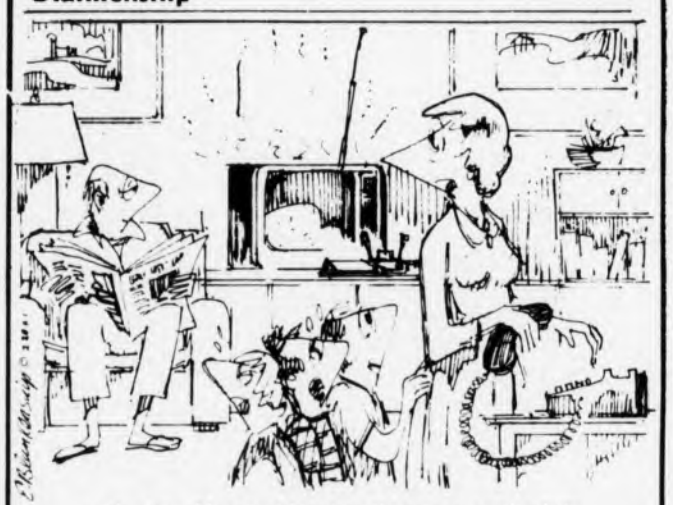
I really need my stuff. Because late last fall when darkness was all over the ground, I attempted to change the outside light bulb. I stood on a chair that I was going to hurl. And in no time at all I had dismantled the light fixture, dropped two attachments in the mud and lost an important piece inside where I couldn't reach. So I left it to the elements which rained on the new bulb, shattering it in the ensuing cold.

Recently, I had at the dryer. I'd feared my lint had settled in the bottom of that tube thing that twirls from the dryer outside. New screwdriver in hand I undid the back, unscrewed the little clamp and was thrilled with lots of lint to be removed.

But the phone rang in the midst of my project, leaving me absent-minded as I put three screws somewhere. It was a viable learning experience: don't wear high heels when doing that 'cause you have farther to bend down to do the screws; don't wear a black wool skirt; don't put the clamp back on the hose first because then the back part of the dryer won't go on.

In spite of pleas from fellow residents of the home to discontinue my improvements on the property, I continued on to the bathroom where I secured, again using standard screwdriver, the loose handles on the shower door.

Flushed with success I determined to redo the bathroom. I took all my tools there with me. Naturally I'd need the hammer to smash something. I really like taking stuff off if I can find the unscrewers. It's reversing the process that's hard.



My first ceiling paint job was a breeze. One stroke of that roller and the paint was uniformly applied to my face and hair.

The next victory came after I found a hole around the showerhead underneath the wallpaper. I put water in some grainy powder that was in a bag down cellar. Voila. With a new $1 putty knife, which deserves only negative invectives, I slathered over the hole.

Ultimately the room was completed. One might say there's too much green on the ceiling which should be all white. But those are minor criticisms. It's freshly done and I did it.

Just wish I could find the other bolt for the toilet facility to keep it securely on the foundation.

'Dangerous Corner' nears opening curtain

By David Wadsworth

The Cohasset Dramatic Club's winter production of J.B. Priestley's English mystery "Dangerous Corner" will be held at the Cohasset Town Hall, from Thursday, March 3 to Saturday, March 5. Curtain time is 8 p.m. Tickets will be available at the door.

Thursday, opening night, senior citizens are invited to attend at no charge, and students will be admitted at a discount.

"What a snug little group you are," comments the play's visiting novelist as the curtain opens on a party of her publishers and their wives. Missing from the party, but present in everyone's thoughts, is the host's amusing and charming brother, Martin, who shot himself the previous year...or did he?

"Dangerous Corner's" three acts reveal not only who-dun-it, but also several skeletons in the closet of this "snug little group."

Playwright Priestley explores with insight and skill the emotions of people trapped by the social conventions of their times — the 1930's — until they skid into self-revelation following a dangerous turn in the conversation.

"Dangerous Corner's" director, Judy Holmes, comments bout Priestley's best known play. "Priestley is a master craftsman, weaving together the threads of suspense and well-drawn characters into a drama that intrigues and satisfies. He adds an unexpected twist at the end, which we hope early audiences will not reveal to those attending a later performance."

It is, of course, near the end of the play that audiences may experience the slightly disturbing feeling of "deja vue," the thought of having witnessed events once before at another time.

Modern audiences may detect Priestley's evoking of today's concept of alternative streams of time so popular in speculative science fiction. After it is all over, those watching the play may never be quite certain about what actually happened on that particular evening in "Dangerous Corner's" English country cottage, among the deceased's friends.

The dividing line between fact and fantasy can be fine at best, and in "Dangerous Corner" the playwright creates a sleight of hand giving rise to the thought that, in this case, there may be no dividing line at all.

Production Manager for "Dangerous Corner" is Betty Miessner of Scituate. The cast of characters will be portrayed by Sydney Browne, Joe Coyle, Andrea Dassori, Sarah deLima, Derek Holmes, Carl Slotnick and Jane Turner; lighting effects, Charles Wheelwright of Cohasset; set designer, Wayne Miessner; and stage manager, Elizabeth Eaton.

AFS PARTY

Thursday, Feb. 17, the AFS Club had a combination "Hello, Goodbye" party for Holly Grant, recently returned from Uraguay, and for Becky Lovering and Michael Laitta who left for Costa Rica and Argentina, respectively, February 20.

STUDENTS GUESTS OF MURRAY AT STATE HOUSE

Seven Cohasset High School sophomores recently visited the State House as guests of Rep. Mary Jeannette Murray. During the next four months approximately 24 juniors will also be given a full-day tour, and in the process receive a first-hand look at state government in action. Murray's assistant, Nancy O'Toole is assisting in this project.

Sophomores who made the trip were: Kathy Griffith, John Colocousis, Lisa Brown, Staci Stobart, Maureen Costello, Lauren Haynes, Chris Crowley, and Liz Riley.

Edward Sheehan, chairman of the high school social studies department, is coordinating this educational undertaking.

JR. HIGH GIRLS BASKETBALL

Clare Brady, coach of the jr. high girls basketball team, is proud that the girls finished the season with a perfect record of 7-0.

The girls defeated Rockland, Marshfield, Abington, and South Shore Vo Tech during the season. They averaged 28 points per game, while allowing only 18 points per game against them.

The leading scorer on the team was Sarah Dickerman who had 37 points; followed by Cindy Spooner, 27; Maria Cahill, 26; and Maureen Farren, 25.

Leading the team with strong rebounding was Melissa Shea, Caitlin Staunton, Debbie Dormer, Diane Convery, Kate McNeill and Betsy Wilson.

The team also received strong contributions from Karin Anglin, Susan Riley, Anne McKenna, Liz O'Leary, Margir Murphy, Kerry Kirkendall, Susan O'Donnell, and Lisa Gallagher.

The team is congratulated for its fine season.

MARKS TO CONDUCT SR. SEMSBA

Bryan Marks, choral director at Cohasset Jr.-Sr. High School, was selected to conduct this year's Sr. High SEMSBA (Southeast Mass. School Bandmasters Association) Festival Chorus, March 18-20. The chorus is comprised of select singers from 27 area communities. This year's chorus numbers 154.

The site of the Festival is Walpole High School. The March 20 concert features three performing groups, band, chorus and orchestra.

Marks is a cum laude graduate of Eastern Nazarene College with a B.S. degree in music education. He is music director of the Brockton Harmoneers Barbershop Chorus and also sings in a quartet.

Marks teaches a wide variety of music classes including guitar, music appreciation and electronic music. He recently produced the CHS production of "Grease."

MUNDHENK GUEST SPEAKER

January 10 Dr. Charles Mundhenk, a privately practicing psychologist in Cohassset, was the guest speaker at a peer counseling training class at the high school.

Dr. Mundhenk discussed theories of counseling, and focused on the psychoanalytic, behaviorist and humanistic schools. He also discussed the kinds of issues he deals with in a therapeutic setting, his approach and methodology in helping his patients, and reinforced the importance of listening, responding and problem-solving skills.

Dr. Mundhenk and his associate, Dr. Bernard O'Brien, also showed a series of films depicting three therapists treating the same patient. These films were valuable as the students were able to see practicing therapists using their own type of therapy in a real counseling situation.

The Peer Counselor program was implemented at the high school this year. Its membership consists of 14 juniors and seniors. The students have been and continue to be in training to work with junior high students individually and in small groups around academic (via tutoring) and personal issues. They also assist in the orientation of new students.

James Chiccino, assistant vice president of Quincy Savings Bank, spoke to the business management class Feb. 16.

His topics included a discussion of the divisions of the company, areas of customer service and an analysis of how loans are made. He described the management structure of the bank and its functions as they relate to the consumer.

Two other speakers from the Chamber of Commerce Speakers' Bureau have given presentations this year. Andrew Walsh, owner of Walsh's Restaurant in Quincy, spoke on restaurant management and the growth of his business from a proprietorship to a partnership, to a corporation.

Nina Belsan of Belsan Associates in Scituate spoke to the students on advertising. Her presentation included graphics of advertising design and layout.

Shakespeare's plays still a great hit

By Laura Doherty

The Boston Shakespeare Company came to Cohasset Jan. 4 and parents and students discovered and rediscovered the attraction the "Great Bard" has had through the ages.

Cindy Gold, Robert Michael Kane, Eric Menyuk and Molly Noble, four young and very able actors from the Company helped create a Shakespeare that was lively and relevant to all audiences. Without scenery and very little in the way of props, they easily made transitions from the Romance of "Romeo and Juliet" to the comedy of "The Taming of the Shrew," from the tragedy of "Macbeth" to the mischief of "A Midsummer Night's Dream."

During the day, the program was performed for junior and senior high school students. That evening, tickets were sold to the community. As a result of ticket sales and a grant from the Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities, performances for the students were without charge.

Members of the Arts Enrichment Committee of the Cohasset Parent School Organization, sponsor for the event, are enthusiastic about its success. "We managed to provide an enriching experience for both students and the community and at the same time raised the money necessary to cover our expenses," said one committee member after the performance.

Health talk scheduled March 1

The League of Women Voters of Cohasset will discuss health care delivery March 1 and 3. These meetings conclude the League's three-year study of health care; consensus will be taken on questions raised during the study.

The March 1 meeting will be held at Betty Van Slyck's 33 Black Rock Rd., 7:30 p.m., and the March 3 meeting will be at Debbie Cook's, 281 King St., 9:15 a.m.

People interested in attending are asked to contact Betty Van Slyck at 383-1561. Babysitting will be provided at the March 3 meeting, and reservations may be made by contacting Marie Caristi, 383-6937.

"The past two years have found me with little time to cultivate an active social life due to a rapid growth in my career and professional life. Since my day is long work-wise and my job is demanding – there is little time left to seek the social life that I would like. That's where Together came in. I respected their honesty, integrity and professionalism from the very start. As a result, I have met several people with the same interests and goals in life – not to mention the great times we have shared. Indeed, Together has filled a very important part of my life."

"I'm a busy professional and both my career and social life are important to me. I don't go to bars and I don't date people I work with. For me, Together has been an economical and time-saving way of meeting other compatible single adults. The counselors are sincerely concerned with introducing me to the kind of person I would like to meet. I recommend this service highly."

By Joan Pinkham

Once upon a time, long before there were supermarkets, people would awaken to each day confident in the knowledge that out on the porch a quart glass bottle of fresh milk had been left for breakfast. Seven days a week a person known as the "milkman" began his workday at 3 a.m. by reporting to the dairy barn to load cases of milk onto his wagon, hitch up a team of horses and start off on his daily rounds. Back in the 20's, the iceman, baker, S.S. Pierce and local grocery also made home deliveries, either when the housewife signalled them to stop by putting a card in the front window, or phoned in her grocery order. I'm not sure whether there was such a thing as a fish peddler here on the South Shore, but even in the dead of winter now, your nearest market has the makings for Phyllis Carlson's

BAKED FISH CHOWDER

2 lbs. cod or haddock
4 potatoes, peeled and sliced (Phyll dices hers)
A few chopped celery leaves
1 bay leaf
2½ tsp. salt
4 whole cloves
1 clove garlic peeled and crushed (Phyll uses powder to taste)
3 onions sliced (Phyll cuts them in pieces, not chopped)
1/2 c. butter or margarine
1/4 tsp. each dried dill seed, white pepper
1/2 c. dry white wine, or dry vermouth
2 c. boiling water
2 c. light cream (Phyll uses milk)

Put all except cream into large casserole. Cover and bake at 375 degrees for 1½ hrs. Heat cream to scalding and add to chowder. Stir to break up fish. Serve with garnish of chopped fresh dill or parsley.

Now food is delivered to the supermarket and not to our door and we have to trot out to get our foodstuffs. At least fresh produce is now available year 'round and so there's no reason why we can't enjoy this

WINTER FRUIT SALAD

1½ T sugar
2¼ tsp. all-purpose flour
1/4 tsp. dry mustard
1/8 tsp. salt, dash of red pepper
1 egg yolk, slightly beaten
1/2 c. milk
2¼ tsp. butter
1 T vinegar
4 Delicious apples, cored and chopped
1 (8 oz.) can crushed pineapple, drained
3/4 c. chopped pecans
Lettuce leaves

Combine first 5 ingredients in top of double boiler; stir in egg yolk and milk. Add butter. Bring water to a boil; reduce heat to low and cook until butter melts, stirring constantly. Gradually add vinegar; cook, stirring constantly, until mixture is thickened and smooth. Cool completely. Stir dressing into fruit and pecans. Chill and serve on lettuce. Serves 6 to 8.

Sometimes when the cookie jar is empty it's easier to fill it with homemade cookies than to drive to the nearest store. In less time than it takes to gather up your coat and back the car out of the garage you can make Jan Wisland's

CHEWY CHEESECAKE COOKIES

1/2 c. butter softened
1 (3 oz. pkg.) cream cheese, softened
1 c. sugar
1 c. all-purpose flour
1/2 c. chopped pecans

Cream butter and cream cheese; gradually add sugar, beating until light and fluffy. Add flour and beat well. Stir in chopped pecans. Shape dough into 1" balls; place 2" apart on ungreased cookie sheets. Dip bottom of a glass in water and gently press each cookie until 2" in diameter. Bake at 375 degrees for 12 to 13 min. Cool 2 to 3 min. on cookie sheets before removing to cooling rack. Yield: 2½ doz.

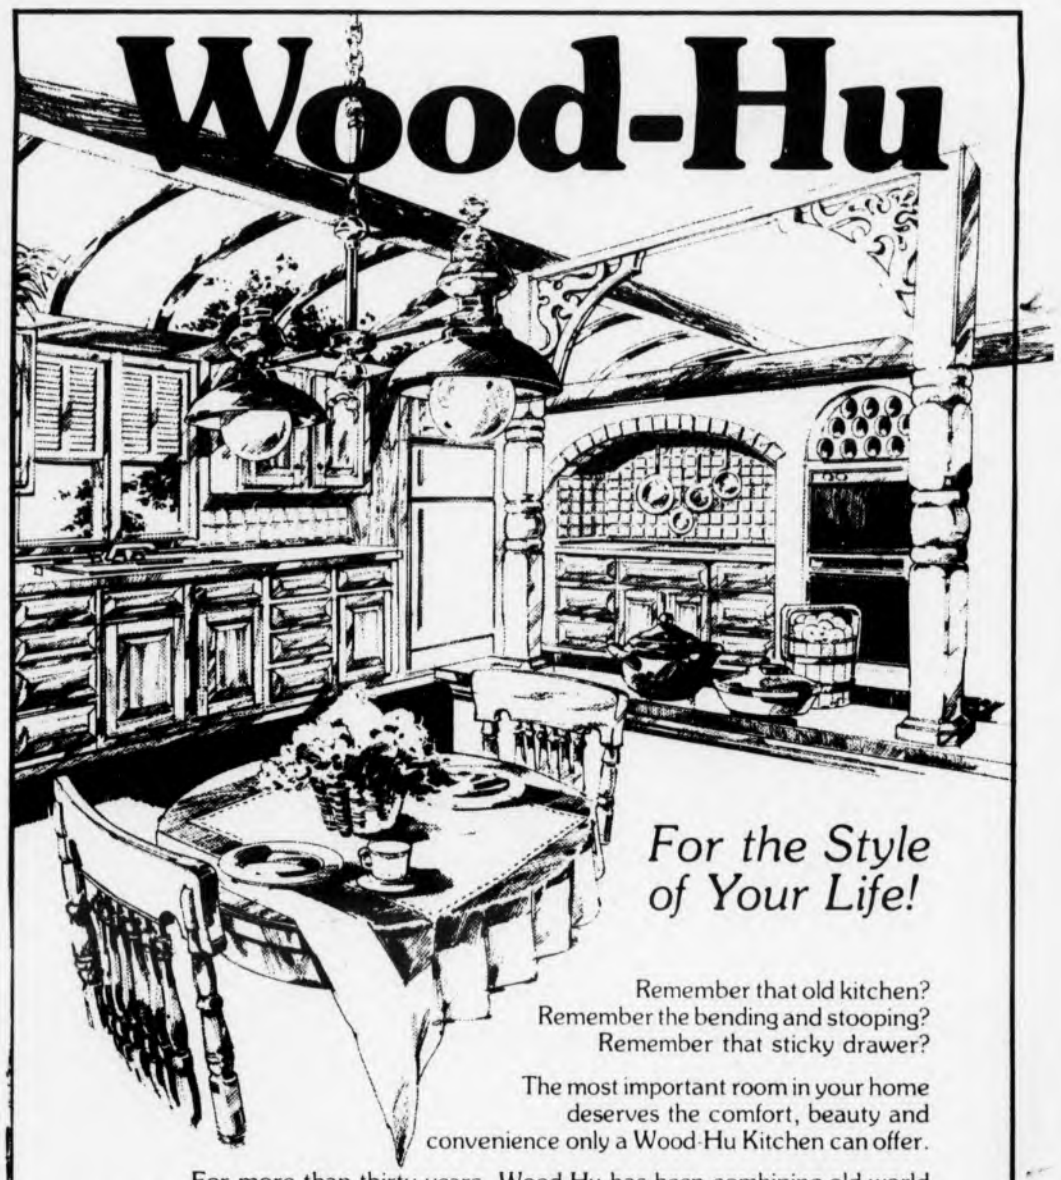
LIGHT UP YOUR LIFE



by Christopher O'Halloran

As any good cook can attest, working in a dimly lit kitchen is more tiresome than the most trying of recipes. By lighting with flourescent fixtures, adequate levels of light can be achieved at a minimal energy consumption.

Color Brite lamps by Sylvania give a warm, pleasing light that blends well with incandescent light. On the average, a flourescent bulb puts out three times the wattage that it burns, and it will last five times as long as an incandescent bulb. Flourescent lighting is now available in many attractive styles and sizes to blend with any decor.

Flagstaff Lighting Showroom at NORTH RIVER ELECTRIC SUPPLY, 433 Washington St., Norwell carries a wide variety of these fixtures at discounts of up to 40% off. We're open Mon-Sat 9-5 and Thurs 9-9. We accept MC & VISA. Phone us at 659-2272 or 749-5524

Candidate's corner...

Mitman files papers

This week Cliff Mitman filed nomination papers for a three-year term on the Board of Selectmen, having obtained the maximum number of signatures for his nomination.

"I'm gratified by the support received from townspeople for my candidacy," Mitman says, "and I look forward to meeting and talking with as many voters as possible during the next seven weeks."

Mitman's campaign will stress the need for the expanded Board of Selectmen to provide stronger executive leadership in town affairs.

"It is necessary for the selectmen to be involved in a myriad of day-to-day administrative details," Mitman said.

"Yet they also must keep abreast of the planning and decisions of other elected boards. The selectmen's real long-term impact should be in the overall direction of town activities — assuring quality appointments, providing guidance and review for standing and special committees, and coordinating town departments."

Mitman believes that Cohasset residents should be confident that selectmen are helping to shape the future of Cohasset.

THe following coffees have been scheduled for voters to meet Cliff Mitman and discuss the issues facing Cohasset. Anyone interested in attending or helping with a meeting should call Eileen Corbett, 383-6467 or one of the people listed below.

Wednesday, March 2, 8 p.m. Steve and Linda Geary, 55 Hillsdale Dr., 383-1071.

Sunday, March 6, 5-7 p.m. Paul and Denise Desmond, 51 Ledgewood Drive, 383-6446. Neighborhood coffee on Fernway, 3-5 p.m. Hostesses Marjorie Dougherty and Marsha Murphy, 383-9702 or 383-0839.

Monday, March 7, Terry and Laura Atherton, 34 Clay Spring Road, 383-1860.

Wednesday, March 9, 8 p.m. Peggy Soltesz and Patsy Rabstejnek, 3 Border Street, 383-0527.

Sunday, March 13, 4-6 p.m. Jim and Mary Richards, 703 Jerusalem Road, 383-6435; 7-9 p.m. Mr. and Mrs. John McNamara, 45 Fairoaks Lane, 383-6945; co-hosts John and Robin Suhrbier.

Monday, March 14, 8 p.m. Jim and Laurie Hamilton, 298 King St., 383-9834.

Tuesday, March 15, 8 p.m. Jack and Carol Martin and Phil and Joan Shockman, 45 N. Main St., 383-6577.

Monday, March 21, 8 p.m. Rob and Pam Henry, 50 Lantern Lane, 383-0071.

DeSantis will run

Charles DeSantis of 260 Forest Avenue has taken out nomination papers for a three-year term on the Sewer Commission.

DeSantis was the proponent of Article 4 voted and approved at Special Town Meeting Nov. 29. He is serving as a temporary Sewer Commissioner and is Chairman of the Selectman's Advisory Committee for Alternative Sewers.

DeSantis believes that the Town was not afforded the opportunity to thoroughly investigate alternative solutions to a large central sewer system when faced with a violation of its discharge permit in 1979.

Article 4 directs the Town to develop a supplementary Facilities Plan to the Metcalf & Eddy study which will explore alternatives to central sewers and the rehabilitation of the present plant to conform to its discharge permit.

This supplementary plan will put the Town in full compliance with federal law and ensure federal funding for future construction.

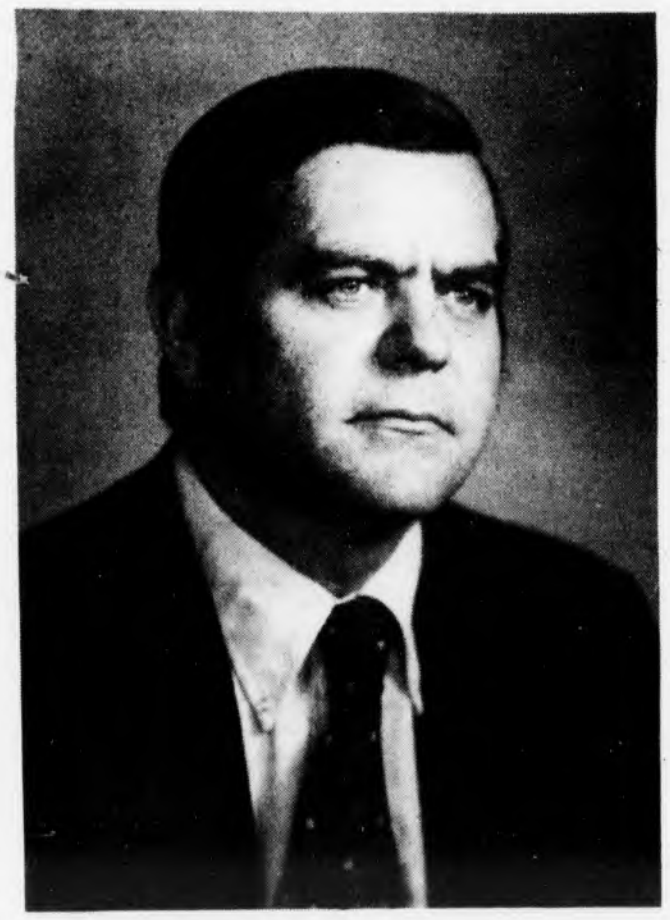
DeSantis feels that the present Metcalf & Eddy plan will create an intolerable burden on homeowners, and will severaly debilitate the community's schools and services.

DeSantis grew up in Cohasset, graduated from the U.S. Naval Academy in 1964, and served six years as a Naval aviator. He is employed by Eastern Airlines and returned to Cohasset with his wife and four children in 1979.

Volungis, a school candidate

Judith Volungis of 234 Forest Avenue is a candidate for the three-year term on the Cohasset School Committee.

A resident of Cohasset for several years, she has been an active volunteer in many organizations. "I'm running because I feel I have the time, experience and the background to make a valuable contribution."



Volungis has two children in the Cohasset school system. She has served on the Osgood School Communication Council for four years, during which she was community resource chairman. She was also a room mother, a classroom volunteer and a field trip chaperone.

This year, she represented the Deer Hill School on the Arts Enrichment Committee of the Cohasset Parent School Organization.

Volungis has long been interested in education. With a B.A. in government from the University of Massachusetts, Amherst, and a M.Ed. in elementary education from Worcester State College and several post graduate courses, she taught for nine years before leaving to have children. She has also trained student teachers from several colleges.

A one-time vice president of the Cohasset Community Center, Volungis served as program director and also as fundraising chairman. One special event which she chaired was the Octoberfest.

"With the present restraints of Prop. 2½ and declining enrollment, I fell the importance of making the right financial decisions," she said recently. For the past six years, Judy has managed the accounting and recordkeeping for her husband's company, Air Source Express. Currently, she is treasurer for the Community Garden Club of Cohasset.

Kern seeks re-election

Barbara Kern, chairman of the Cohasset Board of Health and president of the Massachusetts Association of Health Boards announced that she is running for re-election to the board of health.

In her present term she has been active in bringing about the closure and expansion of the Cedar Street landfill. She is interested in bringing her knowledge to the further implementation of these plans in the years ahead.

She has worked on the formation of a hazardous materials committee which will report to the board of health. If re-elected she will work with this group to make it an effective arm of the board and an asset to Cohasset.

Further, as President of the Massachusetts Association of Health Board she brings to Cohasset the unique knowledge and contacts gained in a statewide organization. This is particularly beneficial to Cohasset in that she is aware of problems and solutions in other areas which could save time and money here.

Barbara has lived in Cohasset for 25 years and hopes the voters will give her the opportunity to continue serving the town.

BOYS BASKETBALL

Cohasset improved its record to 9-11 with two wins over Hull and Holbrook. Against Hull, freshman guard Tony Bogarty sank a 25-foot jump shot with two seconds left to break a 41-41 tie and enable the Skippers to win the game, 43-41.

Bogarty finished with 19 points, had five assists, stole the ball five times and grabbed four rebounds. His teammate David Barcomb grabbed 11 rebounds and scored six points.

Guard Jack Maloney and forward Dan Anderson helped out with a fine defensive game while forward Philip Bernstein helped out on the board and Peter Caruso contributed down the stretch with six important points.

In Wednesday's game, Cohasset beat Holbrook 47-46 as Jack Maloney connected for 12 points. Tony Bogarty and David Barcomb added eight points each for the Skippers.

GIRLS BASKETBALL

The girls upped their impressive record to 13-7 with two key wins over Hull and Holbrook.

Against Hull, Gia Barressi scored 24 points and pulled down eight rebounds.

Teammate Beverly Mullaney added 10 points and grabbed 10 rebounds.

Point guard Janet DiGirolamo played a fine all-round game and contributed seven points, while Carla Lucas scored six points and collected 12 rebounds.

In an 18-point win over Holbrook, Beverly Mullaney poured in 27 points and added 13 rebounds. Gia Barresi added 15 points and Alana O'Brien played a strong defensive game.

HOCKEY

The Skippers boosted their record to 11-3-2 with a 10-2 win over Sandwich. Don O'Neill scored four goals and assisted on two others. Teammate Dan Bowen scored three goals and collected five assists for an eight-point game.

Other scorers were John Casey who scored two goals and collected four assists and Jeff O'Neill chipped in with a goal and three assists.

Rich Evans notched a pair of assists for Cohasset and junior Mike McNeil played well in his first start in goal.

THANK YOU, St. Jude, for helping Eddie and Tony. Novena to St. Jude: Oh Holy St. Jude Apostle and Martyr, great in virtue and rich in miracles, near Kinsman of Jesus Christ, faithful intercessor of all who invoke your special patronage in time of need, to you I have recourse from the depths of my heart and humbly beg to whom God has given such great power to come to my assistance. Help me in my present and urgent petition. In return I promise to make your name known and cause you to be invoked. Say three Our Fathers, three Hail Marys and three Glorias. Publication must be promised. St. Jude pray for us and all who invoke your aid. Amen. This must be said for nine consecutive days. This Novena has never been known to fail. (2/23)

THANK YOU, St. Jude. Please continue to listen to my prayers. C.A.B. (2/23)

John Creamer is the heart of Osgood...anytime

By Patricia Anne Walsh

The office desk of Osgood School Principal, John Creamer, was covered Monday, Feb. 14, with valentines.

"Dear Mr. Creamer, You are sweet just like me...I love you" were thoughts included in a lengthy hand written message from Trisha Hunt, a second grade student.

A heart-shaped gingerbread cookie decorated with red frosting reading "Mr. Creamer" lay on a napkin in the midst of the cards and notes, which the children, on their own initiative, surprise Creamer with each year.

Creamer, of Scituate, has developed and matured from the young man who began his career thirty years ago. Now he argues with the school committee in favor of more teachers, and classes as small as 15 or 17 youngsters.

Many people believe the warm friendly atmosphere of the Osgood is due in no small measure to Principal Creamer being the "heart" of the school.

He is protective of the children in a kindly, helpful way. Many a youngster, dashing heedlessly around a corner, headed for a group of unsuspecting children, has been surprised to feel the gentle hands of the principal on his shoulders, and heard his voice saying "Easy now — not so fast."

Many adult visitors, new to the town, are surprised by the openness of the school. Invariably, visitors are invited "to look in on" two or three classes before they leave.

One may be invited to see a Collaborative class with severely handicapped children being instructed on special equipment. The "open classroom," which was formerly a gigantic auditorium where town meetings were held, in recent years has had 50 to 90 children assigned there. The teachers use the power of quiet voices to attain complete control. A visitor may watch the students any time, without interrupting their concentration on the varied activities taking place at the same time in the room.

Creamer will transfer a child who is experiencing personality conflicts or difficulties to another teacher's classroom. He has been known to be persuaded to make a change by an unhappy child, who dragged his mother along for the conference with the principal, but did all the talking himself — an event that shows something about the relationship between the children and principal.

Creamer, 55, has spent 30 years as an educator. Born in Boston, he grew up in Dorchester where he attended St. Mark's parochial elementary school and public high school.

He remembers when all the children were required to attend 9 a.m. Sunday Masses. These were always celebrated by the Pastor, who gave long sermons which frequently did not have much relevance for youngsters.

He also remembers the corporal punishments dealt out by the nuns.

However, he recalls fondly that they instilled in him "some values" which he still respects.

After serving two years in the army in Germany, he enrolled in the state college system for his B.A.

Creamer began teaching in 1953 in a Boston Special Education Center for junior high school students. He found the work challenging, but added, "maybe it did lead to a foundation of patience."

He came to Cohasset in 1954 and taught Grade 6 at the Osgood School. Grades K through 6 were all housed at the Osgood School at that time. During the 1954-55 school year, the Deer Hill School was built.

It opened in the fall of 1955, and Grades 4, 5 and 6 moved there. Helen Hudson was principal of both schools and Creamer was appointed assistant principal as well as a Grade 6 teacher.

When Hudson became ill, he served as principal of both schools. She did not return the following year, and he was appointed principal of the Deer Hill School, leading the school for the next 14 years, until he was appointed to his present position as Osgood Principal.

When he was acting principal in 1955-56 he was in charge of three schools, since the Kindergarten was housed at the First Parish house.

In 1963 eight rooms were added to the twelve room Deer Hill School, and for the next several years that school housed well over 500 students, while he was principal.

Creamer acknowledges he is an advocate of small classes. In small classes "the teacher can be more responsive to the children. There is more opportunity for youngsters to learn the next piece of information, or get questions answered. However, in the face of the present fiscal restraints," he added, "you have to measure that against a lot of other factors."

Concern for expenses has also affected "educational exploration and innovative goals, which were fashionable not long ago."

He said there is merit in the pattern of the "Middle School Concept" of grouping grades 6, 7 and 8. "K-5 can be workable, but separation of Grades 6, 7 and 8 from the high school may be desired.

"Working with young children is a joy," he said. "At this age children are open, genuine, and caring. Discipline is not a major issue."

He sees the difficulties experienced by children from one parent families as an increasing problem. "Just the other day, I noticed that one half of the children in one classroom fell into that category, due to separation or divorce." He feels that these children need to be serviced with some sort of counseling.

Creamer lives with his wife, Janet, and five children on the Driftway, Scituate, adjacent to a nine-hole golf course.

Creamer enjoys golf, but said he is not an active golfer. He keeps busy in the summer "working around the house, and I enjoy gardening a lot. I used to spend a lot of time on the beach, but find I spend less time there as I get older," he said.

Two of his children, Paula, age 16, and Lisa, 18, are nieces of his wife, whom they added to the family when their parents died seven years ago.

Tracy, 21, attends Newbury Jr. College, and works as a waitress and hostess at the Union Oyster House to help pay her tuition. Susan, 24, is a commercial artist, who plans to be married next August. John, Jr. is Assistant Manager of the Hilton Inn in Merrimac, N.H.

Principal Jack Creamer listens to student at Osgood School.

New School budget tops $3.8 million

Despite the elimination of the school business manager, and a grade six teacher at Deer Hill, the school committee will submit a proposed school budget of $3,873,109 for next year.

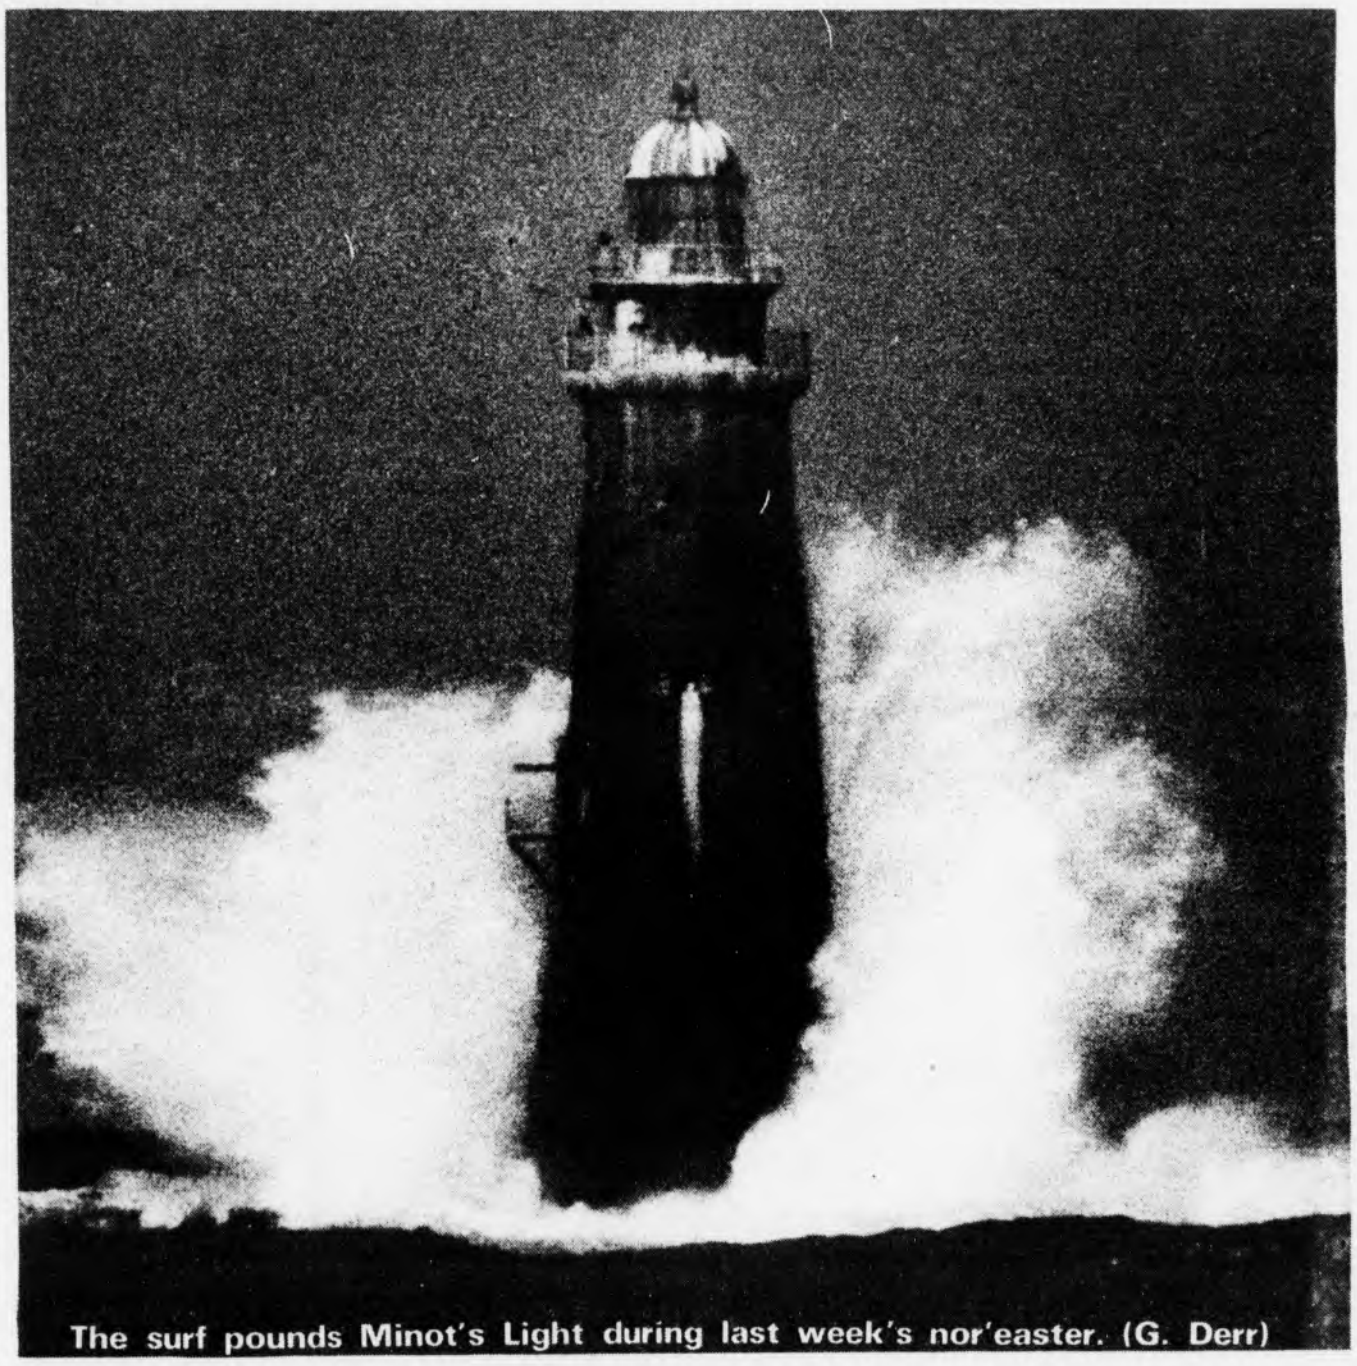
That amount is $82,948 greater than the sum allocated for the schools by the advisory committee for fiscal 1983.

The committee approved several budget reductions proposed Monday night by Supt. Eugene Crowell. Yet, the proposed budget remained larger than the $3,790,161 earmarked for the schools by the advisory committee.

The public hearing on the proposed school budget will be held Monday, March 14 at 8 p.m. at the high school home economics room.

The school committee will submit a letter with the proposed budget which will explain that, hopefully, there will be a $50,000 "surplus" at the end of this year which may be returned to the town coffers or utilized to "buy back" certain materials such as fuel oil for the schools next year.

Optimistically, there will be $50,000 in a deferred spending status at the conclusion of this year because of the mild heating season and the attrition of personnel in 1982-1983.



Martha Gjesteby was the sole school committee member to object to the over-allocated school budget. She did not have enough time to study the proposed budget reductions suggested by the superintendent. Gjesteby insisted the committee submit the same budget total as recommended by the advisory committee.

Gjesteby said that at least $40,000 more could be cut from the utilities account because of declining costs, along with several other reductions. Supt. Crowell disagreed that the utilities could be reduced further.

Among the items approved for reduction were: a total of $124,111 from the all-district account, including $65,000 from the utilities account. A $7,738 high school special education aide; and $36,097 for the business manager account.

Those administrative duties are now being performed by Supt. Crowell, in conjunction with Administrative Assistant Stephen Hart, and the school principals. Supt. Crowell siad the current

Planners consider adult entertainment zone

Planning Board members are divided over whether zoning should control the establishment of adult bookstores and theaters in Cohasset.

Members Daniel Cotton and Patrick Plante want an article brought before the town meeting in April, but Barbara Power and L. Christine Bassett are opposed. John O'Toole, the fifth member of the board was out of town when the vote was taken last week.

After problems with an adult bookstore recently surfaced in Stoughton, the legislature quickly approved Chapter 603, "Zoning-Adult Entertainment-Obscenity".

It says: "Zoning ordinances or by-laws may provide for special permit authorizing the establishment of adult bookstores or adult motion picture theatres as hereafter defined."

"Such zoning ordinance or by-law may state the specific improvements or locations of proposed uses for which such permit may be granted and may provide that the proposed use be a specific distance from any district designated by zoning ordinance or by

Cushing Plaza manager angry over video brouhaha

By Jane Lane

The manager of Cushing Plaza is angry about the negative publicity generated from a proposal to locate a video game room at the Rte. 3A location.

He said he had never heard about such a proposal, and would have blocked any attempt to locate an arcade within the shopping center.

Joseph Quinn, plaza manager, said he was upset that local newspapers printed stories about the video game room proposal without first contacting a representative of the Cushing Plaza.

Quinn said he never met either of the applicants, and added that if they had mentioned opening an arcade within the plaza he would have refused such an offer.

According to the director of management and development of the Cushing Plaza, had he known the two men, Myron Cohen of Randolph and Harvey Siteman of Raynham, were going to selectmen with a proposal, "we would have immediately put the issue to rest by telling reporters that there would be no game room or arcade at Cushing Plaza. There would never have been a 'story' in the first place," Quinn said.

Last week, selectmen denied the license proposal to operate a video arcade, saying it was inconsistent with their unofficial policy that video game centers are not compatible with the community.

No formal application was filed by the two businessmen. They simply wanted to "test the waters" to see if such a proposal would gain approval from the board of selectmen, Cohen said.

Since selectmen denied the proposal, Cohen said he and Siteman have scrapped all plans to develop either a video game room or a video-computer retail sales store in Cohasset.

Cohen also admitted it was a mistake not to contact Quinn first before going to selectmen with a detailed proposal.

In the meantime, a policy detailing the "town's opposition to licensing the number of video games in an arcade situation" will be drafted by Executive Secretary Mark Lanza. The board was scheduled to review the policy this week.

Quinn said although Siteman and Cohen are probably "upstanding businessmen," the pair had no authorization from him to seek a license for a game room at the plaza. He said he would consider allowing a video retail store in the plaza, but would never agree to an arcade within the area.

According to Quinn, "We do feel that something should be done to provide recreation opportunities for the youth of the area but do not feel that that is our role or responsibility at the shopping center."

The plaza manager added that he would attend the selectmen's meeting March 2 to "update" the planned development of Cushing Plaza.

Last week, Quinn announced that The Corner Meat Shop would be opening a store in the plaza by March 15. At that time, Quinn said there are also plans to upgrade the parking and lighting at the plaza.

McKinnon office hours

A member of State Senator Allan McKinnon's staff will be available at Cohasset Town Hall, March 30 at 8:00 p.m.

If this is not convenient, constituents may phone Senator McKinnon's office at 722-1646 and arrange a mutually convenient time and place.

Murray supports monorail

Once more there is a move in favor of a state study whether monorail service can be constructed along the Southeast Expressway.

Cohasset State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray emphasized the need for public transit on the South Shore and told a legislative committee monorail seems to be the fastest and most efficient mode of service.

The bill, filed by former Rep. Philip Johnson of Norwell, was rejected by the state Transportation Secretary a few years ago.

Flemmings to be feted

The merchants of Cohasset cordially invite the public to attend a party in honor of John and Mary Fleming Sunday, March 13th from 4 to 6 p.m. at the Lothrop House, Summer Street, Cohasset.

Total sewer price $31.7M

Sewer Commission member Charles DeSantis said that according to Metcalf and Eddy, a three-phase central sewer project by that firm would cost the town a total of $31.7 million.

That cost would include a three-phase project to be completed in a 20-year period. The $31.7 million project would include the design engineering costs and the cost for the individual home hook-ups to the system.

The $13.7 million figure which is used frequently includes the costs for the first phase of the sewer project now under construction.

According to Metcalf and Eddy, about 52 percent of the town would be included in the facilities plan (at 1982 figures) at a total cost of $31.7 million, DeSantis said.

That is why DeSantis said a supplemental facilities plan would save the town about $20 to $25 million, according to the proposals submitted to the sewer advisory committee for an alternative sewer plan.

Planners propose windmills

Planners have also proposed an article to permit windmills. A hearing on it will be Wednesday, March 2, at 43 Elm. Planning Board member Daniel Cotton said that since windmills have been known to blow over in high winds, this article will restrict their placement to "the height of the windmill plus 20 feet" from any structure.

Wharf expansion

Selectman Rocco Laugelle said about 10 or 12 commercial fishermen don't feel the $450,000 planned Government Island wharf expansion is the answer to the pier problems.

Laugelle said although the fishermen have no alternative plans, they don't feel the expansion will solve the inadequate space to load and unload their vessels at the Government Island wharf.

Harbormaster Harry Ritter will complete a survey to see how the majority of commercial fisherman feel about the expansion project. The Harbor Study Committee will also investigate the matter, Laugelle said.

Laugelle said about 10 or 12 fishermen approached him to explain why they did not support an expansion of the pier. He said the harbor committee was not informed of the opinion, although the members have said they will completely cooperate in a survey of the local fishermen.

Last week, selectmen met with the committee and the project design engineers, Anderson-Nichols Co. of Boston. At that time, Laugelle said the local fishermen said they did not feel the project would help improve their industry.

Although the project has been discussed for "a couple of years," Laugelle said this was the first time a number of fishermen expressed to him any displeasure regarding the project. "It is my understanding that only two or three of the local commercial fishermen feel the project is really the answer," he said.

Harbormaster Ritter said a Coastal Zone Management study many years ago revealed that improvements at the wharf were the priority of the commercial fishermen.

Project engineer Bill Robinson said the proposed improvements would include an all-tide, deepwater granite pier. Tie-up space would be increased so that eight vessels could dock at once. Currently, only one or two vessels may dock at the wharf. A 150-foot extension would be built to the northeast of the end of the existing pier, he added.

There are two possible sources of funding, Robinson said, including a direct grant from the state's land and water conservation fund or a proposed state bond issue which would grant towns 50 percent funding for improvement of fish piers.

Beach & landfill stickers

The recreation commission will issue beach and landfill stickers, beginning this spring. There will be several policy revisions when the commission begins the new duty which was transferred from the jurisdiction of the police department.

Stickers will be issued from May 23 through July 16 at the commission's town hall office. Stickers will not be sold on May 30 and July 4.

The stickers may be purchased Monday through Thursday from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. and Saturday from 9 a.m. to noon. No stickers will be issued on Sunday.

A resident will pay $10 for the first permit and $4 for a replacement. Residents 65 and older will pay $4 for a sticker. Permits will be issued to match the registration of the resident's motor vehicle.

Stickers will be payable by check.

A special permit will be issued to residents who do not own a vehicle. All rules and regulations will remain the same as a vehicle owner.

No guest permits will be issued. It will be the responsibility of the host resident to transport guests to the beach.

Non-resident Cohasset business owners who want a permit must have a vehicle registered through the business and in Cohasset; one permit per business vehicle will be issued at the resident rate.

Arrangements will be made on an individual basis, based on agreement of need for beach permits for hotels and motels.

There will be a fine of $20 for all violators.

Recreation Director Jack Worley will discuss the regulations with the board of health and the Sandy Beach Association. Selectmen were expected to vote on the revised rules at this week's meeting.

Harbor Comm. meeting

The March meeting of the Cohasset Harbor Committee will be a special open meeting and will be held in Cohasset's Rotary Hall across from the fire station Thursday, March 3, at 8 p.m.

The main item on the agenda will be to give the fishermen who operate from Cohasset Harbor an opportunity to be heard on whether the town should proceed with the plan to expand the pier on Government Island. All fishermen, including those on the waiting list for a mooring, are urged to attend.

Ellis named chairman

At a bi-annual meeting of the Cohasset Conservation Trust, Chester Ellis, Jr. of Tower lane was elected the new chairman to serve for an undetermined period. Ellis replaces Charles Fink, who served the trust as chairman for the past five years.

The Cohasset Conservation Trust, comprised of six residents, is a non-profit "Trust," under state charter, to pursue local conservation objectives.

These objectives, according to Mr. Ellis, are the restoration and replacement of suitable property, usually received as a tax deductable gift, under a conservation trust to prevent further development; to provide the management and legal defense of that property and to foster and finance, if necessary, conservation projects which, in the opinion of the trustees, warrant such action.

Major properties in Cohasset which presently are owned and managed by the Trust are the Salt House, Bates Wharf, and Bassings Beach.

LIGHT UP YOUR LIFE
by Lee Leavitt

There seems to be some confusion since we named the showroom at NORTH RIVER ELECTRIC SUPPLY

We have one of the finest and largest showrooms on the South Shore and it deserved a name of its own. Flagstaff Lighting Showroom will have a new Flag in the very near future to help you find the best display of lamps and fixtures in the area.

The Sewell Family still owns and operates North River Electric Supply and Flagstaff Lighting Showroom at 433 Washington Street, Norwell.

Monday-Saturday 9-5,
Thursday 9-9.
We accept MC and VISA.

Planners consider adult entertainment zone...

law for any residential use or from any other adult bookstore or adult motion picture theatre or from any establishment under the provisions of section 12 of Ch. 138."

This new law defines"adult book store" as an establishment having a substantial or significant portion of its stock in trade, books, magazines, and other matter, which are distinguished or characterized by their emphasis depicting, describing, or relating to sexual conduct or sexual excitement. "Adult motion picture theatres" are defined having the same relationship to sexual conduct.

After the vote, planners Cotton and Plante asked permission to put their proposed article before town counsel. Since Power is out of town for a week, and Bassett has an unlisted telephone, the Mariner was unable to reach the two for comment.

However, according to Plante and Cotton, Power opposed Cohasset being one of the first communities to try such zoning restrictions under the new legislation, because challenges might cause the town financial and legal difficulties. Cotton and Plante on the other hand feel their proposal may give the town some protection.

Cotton and Plante say their proposed article would limit such "adult" entertainment to a business district (not commercial or industrial) and 400 to 500 feet away from residential districts.

Town Counsel, Richard Henderson, will advise them as to exact wording.

Hearings are necessary Cotton said under the new law, within 65 days after an application is filed.

Last week the selectmen voted to ask Executive Secretary Mark Lanza to draw up a policy restricting any increase of video games allowed in town. However no mention was made of pornographic or adult video games, which are presently on the market.

The selectmen's action was taken after Myren Cohen of Randolph and Harvey Siteman of Raynham proposed to open a coin-operated video arcade at Cushing Plaza. The arcade was opposed by Nancy and William Clapp who wrote a letter and presented selectmen a petition signed by 168 voters in opposition.

The Clapps' letter criticizes the present policy "designed to keep video centers away from liquor serving establishments (as) not a strong enough ban." They wrote that at meetings on health education, they had heard similar problems other South Shore towns have with these centers.

"The centers bring more drug and alcohol problems into an area as well as loitering of large groups and the harrassment of younger children who go near the centers ... Cushing Plaza already has a drug and alcohol problem with youth hanging around there."

Atlantic City tour

The Cohasset Recreation Department is accepting telephone registrations until Monday, March 7, for an Atlantic City tour April 8-10.

The cost of the trip is $199 per person based on single occupancy and $149 based on double and triple occupancy. The price includes round-trip motor coach transportation, refreshments enroute, three days/two nights accommodations at the Deauville Hotel in Atlantic City, a Las Vegas style Revue Show, $30 in coins, all taxes and luggage handling and a tour director.

Call the Recreation office at 383-6791.

Fish chowder luncheon

A fish chowder luncheon will be held on World Day of Prayer, Friday, March 4 from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Beechwood Congregational Church, 53 Church Street, Cohasset.

The menu consists of chowder, crackers, pickles, coffee, tea and dessert. The public is welcome.

School budget tops $3.8 million...

system functioned extremely smoothly and the personnel involved are willing to continue.

A total of $8,301 was reduced from the Joseph Osgood School budget, including a $7,810 clerk-aide. The committee refused to eliminate a grade two instructor or a custodian.

A total of $25,931 was cut from the Deer Hill School budget which included a layoff of a grade six teacher at an estimated salary of $20,000.

The committee questioned, but did not vote, whether a grade five or another grade six teacher should be reduced, along with $5,500 for the gifted program. The committee also voted not to eliminate one custodial position.

At the high school, the committee voted to reduce $38,398 from the proposed budget. The reductions would include a $2,000 cut for a part-time librarian, and one-half of an English position, for a total reduction of about $11,000; $7,000 in the athletic transportation account, and $5,000 from the system-wide athletic account.

Supt. Crowell said that no sports programs will be eliminated next year. All sports which were held last year will be included in this year's budget, he added.

A secretary, at a salary of $8,284 will be reduced from the high school account. Committee member John Langmaid also suggested cutting $3,500 from the high school guidance program which may be funded through Block Grant funds.

Total reductions amounted to $82,948.

The budget reduction list which was proposed by Supt. Crowell, but not recommended by him, totaled $325,262.

At the beginning of the budget session, Supt. Crowell noted that $10,000 would have to be added to the personnel section of the transportation budget. He said that if the school department decided to lease the school buses from a private firm, it would cost about $40,000-$50,000 more per year. He suggested that at least for one more year, the school department continue its present bus maintenance and storage system with Pape Repairs.

Supt. Crowell also noted that $3,000 had to be added to the substitute teacher account, and $2,118 towards a stipend for the health education coordinator.

Elections officially underway

Cohasset's town election will spotlight one contest for the selectmen's seat and a ballot question asking voters to return the police chief's position to Civil Service.

Originally the race for the new five-member board selectmen featured contests between three candidates for a one-year term.

But Theodore Ford decided against running and did not return nomination papers. Friday was the last day for returning papers to the town clerk's office.

In addition, Selectmen Chairman Henry Ainslie announced last week he would not seek re-election.

These two recent announcements leave only one of the three openings for the board contested. Former Police Chief John DeBassio and Diane Sullivan are running for the one-year term on the board.

Personnel Board Chairman Clifford Mitman Jr. and former school committee member Frank England are running unopposed for the two, three-year terms on the board.

The other highlight of the election will be the Civil Service ballot question. Sgt. Richard Barrow, one of the ballot sponsors, submitted the question along with 274 signatures of support.

Asst. Town Clerk Fran Marks said the signatures must be certified to ensure the question will be placed on the April 9 ballot.

Barrow told the Mariner earlier the ballot question is not directed at Joseph Kealey. Kealey was chosen chief by selectmen and is negotiating a contract. Barrow said those who support the ballot question feel the best way to get the most qualified person is through the state Civil Service examination.

Cohasset dropped Civil Service selection in 1978 and chose a special task force committee to recommend a police chief to selectmen, now the appointing authority for selection of the police chief.

In other election races, three candidates are vying for two three-year terms on the school committee. They are Judith Volungis, current board chairman Diana Kornet and board member John F. Langmaid III.

Edward Guild is opposing current Sewer Commissioner Maxwell Pounder for a one-year term on the commission. Although he announced intentions last week, Raymond Kasperowicz did not return nomination papers. Sewer Commissioner Charles DeSantis is unopposed for a three-year term.

Health Board Chairman Barbara Kern is opposed by Laurence Mitchell for a three-year term on the board.

Robert Sturdy and Frank C.J. Hamilton are seeking a five-year term on the planning board and two candidates contending for a three-year term on the board of water commission are Anthony Fasciano and Peter Pratt. Paul Laugelle did not return nomination papers.

Lucia Woods, Barbara Power and Richard Dabrowski are unopposed for three-year terms as trustees of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

Unopposed are Brian Wilkin for a three-year term for assessors and Richard Barrow for a five-year term on the recreation commission.

Town Clerk Charles Marks has issued a set of rules about the election.

Every nomination paper must contain the written acceptance of the candidates and must be filed with the Town Clerk on or before 5 p.m., Friday, March 11.

Following the election, all candidates are required to submit campaign finance statements even if no money is involved.

The Board of Registrars of Voters will be in session Tuesday, March 1, from 7:30 to 9 p.m. at Town Hall; Saturday, March 12, from noon to 8 p.m.; and Monday, March 14, from 8:30 a.m. to 10 p.m. (Last day to register.)

These sessions are for registering voters for the election and Town Meeting to be held April 2 and the town election April 9; for certification of names on nominating papers; and receiving evidence of the qualifications of persons claiming the right to vote and for correcting the list of voters.

around town

☐Ann Davis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Davis of Sohier Street, was in the spotlight at a recent brownie meeting. Troop #4550, led by Carol Wyman and Gail Convery and made up of first graders, decided to make a book for Ann of all the things that are the girls' favorite things in Cohasset.

The Davis family moved to Cohasset in December and the girls thought it would be a great way to welcome Ann. Who knows better what a first grader would like but another first grader. The troop made two copies, one to give to Pat O'Connor (our Welcome Wagon representative) so that other new children in Cohasset could benefit from their knowledge of things to love in our town.

Bruce Cameron

☐Bruce Cameron has been named a first vice president and regional sales manager for E.F. Hutton's Northeast region.

Cameron joined Hutton in 1969 as an account executive in the Boston office and became an assistant manager and regional tax shelter director two years later. He became manager of the Chestnut Hill office in 1978, a vice president of the firm in 1979, and in 1982 became manager of the Boston office.

Cameron graduated from Boston University, where he earned a bachelor's degree in mathematics. He is a member of the board of directors of the South Shore Playhouse Associates. He lives in Cohasset with his wife, Lois, and their sons, Jamie and Jason.

☐Bernard Caughey, Jr., of Pond St., received a 3.75 qualitative point average last semester at Norwich University and was placed on the Dean's List for outstanding academic achievement.

A 1979 graduate of Cohasset High School, Caughey did a year of post graduate studies at Cheshire Academy in Cheshire, Conn.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Caughey.

☐Dr. and Mrs. Rustam DeVitre of Sohier Street announce the birth of their daughter, Adrina, Wednesday, February 16 at St. Margaret's Hospital, Boston. Grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Shahinian of Oradell, New Jersey, and Mr. and Mrs. K. DeVitre of Bombay, India.

☐Corey DeSantis and Kerry Zaloga were honored last week at the Brockton Art Museum for winning a conservation poster contest.

The contest, "Saving Emergy in a Student's World," was sponsored by Eastern Edison Co. in cooperation with electric utilities throughout Mass. and the Mass. Association of School Committees. The contest was presented to "encourage the students to become more energy conscious consumers at school, at home and at play."

Jacob Powell, Joshua Stevenson, and Jay Rattenbury were other fourth grade winners.

☐Sunday, March 6, the Community Center holds a benefit from 12 to 5 p.m. (at the Center). Amandana Design, a small designing outfit, will sell hand-knit sweaters. The public is invited and proceeds go toward the nursery school program.

☐Liz and Jeff Bates have added a new member to their family. Melissa MacGregor Bates was born February 3, and now makes her home with her family at 53 Highland Ave. They are a bit concerned about sibling rivalry, however; their dog isn't sure he likes Melissa getting all of the attention.

☐Mr. and Mrs. John Winters have certainly had their share of illnesses this winter. It is good to know that they are both recuperating nicely and looking forward to a beautiful spring.

☐Channel 7 made a mistake when interviewing Kristin Harris last week. Janet Langhart said she was from Scituate, a grave error indeed. Kristen graduated from CHS last year and did most of her skating at Cohasset Winter Garden. She is now a member of the chorus line with Walt Disney's Great Ice Odyssey Show which is touring the country.

Kristen spent many hours skating each day to achieve her present position. She said she is proud of her town, and misses it more than she ever thought she would.

☐Bob Pape is a patient at Mass. General Hospital with strict deadlines for his doctors to get him back to the picture of health before the town meeting and election.

☐John Colocousis has been busy lately. He was a student guest at the State House along with six of his classmates. He was able to see state government in action as the guest of Rep. Mary Jeannette Murray. Last week, John traveled to California for February vacation where he had a marvelous time.

☐Chris Laugelle's knee operation is behind him and he is looking forward to going home. He will surely have lots of company, so make a phone call before going over.

Should schools be charged for water/sewer?

During Monday night's school budget session, committee member Richard Conley said the school department is unfairly charged for services such as water and sewerage.

Conley said he talked with officials from the state Department of Education who explained that services to the schools such as water and sewerage and a groundskeeper for the athletic fields, may be charged to the town, and not be included in the school budget.

He estimated that about $15,000 could be taken from the school budget from these areas. He did not suggest that the money be replaced within the town's share of the fiscal 1983 funds, but he asked why the schools were "being picked on for $15,000" when other town departments, such as the town hall, receive water and sewer at no cost.

The issue, he explained, is that the school department is charged with many items that are not charged to other town departments.

Advisory committee member Jacqueline Dormitzer answered that the school department is not charged for many items which the town covers in its share of the available funds.

Hundreds of thousands of dollars are not charged separately to the school budget for such costs as snow removal, health insurance, the South Shore Regional School District and the disposal system. She said the school committee must not neglect the fact the town absorbs many school-related costs.

Committee chairman Diana Kornet suggested that a rivalry, or a "we versus they" situation not be instigated because of a "bookkeeping" procedure.

But she added that the schools were told to level-fund their entire budget although other town departments received more allowance for personnel raises.

Supt. Crowell said it was simply a matter of taking from one pocket and giving to another, although this was the only school system he had ever known which was charged for services such as water and sewer.

State says no, no, no to alternatives

By Patricia Anne Walsh

Cohasset's sewer plant operator Manuel Salvador and other residents have petitioned selectmen to support an article rescinding a November special town meeting article vote to seek alternative sewer system solutions.

The proposed article came this week after the state refused to finance a study of suggested alternative sewer plans. The letter was presented to selectmen after a sewer advisory meeting last week when a regionalization plan with Hull was proposed by an engineering firm.

Meanwhile, two firms agree that for $5,000 and $10,000 they can supply data to oppose the state's refusal to fund an engineering study for alternative solutions to the Metcalf and Eddy Central Sewer plan.

Pio Lombardo of Lombardo and Associates said he would work "to keep the door open" for less than $5,000. An official from Ward Engineering Associates said for $10,000 he could give results with 100 percent certainty.

A letter from Assistant Attorney General Anne Rogers, said: "We have concluded that the material submitted does not show that the solution the (Sewer Advisory) Committee is striving for is feasible, and that the change in direction posed by the study would cause unacceptable delays in preventing further pollution of James Brook and in bring the existing plant into compliance with its permit under the state and federal Clean Waters Acts."

The letter added that although 70 septic systems were approved in Cohasset in the last three years, only four were in Phase I area, ten in Phase II area, 20 in phase III area, and 40 were outside all proposed sewer phases.

"That 34 lots in the area to be sewered were approved for on-lot disposal does not show that the 1,455 remaining developed lots and several hundred undeveloped lots in those areas are suitable for on-lot systems." State officials questioned where septage would go, and "what would be done about the existing plant, which is consistently over capacity now?"

Rogers said that in the Veterans, Hillside and Route 3A areas the high density of development makes the required space for sewer alternatives limited.

Her 16-page letter concluded that for all the above reasons, "I decline to renegotiate the terms of the Agreement for Judgment to allow time for a new study, and the Division will not agree to fund such a study."

The Sewer Advisory Committee will select three semi-finalists, and then a finalist among the five engineering firms who bid from $46,000 to $98,000 to present a proposal for an Alternative Sewage Plan for the town.

However, there is now no financing available for that work. They can either persuade or sue the state, apply for federal funds or be financed by the town.

The committee does have $10,000 which it may commit to an engineering firm to gather sufficient data on alternatives to persuade the state.

Lombardo, who bid $97,093 for a full scale study of alternatives, stressed that for a small town, sewage is the second largest expense after schools. He discussed his work in Woodstock, N.Y. which

One decorating and design problem that has persisted for years among married couples concerns the bedroom. Men usually tend to shy away from feminine frills while women generally oppose industrial carpeting. The solution obviously lies in compromise. If the husband prefers a large, comfortable chair, he should be able to have it. However, he should be amenable to having it upholstered in a fabric that his wive will like. A bedroom which is jumbled with too many patterns, styles and colors should be avoinded at all costs. Your designer or deocration will choose a simple, insistent color scheme that accommodates both tastes. The result will be unified and visually organized.

Decorating a bedroom depends entirely on the personality, lifestyle and preferences of the people who live there. Do you need new wallpaper, paind, hardware, blinds, shades? BOUND BROOK PAINT & HARDWARE can help you and we know you'll appreciate our friendly, helpful staff. Our prices are pretty likeable too! You will find us at 763 Country Way, N.Scituate where we are open Mon-Wed 8-6, Thurs & Fri 8-8:30, Sat 8-5 or phone 545-3624. Master Card and Visa welcomed.

DECORATING TIP
Newly marrieds should concern themselves with quality, not quantity, when decorating a new home.

Living in the country is even better than it used to be. Lots of new comforts have been added—as you'll soon see when you visit The Meadows in Hingham.

This fine group of attached single family homes offers the spaciousness and fine construction of yesteryear with conveniences grandma never even contemplated. There are kitchens with sunny breakfast bays . . . lots of fireplaces . . . vaulted and tray ceilings . . . large private courtyards . . . 2-car garages . . . swimming pool, whirlpool, tennis courts and a clubhouse. The location, on wildflower-strewn meadows in the lovely town of Hingham, is idyllic.

Two and three bedroom homes range from $155,000 to $210,000 during our opening period. The furnished models are open every day from 9 to 5. Take Exit 14 from Route 3 and follow Route 228 toward Hingham four miles, turn right on Free Street one mile to our entrance. Call (617) 740-1500 for an appointment.

Adult zones

Sometimes laws the intent of which is to restrict have the very opposite effect: they permit. This is so because when such laws are written to provide an "outer limit" to the activity that is sought to be restricted, the limit created is so broad that the practical effect of the theoretically restrictive law is to define free license as it had not been defined before.

If the above sounds like "poly-sci" babble, let's get down to a particular as it directly affects our quality of life. The outcry last year over the opening of a largely pornographic bookstore in Randolph produced a new law that allows a community to restrict adult bookstores and theatres to zones which are a specific distance from both residential areas and other adult bookstores.

As we report on the front page, planning board members Daniel Cotton and Patrick Plante want to set up such a zone in Cohasset by action at town meeting in April. We presume their intent is to put Cohasset out in front of the pack of communities with action to prevent adult stores from opening just anywhere.

We strongly believe that such action would have exactly the opposite effect: it would notify those who would open such stores that Cohasset's regulatory ordinance is in place. They would correctly assume, we believe, that doing adult book business would be an easier proposition in Cohasset than in a community that had not simplified matters by defining its adult book zone.

Whether or not you approve of the product being peddled, what you must remember is that adult book and movie peddlers are businessmen. They want to make a profit and they don't want to spend their time and money haggling with zoning boards and litigating with town counsels.

Therefore, when they eye a region with the intent of opening an outlet for their product, they are sure to follow the path of least resistance. If they open an outlet in a community with no ordinance in place they run the probable risk of confronting an ordinance in the future that puts their place of business outside the adult bookstore zone.

From the book seller's point of view it makes far more sense to locate in a community that has already defined its adult zone. That's the reason we believe early action by Cohasset on such a zone would simply grease the skids for a product that is offensive to many of our citizens.

So what should Cohasset do? Answer: nothing. Let some other community be the first to try the new. Hope that such a community will provide saturation of what is a very limited market.

Meanwhile we ought to be prepared for a "knock on our door." The planning board ought to have in mind where it would and would not locate adult bookstores, for if someone does get serious about opening a store here, courts have ruled that the right to do so exists.

But we should delay actually putting an ordinance in effect just as long as we can. We should wait for the "knock," we shouldn't invite it. We should do so so that any practical businessman knows that opening an adult bookstore in Cohasset will entail delay and probable expense.

NEWS ITEM – Cohasset: Proposal for 45 game video arcade at Cushing Plaza unanimously rejected by selectmen. Input of merchants, police officials, concerned citizens and interest of area shoppers considered. Popular family-oriented shopping center enjoying prospect of 'soon-to-open exciting new stores' says plaza director

"...They turned down that video game thing. Is it all right to write a fan letter to selectmen...?"

By Claire McDonough

McDONOUGH'S LAW: an adolescent or unmarried male will display athletic prowess in inverse ratio to his ability to perform simple household chores.

Take Jay. He's into S.C.U.B.A. He can remain underwater for incredible lengths of time in his pursuit of the wonders of the deep. Why does the sight of a sink filled with soapy water and dirty dishes reduce him to a state of bumbling incompetence?

Or Patrick. He lifts weights. Pat can spend hours bench-pressing (whatever that is), pumping iron and doing other complicated muscle building exercises. He has, I'll admit, developed some pretty impressive muscles. Under no circumstances, however, are they to be used carrying firewood or mowing lawns.

Larry is an outdoorsman. Like many a frontiersman before him, he can enter a wilderness with his faithful dog, a sleeping bag, a jack knife and a canteen of water and survive. In all fairness, I should point out that the five cans of water-packed tuna, one large jar of peanut butter, six cans of beef stew and/or corned beef hash and large loaf of bread may have something to do with his ability to withstand this three-hour ordeal. Nevertheless, he does survive. Why then, does he find it impossible, on a rainy day, to get the garbage from the kitchen to the garage?

Skipper is the most impressive demonstration of McDonough's Law of all. A hockey stick gives the appearance of being a natural appendage. A broom stick gives him splinters. He can cross a soccer or football field with the grace of a gazelle. If he attempts to mop the kitchen floor he slips on the soapy water, cuts his forehead open on the edge of the counter and requires an immediate trip to South Shore Hospital. He can wrestle with individuals twice his size. He either pins them, or gets up from the mat smiling bravely and saying, "Merely a flesh wound. I've had worse." If his brother shoves him in the hallway, the shock to his sytem renders him incapable of lifting a duster for at least a week.

For several years I have questioned this situation only to be solemnly assured by my male offspring that their pursuit of athletic excellence leaves them, if not too grand, then certainly too exhausted for such mundane activities as raking leaves.

Well, it may have taken me a while, but I think I have a solution. If all the mothers of boys in the country can get together we can do it. We'll have household chores made an Olympic Event.

I can't wait for the day when Skip is in training for bedmaking, Larry covets a gold medal in dusting, Patrick spends every waking hour developing his car washing skills and Jay aspires to glory as an Olympic dishwasher.

Cushing Plaza management never contacted

Letters

To the Editor:

With regard to the recent article (Wed., Feb. 23) in the Cohasset Mariner, Joseph Quinn, Director of Management and Development at the new Cushing Plaza, responded with the following statements:

1. We were never contacted by the newspapers (Mariner or Ledger) regarding their stories in order to obtain a statement on our position as to whether or not we would consider or allow a "game" room at Cushing Plaza. Had we known about this, we would have immediately put the issue to rest by telling reporters that there would be no game room or arcade at the Cushing Plaza. There would never have been a "story" in the first place.

2. We do not and never have planned to allow a video game room to operate at Cushing Plaza.

3. We never authorized nor were we aware that Video Connection or any of their representatives were going to meet with Cohasset Selectmen to obtain an approval for a video game room or "arcade" at the Plaza. This is by no means a reflection on the people from Video Connection. Our sources tell us that they are fine and upstanding businessmen. We would be happy to consider one of their computer or game retail stores.

4. Upon hearing about this issue of a Game room "proposed" for Cushing Plaza and reading the Wed., Feb. 23 article in the Cohasset Mariner, we immediately called the Chairman of Selectmen, Mr. Ainslie, and the publisher of the Mariner and informed them that we knew nothing of this "application" to the Selectmen and that we would never have authorized it had we been contacted. We were not aware of the Patriot Ledger articles until Thursday, Feb. 24 at which time we contacted the editor to protest the articles and the fact that no reporter had made any attempt to contact us. We also outlined to the Ledger that we were not aware of this "proposal."

5. Mr. Dadekian and I have worked conscientiously to attract quality shops to the new Cushing Plaza and are proud that since early in 1981 we have added Cohasset Travel, Rte. 3A Medical Center, Johnny Appleseed's, Medi-Mart, Dr. Edward Donnelly, Atty. John Ridge, and The Corner Meat Shop to our tenant list.

In addition, many quality existing tenants have either exercised options to continue their tenancy here or have written new leases with us. We do not believe that either we nor they deserve to have "artificial" negative publicity or stories written about Cushing Plaza. We intend, as we stated many times before, to make the new Cushing Plaza an even nicer place to shop and will continue to upgrade the environment and add quality tenants.

6. None of the above is meant to be in any way a negative reflection on the Video Connection. We are sure that they are quality business people too. We just do not want a "video arcade" at Cushing Plaza.

7. We do feel that something should be done to provide recreation opportunities for the youth of the area but do not feel that that is our role or responsibility at the shopping center.

8. We appreciate the responsiveness of the newspapers once we brought this to their attention and we appreciate the opportunity they have given us to "reply" to their stories.

Walsh trips School Committee

(The following is a copy of a letter to the state Attorney General. Ed.)

Dear Attorney General Bellotti:

I am writing to notify you of an executive session of the Cohasset School Committee, which occurred Monday evening, February 14, 1983, which I believe to be a violation of the Open Meeting Law, and to ask you to bring civil suit.

On Monday, Feb. 14, in the vicinity of 11 p.m. it was:

"Moved by Mr. Conley, seconded by Mr. Nedrow, to go into Executive Session for purpose of budget strategy of an informational nature which could be detrimental to the formation of our budget if it were made public."

During the discussion which followed, and before the vote, I raised my hand, was recognized by the School Committee Chairman, Diana Kornet, and said that I believed "discussion of budget strategy" was not a valid reason to go into Executive Session.

Superintendent of Schools, Eugene Crowell, who had requested the Executive Session, said he wanted to discuss some information with the members of the School Committee, and it "would save him making five 'phone calls.' "

Despite my objection, the Cohasset School Committee then voted 5-0 in favor of going into the Executive Session. The members of the School Committee who so voted are: Diana Kornet, John Langmaid III, Richard Conley, Joseph Nedrow and Martha Gjesteby.

I am enclosing a copy of the Mariner newspaper article written by Donna Cogliano, which states "the school committee met in closed session to discuss the budget strategy. Patricia Walsh questioned the move to executive session saying that budget strategy talk should be held in open session." Donna Cogliano, who was present and reported the meeting, has since changed jobs, and is now employed by the Patriot Ledger of Quincy as their Hull correspondent. Please note that she gives no other reason than "budget strategy."

At their next meeting two days later, Wednesday, February 16, I informed the School Committee that I had telephoned your office that day. I read them the open meeting law, as reported by the Patriot Ledger. Crowell then claimed that they had gone into Executive Session to "consider the purchase, exchange, lease or value of real property, which might have a detrimental effect on the town." I disputed this. I am enclosing a copy of that article.

On Thursday morning I received a telephone call early February 17, unexpectedly, from School Committee member Martha Gjesteby. She had "second thoughts" about her vote. She confirmed that Crowell had not said anything about "real property" when urging the Executive Session on February 14. Her address and telephone: Mrs. Martha Gjesteby, 81 Old Pasture Road, Cohasset, MA 02025. Tel.: 383-1614.

Patricia Anne Walsh
270 North Main St.

Donna Cogliano and I were the only members of the audience left when the vote was taken to go into Executive Session. Due to the lateness of the hour, the rest had departed before the motion was made. I telephoned your office regarding my complaint on Feb. 16. I was told they would mail out a complaint form, but all I received in the mail from your office was a copy of the Open Meeting Law.

Rescind Article 4

(The following is a copy of a letter to selectmen. Ed.)

A group of us wanted to put an article in the present warrant to have a vote at next town meeting to vote article 4 out.

It was suggested to us by the higher ups to wait to see if the state would fund the article 4 study. The letter received February 24, 1983 states there is no funding available. Therefore, we request that the Selectmen insert an article to rescind article 4.

The reasons for no funding available are, the town will be subject to fines, contempt of court, the Sewer Advisory Group does not meet E.P.A requirements of a Sewer study. They should represent the various areas of the town, we have no one representing various groups, fisherman, etc. Therefore, its the suggestion of an engineering firm does not meet E.P.A. standards.

If the Selectmen want signatures for them to submit the article we will do so. If the Selectmen refuse to submit the article we will request a special town meeting.

Ask for video policy

(The following is a copy of a letter to selectmen. Ed.)

We strongly oppose the opening of any video game centers in Cohasset. At this time we would like to see a policy created that would ban video game centers from opening anywhere in Cohasset. A policy that is designed to keep video centers away from liquor serving establishments is not a strong enough ban.

At this time we are speaking as private citizens, but much of our knowledge about game centers and the serious problems they bring comes from our work in the area of health education. Repeatedly, at meetings in this field, the problems other local towns on the South Shore have with these centers is discussed. None of the discussion is positive. The centers bring more drug and alcohol problems into an area as well as loitering of large groups and the harassment of younger chidren who go near the centers.

Cohasset does need more things for youth to do, but the video game center is not the answer. We oppose these centers in any area of Cohasset. Cushing Plaza already has a drug and alcohol problem with youth hanging around there. Young children are often harassed by the groups hanging around the Plaza. With the opening of a few new stores in the plaza the area may have a chance to upgrade itself and bring business and employment into Cohasset.

Some years ago when Mrs. O'Toole proposed a center in downtown Cohasset many residents, including ourselves, were opposed to such a center. We believe the time to establish a policy against such centers is now.

Many thanks for giving this important your consideration.

Welcome Baby Berger...

By Lois Martin

Michael and Linda Berger are parents of a son, Daniel Joseph, born at Goddard Hospital in Stoughton Feb. 25.

Sounds simple, a joyful occasion that sweetens many a marriage.

Simple my foot! This is a Mariner baby and we've been in unanimous labor for more than a month waiting for this baby to be born.

Mike and Linda were married I think a year ago October. Mike is the community editor for Cohasset and Scituate Mariners. He's a youngish man, beard, about 26, devoted beyond distraction to Linda. We gave him a shower before he was married, his household goods to assist him in being a liberated husband.

PATCHES

Maybe we'd do that for anyone. But we loved doing it for Mike. He's an endearing, generous spirited, affable co-worker. We, a female dominated staff, laughingly refer to him as one of the few sexually harrassed males on the South Shore. We make his life miserable as often as possible with girl talk. And he outlaughs us every time.

So when he announced we had a baby to anticipate, we began the vigil, checking on Linda's health, the doctor's comments, his choice of names.

We had thought it would be late January. But those elusive calculations are tricky and we, grumbling, reconciled ourselves to more weeks as we started February.

Meanwhile Michael, on the road a lot in reporting, purchased for himself a beeper. He no sooner had it on his belt than he was constrained to test it in the office. Back and forth ran the beeps until we all were satisfied the thing worked and could fetch the almost-father from a Selectman's meeting in Scituate, the production barn at the Mariner and all points in between.

We started trading phone numbers. We were to be on call. Let's say he'd get beeped on the way to a School Committee meeting, we practiced, he was to stop at the phone booth, answer the beep, then call someone else to cover the meeting. Cover those bases. Keep the baby and the presses moving at all times.

Tuesday, Jan. 18 the beeper alarm went off at 12:10 p.m. and so did we in all directions. Naturally it was Tuesday, you notice, the biggest day at your hometown paper office. If it's Tuesday it's a personal crisis or emergency. Mike dialed while we paled. False alarm!

The rest of us conceded we'd been nervous wrecks. "I'm not nervous," Mike bellowed while we roared. He works with a lot of practiced, wily parents, who border on being merciless to someone who is about to undertake that job.

Last Tuesday (see I told you) Linda was to check into the hospital to be induced to labor. We'd had it by then, we who'd seen the inside of labor rooms. Mike had advice coming out his ears about what we'd do and had done. If a tricky delivery had been accomplished by a fellow newspaper worker, he heard about it from the white johnny to the first full cry of the offspring.

But they sent her home, no bed, increasing would-be parental frustrations and outright indignation at the office. We'd have found a bed for her on a Tuesday. We can handle those deadlines. We've got the priorities nailed.

Finally, Friday morning at 6:30 a.m., Mike and Linda hied themselves to Goddard Hospital in Stoughton, while the rest of us came to work . . . to wait.

The baby was born by Caesarian section at 4:16 that afternoon. That was after hours of waiting for lazy Mother Nature.

The father was contacted at his home Saturday morning.

"Lois, he weighed 7 lb., 15½ oz., and he's 21 inches long. Last night I fed him and put him to bed. He likes to be held. His hair is brown, not exactly curly, and he looks a lot like Linda . . . She's very happy.

"A lot of people say he's real cute, friends and family. And the nurses said the baby's cute. And some people off the street said he's real cute. You know how they let people look in the nursery. Some of them said he was the cutest baby there.

"They let me take the baby to the room. There I was, Lois, holding him—watching him and Linda sleep and watching Dallas with earphones on.

"I looked like Trapper John. I had on 'my blues,' with a mask and slippers. (Mike had trained with Linda to attend the childbirth. Instead he attended surgery.)

"I saw them take the baby out. I didn't flinch. I took it all in and pretended I was in anatomy class."

The hours before the birth, though, had been tough. Mike had been remanded to the 'father's room,' which he described as a 4x4 with two chairs, one table and a 1980 issue of Newsweek magazine with a cover story of David Stockman.

Two weeks ago an expectant father had put his fist through the window. That wasn't yet repaired. So the impact of another's pain and impatience hung over the heads of Saturday's fathers at Goddard.

Shortly after delivery Mike couldn't wait to get to the telephones. But he discovered his clothes had been stashed in some hiding place. Still 'Trapper John,' he tried to find his way around the hospital in his slippers and got lost, ending up outside the building. Once inside again he came upon Linda's brother and the two of them hit the phones to spread the word.

Daniel Joseph Berger

Monday morning Mike was back at his desk wearing, not his blues, but the best of grins known to humankind, that of a new father.

Thing is, we've got a problem. A month or so ago, we started an office pool, guessing the sex and weight of the Berger Baby. Darned if the winner wasn't the only one in the office not to have in her dollar. So I've got a problem, to solve fairly the three-way tie that remains. Justice isn't easy in office pools.

But here's the two-day report on Daniel Joseph Berger, administered to his many clamoring aunts and uncles of the Mariner: "You should see him yawn. He looks just like Linda when she yawns. And he likes to play . . . and he loves to be held." He will be. Oh, yeah. Welcome, Baby Berger.

Information line . . .

Paul Pratt Library Director Dick Hayes and Marshfield's Ventress Memorial Library have agreed to write a regional library column on the questions most asked of the Reference Department of each library. This week the column is written by the Ventress Library.

Q. Whose picture appears on the $500 bill?

A. Although bills in this denomination have not been printed by the U.S. Treasury in many years, President McKinley's portrait last graced the $500 bill in a series beginning in 1928.

Q. In "The Winds of War" a book entitled "A Jew's Jesus" by Dr. Aaron Jastrow figures prominently. Did such a book actually exist? It would have been published in the U.S. before 1941.

A. A check of the National Union Catalogue of books printed before 1956, published by the Library of Congress failed to reveal this book. Dr. Aaron Jastrow also fails to appear in standard biographical sources, leading to the conclusion that this book exists only in the fictional world of Herman Wouk.

Q. How much would $10,000 in 1896 be worth in today's dollars?

A. The inflation rate is gauged by the Consumer Price Index which is computed by the U.S. Department of Labor. Using the 1967 dollar as a standard of 100, the CPI in 1896 was 25 and in December 1982 was 292.4. Employing this ratio, $10,000 in 1896 would be equivalent of nearly $117,000 today.

Q. How old is Japan's Emperor Hirohito? It seems as though he has been around forever.

A. Emperor Hirohito was born in 1901 and has been Japan's Emperor since 1926.

Q. Is there a popular saying "As dull as ditch water?" If so, what is its derivation?

A. The first recorded use of the phrase was by W.H. Maxwell in Sports and Adventures in Scotland (1844) who wrote "The people...are as dull as ditch water." Dickens' use of the phrase in his work entitled "Our Mutual Friend" (1865) is probably responsible for the phrase's popularity. Dickens wrote: "He'd be sharper than a serpent's tooth, if he wasn't as dull as ditch water." Other interesting quotations appearing in the books of phrases and quotations under dullness include: "It is the dull man who is always sure, and the sure man who is always dull" (H.L. Mencken), and "Dull as an alderman at church, or a fat lapdog after dinner." (Thomas Holcroft, 1781).

Q. When was the sales tax imposed by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts?

A. The Massachusetts sales tax was effective April 1, 1966. Originally the tax was only imposed for 20 months, and was to expire on December 31, 1967, but an act of the legislature in 1967 made the tax permanent, and we've been paying ever since.

Q. How long is a copyright good for? And how can I be sure a work is in the public domain?

A. For works published prior to January 1, 1978 a copyright was good for 28 years and was eligible for a single renewal term of another 28 years. Under the new copyright law, which covers all works copyrighted after January 1, 1978, the period of copyright protection is for a term of the life of the author plus fifty years for most works, although it may be for 75 or 100 years past the author's demise for some types of works. You may use these terms for a general guide to determine whether a work is in the public domain, however a thorough investigation by a copyright attorney is suggested as the later copyright of derivative works may complicate the process.

TICKETS AVAILABLE

A supply of discount tickets for the upcoming run of the play "A Chorus Line" at the Schubert Theater in Boston is available to the public at the Reference Desk on the second floor at the Ventress Library. The tickets, good for all performances of the play, except the Saturday Night show, allow the bearer at least a $7 discount off regular ticket prices. Prices for seats with the discount range from $8 for the balcony at the Wednesday matine, to $25 for the orchestra section at the Friday evening performance. "A Chorus Line" is set to open at the Schubert on March 2nd, with the discount tickets good for all performances through March 20.

Historical Society to hold second dinner March 16

The Cohasset Historical Society's second dinner meeting is scheduled for Wednesday, March 16, at 6:30 p.m. The dinner will be held at Trueblood Hall, Unitarian Parish House, North Main Street, and will be catered by the Dorothy Bradford Chapter, Eastern Star, of Hingham, featuring traditional corned beef and cabbage.

Guest speaker will be Robert Thorndike, on the history of the Glades and Strawberry Point in North Scituate.

Located close to Cohasset Harbor, but seldom visited by most South Shore residents, the Glades promentory has a unique history going back to the era of the great 19th century seaside hotels. Later it became the home of such well-known families as Adams, Cabot and Lowell.

During the Second World War the wind and wave swept Glades was taken over for use by the military, and today it is the summer home for a group of Boston families.

Robert Thorndike has a long association with the Glades and has studied its history extensively. His talk will be illustrated.

Reservations for the dinner and talk must be made no later than Saturday, March 12 by calling Mrs. E. Lawrence Parker, Jr. at 383-0773; or the Society's Lothrop House at 383-6930.

'Dangerous Corner' starts Drama Club's winter season

By David Wadsworth

The history of theater arts in Cohasset extends back in time to well before the beginning of the 20th century. For more than 100 years the town has been a place of residence for stage performers and a center of the dramatic arts.

Today, historical documents relating to the town's extensive theatrical tradition are being gathered for the first time to form a unique archive collection. Under the Cohasset Historic Trust, one of the town's several historical organizations, the Helen H. Vosoff Theater Archive has been established at the Cohasset Historical Society's Lothrop House.

When completed this theatrical archive will contain the records of such diverse Cohasset theater organizations as the Hanlon Brothers, whose late 19th century professional touring company was headquartered here (one of their buildings is the current South Shore Art Center) and the South Shore Players, a professional resident company active during summer months in the 1930's and 1940's at Cohasset's Town Hall.

Additionally, archive records of the modern South Shore Music Circus and the Cohasset Dramatic Club will be incorporated in the Vosoff Archives. Burtram Pratt's definitive book "A Narrative History of the Town of Cohasset," volume 2, describes much of Cohasset's early years as a center of activity in the world of theater.

During the last half of the 19th century a group of prominent Broadway actors who also were yachting enthusiasts took up residence in the vicinity of Cohasset Harbor. The street now named Howard Gleason Road, near the Yacht Club, became known as "Actor's Row" for the number of well-known stage personalities living there. Several of them maintained large yachts nearby in the harbor.

Among that group of then-famous dramatic actors were Lawrence Barrett, Stuart Robson, William Crane and Charles Thorne. Crane's yacht "Senator" was a familiar sight in the Harbor. Other famous theatrical personalities were visitors to "Actor's Row," including Edwin Booth, Henry Irving and Bret Harte. Although these great names in American theater never appeared on stage in Cohasset, their presence undoubtedly stimulated much local interest in the world of stage and drama.

Somewhat after the arrival of the "Actor's Row" residents, a professional theater company established its headquarters in Cohasset. The Hanlon brothers (originally six in number) brought from England in 1883 a touring theater company combining the arts of dance, pantomime and acrobatics to produce spectacular stage productions.

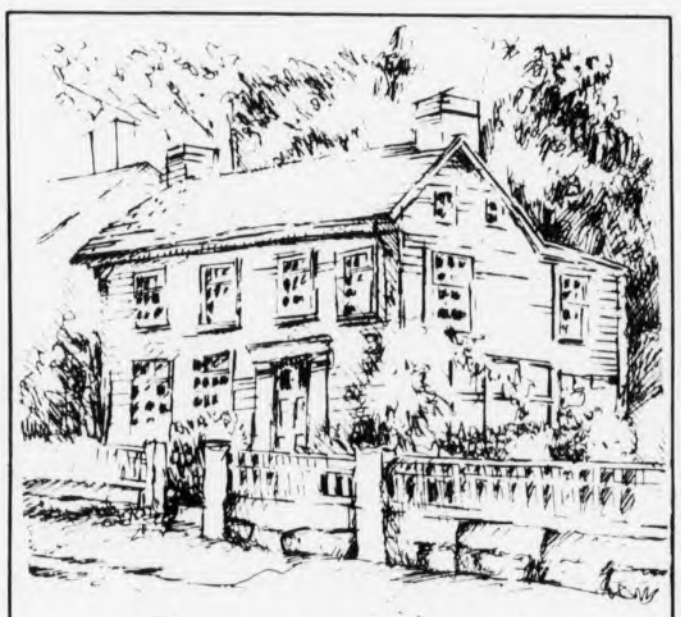
Touring the U. S. during winter months, Hanlon's company spent its summers in their Ripley Road studios perfecting new shows and constructing the gaudy paper mache stage decorations they utilized. A number of those early paper mache stage figures recently have returned to Cohasset to become part of the new Vosoff Archives.

Later, in 1933, another chapter in Cohasset's theatrical history began, as a resident professional summer theater was established performing on the Town Hall stage. The South Shore Players, first under their founder Alexander Dean of Yale's drama department then later under Dean's widow Virginia Dixon Dean, prospered with presentations of both new and established plays.

Among the famous names performing on the Town Hall stage for the South Shore Players were Sam Jaffe and the late Humphrey Bogart.

Today's South Shore Music Circus is the lineal descendant of that earlier summer theater whose actors and actresses graced the Town Hall stage for more than two decades. Amateur dramatics, the forerunner of modern community theater, began with the desire of Cohasset's residents to participate in the world of dramatic arts.

The Cohasset Dramatic Club was founded in 1921 and its first Town Hall production was the comedy "Nothing But The Truth," presented in May of that year.



Now in its 62nd year, the Dramatic Club is preparing to produce its 1983 winter season show, J.B. Priestley's classic whodunit mystery "Dangerous Corner." Often considered to be one of the finest plays of its genre and Priestley's best, "Dangerous Corner" will be staged at the Town Hall March 3 to 5, curtain time 8 p.m.

from the kitchen

[From the Kitchen columnist Joan Pinkham is on vacation this week. Guest columnist once more is Norwell Editor Bucky Yardume, who offers some Near Eastern goodies for those who like to try something different].

* * *

Beurak is a delicacy sometimes classed as a pastry because of its texture but actually sufficient if served in quantity as a main course, or just as a side dish. The shell is dough of a texture not unlike baklava, hence its pastry repute. It's stuffed with either cheese or meat. Adventurous home chefs may want to give the dough a shot. But they can save mucho time and elbow grease by purchasing the dough (Philo) from Near Eastern groceries.

For those who like to do it themselves, however, here's the dope on the dough:

CHEESE BEURAK DOUGH

6 cups flour
1 1/2 cups water
1 tspn. salt
1 tblsn. peanut oil
2 lbs cheese (Monterey or Swiss)
2 raw eggs
1/2 cup chopped parsley
salt/pepper

Mix dough, let set at room temp for 1 hour without touching. Cover dough with a wet towel to prevent drying out. Roll dough, then divide into 8 balls. Roll each ball flat and add cornstarch to a round sheet about 3 feet in diameter. Cut into 4 even sections, each to make a single beurak. On each sheet place parsley and cheese stuffing. Fold dough into triangle packets. Place in baking pan, pour melted butter over the packets. Bake in 350 degree oven for 25 minutes.

(Ed. note: believe it! Buying the Philo dough makes the job a lot easier).

MEAT BEURAK STUFFING

The dough process is the same, bought or home-made.

2 pounds ground lamb
4 large onions chopped fine
1/2 cut chopped parsley
2 eggs
Salt/pepper

Braise meat in butter. Add onions, parsley, eggs, salt, pepper (garlic optional). Mix well. Then stuff the dough into triangles.

MONTI (stuffed pasta)

When you think pasta, you think Italian, even though the Chinese were originators of macaroni. But Near Eastern cuisine also includes pasta dishes. This one is the proof.

Once again, there's a choice: to make the pasta yourself or to let discretion be the better part of valor and buy pasta shells to stuff. The consistency won't be nearly as good. But you sure will save a lot of work.

Anyway...

6 cups sieved flour
3 eggs
1 tblspoon melted butter
1 cup milk
1 tspn salt
Adequate water

Mix ingredients and fashion into a solid dough ball. Then divide into 8 balls. Sprinkle with cornstarch and wrap in damp cloth to avoid dehydration. Let stand 1 hour. Roll into single ball. Roll dough out into 1/16 of an inch thick sheet. Cut into 1 inch squares. Add 1/4 tspn. stuffing into pockets shaped like pasta shells or shells you purchased. Grease baking pan. Place packets close together in pan and bake in hot oven until brown. Pour chicken broth on packets, covering them. Bake for 20 minutes more and serve in madzoon (yoghurt) seasoned with garlic if desired. Some like to add a touch of tomato sauce.

STUFFING INGREDIENTS

1/2 lb. finely ground lamb
1 small finely chopped onion
Salt/pepper
Braise in butter, then let cool before stuffing shells
Enjoy!
Hurry back, Joan!

"The past two years have found me with little time to cultivate an active social life due to a rapid growth in my career and professional life. Since my day is long work-wise and my job is demanding – there is little time left to seek the social life that I would like. That's where Together came in. I respected their honesty, integrity and professionalism from the very start. As a result, I have met several people with the same interests and goals in life – not to mention the great times we have shared. Indeed, Together has filled a very important part of my life."
"I'm a busy professional and both my career and social life are important to me. I don't go to bars and I don't date people I work with. For me, Together has been an economical and time-saving way of meeting other compatible single adults. The counselors are sincerely concerned with introducing me to the kind of person I would like to meet. I recommend this service highly."

State Treasurer Robert Crane released the names of 42,000 Massachusetts Residents who are due more than $17 million in abandoned accounts.

The largest single amount is due a Boston woman whose name appears on an account worth more than $150,000

Under the state's Unclaimed Money Law, bank accounts, insurance proceeds, uncashed gift certificates, payroll checks, customer overpayments and the like that have gone untouched for at least five years are deemed to be abandoned. All such accounts are to be reported to the Treasurer, who then attempts notification. Last year Treasurer Crane returned more than half ($18 million) of the $35 million in reported abandoned accounts to the rightful owners or legal heirs.

Crane said compliance with the law is improving. Nevertheless, he said he is not totally satisfied. "We have had to assume the role that rightfully belongs to banks, insurance companies and other institutions. It is apparent that less than a sincere effort is being made by some of these institutions to find the owners. How can anyone fail to locate unclaimed owners such as: The Internal Revenue Service; Sears, Roebuck and Company; Boston City Hospital; or the Roman Catholic Archbishop of Boston?" the Treasurer asked.

Crane added one important aspect of the Unclaimed Money Law requires that "until claimed, all funds are kept in the state's general fund where they are invested for the benefit of all residents and taxpayers here in Massachusetts."

Here are the names of residents who, according to Crane's office, have unclaimed money coming to them:

Geraldine E. and Richard D. Ainslie, Allan J. and Joan S. Allen, William and Patricia Anstead, Joseph J. Canan, Carwoods of Boston, Inc.; Mary L. 'Focus on the Family' film series at Congregational Church

The well-known film series dealing with child-rearing and other family relationships, "Focus on the Family," will open Sunday, March 6 at 6:30 p.m. at the Second Congregational Church, Cohasset. All parents are invited to the series which continues through April 24, except Easter Sunday.

The first film, titled "The Strong-Willed Child," will be followed by films on "Shaping the Will Without Breaking the Spirit," "Christian Fathering," "Preparing for Adolescence," and "What Wives Wish Their Husbands Knew About Women."

The films feature Dr. James Dobson, a prominent psychologist and family counsellor. The program schedule is to show the film, break for light refreshments and continue with a discussion for those who wish to stay. A total limit of two hours has been set so that parents can return home before children's bedtime.

Mr. and Mrs. John Hughes, parisioners of the Second Congregational Church, head up presentation of the program, assisted by other members of the church and representatives from other Cohasset churches who have volunteered to encourage attendance.

Congregational Church members assisting are Gordon and Barbara Hislop, Tom and Kathy Roy, Joe and Carol Sandblom, John and Linda Campbell, John and Mary Benbow and Joe and Ruth Nedrow. Representatives of other churches are Roy Fitzsimmons of St. Anthony's, Jeff and Marcia Ludlow of St. Stephens, Joanne Chittick of First Parish and Mary Sofis, Jean Syrmopoulos and Sharon Costas of the Greek Orthodox Church.

The elementary version of 'Greece'

By Karin Bartow

Early one morning in the Osgood School library, a group of Metco students debate whether they will do "Orpheus" or "Chicken Little."

Books on Greek mythology are the hottest items in the Paul Pratt, Deer Hill and Osgood libraries.

On Greek Day at Deer Hill, virtually everyone in the school is involved in sharing some aspect of modern and ancient Greek life, from athletic events to dancing the "Hasapiko," to original plays about their gods.

These are some of the creative activities touched off by the Just Around The Corner Theatre residency at the Osgood and Deer Hill Schools.

Arts and art techniques are natural vehicles for learning other subjects. Any skeptic of the value of the "arts" need only have witnessed some of the many activities generated by the residency program to have their minds changed.

During January and February JATC teachers Marlene Moyer and Penny Perel taught students to use their imaginations, test their concentration, to focus and think in preparing plays, but in the long run, in learning.

"I could go to Greece myself without a guide," said Marge Murphy, Deer Hill library aide. "The learning that's gone on here! These kids have acquired knowledge through each other; they've gained confidence and learned from speaking in front of others."

Murphy, who often has students act out books they've read and enjoyed, feels plays are an "incentive for children to read."

"Marlene would come in, meet the kids, bring them through body exercises, and be able to spot the shy, quiet ones and give them roles to bring them out," said Marie Price, first grade teacher and residency coordinator at Osgood School.

She was delighted at how beneficial the theatre work was for "quiet" students. "Marlene opened up their minds in a dramatic play and created adventures for even the little shy ones to get into. These students gained confidence and gained friends."

At Osgood Moyer and Perel conducted three sequential workshops per classroom in theatre arts. In four somewhat frenzied weeks, there was practically a play a minute at the school. Classes shared their new productions as soon as the story was down pat, or were invited to view a neighbor's play.

"What we're going to do today is have a rehearsal," "Moyer said on her second day in a third grade classroom. "I'm going to be rehearsing with each group. Be quiet, focus your attention, use your concentration. This is very hard. We're making this play up, there's no script, use your imagination, physical self and your voice to tell the story."

She has the students tell her what a myth is — "How something came to be," and introduces them to the elements of a play — characters, setting and plot. With a practiced eye she selects her cast for "How the Seasons Came To Be," and without blinking, the third graders are addressing each other as Persephone, Hermes, Demeter, Hades and so on. Their imaginations are in motion.

The gods of "The Labors of Hercules," Anne Hale as Hera, Robbie Lawrence as Zeus, Anne Dockray as Athena and Madlyn MacDonald as Artemis. In the background, "Gorgons" Seanna O'Leary and Cindy Dormer from "Perseus."

One week later, after two rehearsals with their classroom teacher, the class performs their play for parents and students. They have created their costumes on their own, developed dialogue, movement, and with a gentle hand from their teacher, helped each other perfect their parts. They surprise themselves with a smooth and entertaining performance.

Besides creating and presenting a play in a class period, Price said many other academic areas were enhanced by the residency. Language arts, story writing, re-writing, reading dialogue, math facts, and the give and take of team work, not to mention confidence building, are the major benefactors.

"It was a positive experience for the whole school," Price said.

The acting company of JATC spent one week at each school "in rehearsal" for their musical play, "Orpheus," which was also performed.

Visiting classes were told that "One rule of the rehearsal hall is to be very quiet." All groups, from Kindergarten to grade six, respected that rule and had the unique opportunity to see what goes into theatre making at a more professional level. The company made changes and modifications, often spending a half hour or more re-working one small part of a scene until it was satisfactory.

Gym teacher Helen Pratt, who was displaced during the company's week-long rehearsals in the Osgood gym, found new ways of teaching gym. She taught her classes "sitting down" exercises wherever she could find space — in a corridor or classroom. "We used new muscles; I was sore the next day," she said.

The residency at Deer Hill also included class workshops, two per classroom, with company teacher Josh Conesque, and core group work with Perel and Moyer.

Deer Hill Principal Ken Ekberg said, "Overall, I'm very, very happy with the program, from the beginning with the workshops in the classrooms, to the play rehearsals, to 'Orpheus,' to Greek Day and the core group plays. The kids have gotten a lot out of it."

Moyer feels "the school will continue to see benefits of the program, there will be further ramifications. In general, it was terrifically successful at both schools. The February doldrums helped. The staff at Osgood and Deer Hill were very organized, everybody was involved and supportive," Moyer said.

"The Labors of Hercules" was adapted and performed by the fourth and fifth grade core group and "Perseus," by the sixth grade group. The students presented their plays, in dress-rehearsal, for the Osgood School Feb. 17, for parents that evening, and for the Deer Hill School, Feb. 18.

While the core groups worked, the rest of the school devised activities for Greek Day, which sounded the closing note for the residency program.

Through the efforts of art teacher Jean O'Malley, the school was decorated with murals and artwork of Greek mythological characters. Teachers and students were costumed in modern and ancient Greek attire. Pat Wunchel provided a luncheon menu that included Keftedes, rice pilaf, green beans a-la Queque and Salad Ravani.

A morning assembly presented by the sixth grades chronicled famous people, places and other aspects of Greek life, from ancient times to the present. Each study group explained their specialty, including architecture, the alphabet, food, sports, language and social customs.

At the conclusion of the assembly, the Deer Hill staff presented the school with several books on theatre and poetry in memory of Peter Klute, a former teacher who died last year. Drama was an area of great interest to Klute.

Heralded by trumpeters Chris Froio, Katie Murphy, Michael Figuerido, Chipper Weier, Troy Haase, Craig Carter and Matthew Buckley, the fifth grade mini-Olympiad then began. Sporting events common to ancient Greece took place in the gym and hallways of the school. Joel Reidy won the high jump event; Jim Reidy, the shot put, Sean McCarthy was top wrestler, although there were no real winners in that event, a demonstration of skills and scoring techniques; and Patricia Smith came in first in the fast-walk event, followed by Jonathan deLima, Stephen Olson and Mindy Johnson.

Fifth and sixth grade classes visited the fourth grade classrooms to see their diverse contributions to the day. Mrs. Hibbard's class demonstrated and taught the classic Greek fisherman's dance, the "Hasapiko;" Mrs. Chase's class performed several puppet plays adapted from Aesop's fables; and Mrs. Sullivan's students presented displays and explanations of the constellations.

Following lunch, the core groups plays were presented in the cafeteria which was transformed by the imaginations of all students into the "World of Ancient Greece."

CHS sports update for the week...

By Alana O'Brien

Girl's Basketball

The CHS girl's basketball team ended its season along with a six-game winning streak by defeating the Hull Pirates and the Holbrook Bulldogs.

At Cohasset, Hull gave Cohasset a good game up until the third quarter when the Skippers pulled away for a 52-40 victory.

Senior captain Gia Barresi led all scorers with 21 points and ten rebounds. Senior Beverly Mullaney netted 11 points and grabbed 12 rebounds.

At Holbrook, the Skippers ended a tremendous season with a 64-44 victory over the Bulldogs.

Senior forward Beverly Mullaney scored a game high of 27 points for Cohasset. Gia Barresi netted 15 points while senior forward Jill Grant chipped in 12 points.

The team finished 12-6 in the league for fourth place and 13-7 overall. The girls just missed a shot at the state tournament by one loss.

Boy's Basketball

The CHS Boy's Basketball team wrapped up their season recently with victories over Hull and Holbrook.

At Cohasset, the Skippers and the Hull Pirates took turns holding the lead until the final minute when the score was tied at 45-45.

Freshman guard Tony Bogarty hit an off the glass jumper with five seconds to play to clinch the win for Cohasset.

Bogarty led Cohasset with 19 points and five assists. Juniors Peter Caruso and David Barcomb netted six points a piece while seniors Jack Maloney and Dan Anderson played strong games for Cohasset.

In their last game of the season, the Skippers edged Holbrook 47-46 with two free throws by senior captain Jack Maloney.

Maloney finished the night with 12 points. Freshman Tony Bogarty and Junior David Barcomb netted 10 points a piece.

Athletes of the Week

Seniors Gia Barresi and Beverly Mullaney were elected to the South Shore League Girl's Basketball team.

This is the first time in recent history that two Cohasset players have been elected.

Hockey

Recently the CHS Hockey team defeated Sandwich 10-2 for a non-league victory.

Coach Tom Burnell felt it was a good game for this team considering Sandwich had won their own league.

Senior Don O'Neill netted four goals and Dan Bowen recorded a hat trick and five assists while senior John Casey netted two goals with four assists. Freshman Jeff O'Neill tallied a goal and three assists.

Junior Mike McNeill played a strong game in net for Cohasset.

Recently the Skippers recorded their fourth loss of the season with a 7-6 decision to Marian.

This loss does not affect their league or tournament standings.

"We didn't play the last fifteen minutes and they did," said coach Tom Burnell.

Senior Don O'Neill recorded a hat trick while Dan Bowen and Joe Hoffman netted two goals each.

In a recent all star game Cohasset split the ice time with co-champs Duxbury.

In the first half all stars beat Duxbury 4-2. Dan Bowen scored for the all stars with an assist from Rich Evans.

In the second half of action, the all stars won again 3-2 over Cohasset.

Scoring for Cohasset were seniors Dan Bowen and John Casey.

Coach Burnell also praised Rich Evans and Jeff O'Neill for their fine efforts.

Skippers famous for acrobatics

By John Ryan

For the second consecutive season, the Cohasset Skipper's hockey team is in the thick of the Eastern Massachusetts Div. II championship tournament.

Their 13 win, 4 loss, and 3 ties for the season enabled the Skippers to once again capture the South Shore League title.

The trademarks of coach Tom Burnell's teams the past few years have consisted of overall team speed, crisp passing and a stingy defense.

Asked to compare the differences between last year's successful team to the present '83 version, defenseman (capt.) Rich Evans noted that although today's Skipper's lack the depth and experience of last season's team, he feels that the youth and desire of his batterymates are the essential elements for winning hockey (not to mention their classy "Cooper-All" long-padded pants which may be an intimidating factor).

In any team sport, defense is the pivotal factor in determining who will survive to the finals, and Cohasset proves quite capable with Evans, Chris Mahoney, Joe Hoffman, Dave Ormiston and company to keep goaltender Mark Brown's tough chances to the bare minimum.

Although blessed with a fine definsive unit, the Skippers are once again famous for their acrobatic forwards. Seniors Dan Bowen, John Casey and Don O'Neill combine for the majority of Cohasset's scoring punch. All three are grouped snugly together atop the Cohasset team scoring list, with Capt. Don O'Neill edging a few points in front. Don is often joined by freshman Jeff O'Neill on many scoring opportunities when the "Breakaway Brothers" are on the loose.

Cohasset's hidden strength is its forechecking of the opponent's defensemen, causing havoc in the offensive zone and spending less time on defense, consquently leading to more scoring. After all that's the name of the(ir) game!

Cohasset Sailors capture Chicago ribbons

The Timme Angsten Memorial Regatta held at the Chicago Yacht Club during the Thanksgiving weekend had some Cohasset flavor.

In a showdown between Harvard and the U.S. Naval Academy, Navy skippers overtook the Harvard team of John and Brian Keane, both of Black Horse Lane in the final race of the three-day series to win by five points.

The February edition of "Sail Magazine" reported there was near flawless sailing by both Harvard and navy in a light northerly breeze.

Harvard's Keane brothers, with only two finishes out of the top three, built up a 20-point lead over Navy and a 70-point lead over third-place Michigan by the day's end.

Unfortunately for the Crimson, the two remaining races in each division on Sunday were not to go its way. In the day's first race in each division, both the Keanes were over the line early. Meanwhile, Navy, demonstrating talent and poise under pressure, finished first and third in A and B division to narrow Harvard's lead to seven points.

In the last set of races, Brown again won in A division over John Keane, who finished ninth, giving Navy a one-point lead. Gilreath covered Brian Keane during the final race in B division to give Navy the victory and the Timme Angsten Trophy.

Divisional honors went to John Keane, who tied for second, by 19 points. Brian Keane won B division for Harvard by 14 points over Navy's Gilreath.

AFS auction set for April 30

The Cohasset chapter of the American Field Service (AFS) set Saturday, April 30 as the date for this year's auction.

Jane Goedecke and JoAnne Rossi, co-chairmen for the event, expect this year's auction to equal or surpass last year's successful fundraiser. A total of $2,000 in scholarships was given to AFS applicants who met a certain financial need.

Operating expenses annually approach $1,000 for Cohasset's participation in this international/intercultural program. Depending on funds available, the community can host one to four students for the school year.

The auction features items and services from a wide spectrum of offerings — everything from antiques to automobiles, from party catering to vacation retreats. A professional auctioneer mans the auction block, and the bids are all tax deductible. The fundraiser is held in the hall of St. Stephan's Church.

Self-improvement class

Kathy Chiasson, a former teacher and model, will conduct a six-week self-improvement class emphasizing modeling turns, fashion co-ordination, poise, posture, manners and make-up. Chiasson has modeled in the South Shore area for seven years and is a certified modeling instructor.

Two separate classes will be offered Tuesday 3 p.m. to 4:30 p.m., for ages 8-13; Wednesdays, 3 to 4:30 p.m., for 14-19 year-olds. Classes will be held in the Town Hall auditorium and will be limited in size.

The program is scheduled to begin Tuesday, March 15, and Wednesday, March 16. To register, call the Recreation Office at 383-6791.

Drama Club tryouts

The Dramatic Club announces tryouts for its spring show, Neil Simon's "Plaza Suite," May 12 to 14, are scheduled for Sunday, March 13 at 2 p.m. and Monday, March 14 at 8 p.m. at Town Hall.

Phyllis Mahon will direct the spring play. Six main characters (three men and three women) and an additional half dozen minor roles are needed. Play books are available at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. Anyone interested in reading for a role in "Plaza Suite" is invited to attend the tryouts.

CHS hosts Drama Festival March 5

Saturday, March 5 Cohasset High School will host the 1983 High School Drama Festival semi-finals beginning at noon.

Sponsored by the Boston Globe, with the Mass. High School Drama Guild and Mass. Secondary School Administrators Assoc., the semi-final schedule is as follows:

12 p.m., opening remarks.

12:05 p.m., Watertown High School, "Glimpses."

1 p.m., Bishop Feehan High School, "Whose Life Is It Anyway?"

2 p.m., Falmouth High School, "The Bald Soprano."

3 p.m., Cohasset High School, "What You will!"

4 p.m., Medway High School, "Four Little Words."

5:15 p.m., awards.

No one will be permitted to enter or leave during any play. Sherwood Collins of Tufts Univ. will judge the competition. William Faria, Revere High School, will serve as consultant.

Festival host is Ron Emmons; Paul Johnson is festival stage manager.

One of the five competitors will be chosen to go onto the state finals.

Medical scholarship

High school seniors who plan a career in a medical or health care field may apply for the annual scholarship of the Friends of South Shore Hospital.

Applications are available at the hospital and should be returned to Beatrice Coleman, chairman of the Friends' Scholarship committee, by April 22.

Scholarships will be awarded to students who have been accepted by any accredited school of nursing or other paramedical institution and who live in the towns served by the hospital, including Cohasset, Hanover, Marshfield, Norwell and Scituate.

Colleges & universities warned of possible measle outbreaks

The Massachusetts Department of Public Health's (DPH) Division of Communicable Diseases has notified colleges and universities throughout the Commonwealth to beware of possible measles outbreaks among students.

Massachusetts has not had a resident case of measles for the past 20 months. The three reported cases were brought into the state by non residents. Because so many college students come to Massachusetts from states and countries where immunization standards are not as stringent as those in Massachusetts, the potential for measles, rubella, and mumps epidemics in institutions of higher learning is of continuing concern to public health officials.

Pratt announces candidacy

Peter J. Pratt this week formally announced his candidacy for a three year term on the Cohasset Board of Water Commissioners.

"It's time to initiate some long range policy decisions about the direction of our Water Company," said Pratt, a 27-year-old Cohasset native.

"The Town faced critical decisions when it bought out the old privately owned company in 1950. More decisions are needed today in order to ensure that this municipally owned corporation with capital assets in excess of $3.5 million continues to operate efficiently and to pay its own way as contemplated in the original purchase. A five year business management plan might well be a workable approach for the Commissioners to consider."

Pratt is a graduate of Cohasset High School and holds a B.A. in government from Bard College, Annandale-on-Hudson, New York. Currently a private consultant to the cable television industry, he is the former director of community development for Southern Massachusetts Cablevision, subsidiary of Chris Craft Industries, Inc.

No stranger to electoral politics, Pratt has managed campaign staffs of candidates on the national and state level in Massachusetts, New York and five other states.

Guild filed papers

Edward M. "Ted" Guild, 365 Jerusalem Rd., has filed nomination papers for Sewer Commissioner (one-year term). He supports a thorough investigation of the Innovative and Alternative System before any further commitment or action is taken on the Cohasset waste treatment program.

Guild believes that the Town can resist successfully dictation by the Commonwealth and should proceed to determine how it can comply with state regulations and standards at minimum cost.

A vice president of Ionics, Incorporated, in Watertown, Guild has over 25 years experience in the sale and specification of systems for water treatment and purification. He also has extensive experience in the negotiation of multi-million dollar contracts with consulting engineers, governmental committees and industry.

Guild holds an A.B. from Harvard University in physical sciences (a combination of mathematics, physics and chemistry). A long-time resident of Hingham, he and his wife, Julie, moved to Cohasset nine years ago.

Two seats on the Sewer Commission are at stake in this year's election. Charles deSantis is running unopposed for the other position (three-year term).

Sullivan seeks term

Last week Diane Sullivan of 708 Jerusalem Rd. filed nomination papers for the one-year term on the Board of Selectmen for the April 9 election.

Sullivan is committed to Cohasset. Her campaign emphasizes all the issues confronting Cohasset including regionalization of waste disposal, the septage issue, proper relationships with police and fire personnel and non-union employees and interest in and support of other town boards by our board of selectmen.

Sullivan looks forward to speaking with as many residents as possible in the remaining weeks before the election.

State says no, no, no to alternatives...

"specifically did not want to stimulate growth," and in Holliston.

Health Agent Elaine Eliopoulos questioned him about whether he could provide for small lots of 15,000 to 20,000 square feet with 90 percent ledge, and a 15-foot slope. Lombardo said sub-surface sand filters for pre-treatment, snuggled into ledge on the slope were effective.

He also discussed low water toilets, which only require one gallon of water per flush.

Lombardo's firm designed septic tank effluent collection systems with four-inch pipe and only four foot depth which reduces the expense of blasting and excavation on difficult sites.

He displayed a "greenhouse" system treatment plant the firm had designed. In one town they found five acres just outside the business district where they were able to connect several buildings for sub-surface disposal. One of the members of his firm specializes in on-lot invesitagations with a hand auger, and in making on-site recommendations.

Lombardo said Cohasset's present plant needs a sand filter for solids, which he estimated might cost $200,000.

Joe Ward of Ward Engineering Associates, in outlining his $94,391 full-study proposal, noted his firm has specialized in working for towns in overturning plans for large central sewage plants were millions of dollars had already been expended, because his plans were cost-effective.

Ward said it is important to achieve a large measure of agreement in any town, before proceeding with sewage plans.

He said that a study might prove that it would be more effective for Cohasset to regionalize with a community such as Hull which is only using 900,000 gallons of three million gallon capacity.

Salvador said Hull was suffering from infiltration problems in rainstorms.

Ward suggested it might be possible to connect with the MDC using Hingham lines. Salvador objected that Hingham was already quite full. Ward replied it might be possible to keep the sewage in holding tanks, and pump at night in the "off peak hours." Such a measure is already in place in Cohasset since the Greenhouse Restaurant pumps at off-peak hours.

His firm is also prepared to do on-site investigations and recommendations. If an alternative sewage plan is approved, on-lot corrections would be 94 percent reimbursed. Ward is "confident the present plant can be upgraded to meet effluent standards."

Salvador gave a letter to selectmen the next day saying, "A group of us wanted to put an article in the present warrant to have a vote at next town meeting to vote Article 4 out.

"It was suggested to us by the higher ups to wait to see if the state would fund the Article 4 study. The letter received Feb. 24 states there is no funding available. Therefore we request that the Selectmen insert an article to rescind Article 4."

Police ballot question is illegal, says town counsel

The police chief Civil Service ballot question is illegal, Town Counsel Richard Henderson ruled Tuesday. It will not be placed on the April 9 town election ballot.

Essentially, Henderson ruled the petitioners did not follow proper steps, according to state law.

Sgt. Richard Barrow, one of the ballot sponsors, submitted the question along with 274 signatures of support to the town clerk's office in time for the April election.

The ballot question was not personally directed at Acting Police Chief Joseph Kealey. Kealey was chosen chief by selectmen and is negotiating a contract.

Barrow said those who support the ballot question feel the best way to get the most qualified person is through the state Civil Service examination.

Cohasset dropped Civil Service selection in 1978 and chose a special task force committee to recommend a police chief to selectmen.

Henderson ruled earlier the task force ended its assignment. Selectmen, he said, could interview police chief candidates and choose the chief without help of the special committee.

Henderson researched the ballot question and found the citizens group did not petition the state legislature to repeal the 1978 decision which took the chief's position out of Civil Service. Henderson said in order to entertain the motion, selectmen, through a town meeting vote, must petition the state legislature to put the town back under Civil Service rules for the chief's position.

This step, said Henderson, is critical. Without approval of the legislature, the question is void. Petitioners, he said, must first file the question at a special or annual town meeting and town meeting voters wold act on the question directing selectmen to file the petition to the legislature.

However, the town election is considered to be the second day of the annual town meeting.

Secondly, the ballot question submitted by the citizens group referred to a section of state law which says the town must have a chief outside of civil service control for five years, and the incumbent chief must give his "assent" or approval to the restoration of Civil Service law.

Another section of the law allows the petitioners to ask the legislature to restore Civil Service with five

T. M. article would abolish landfill dept.

By Jane Lane

Selectmen have allowed the insertion of an article in the annual town meeting warrant which would transfer authority of the landfill to a private contractor and abolish the town's landfill department.

By contracting the landfill to a private firm, the town would no longer need the services of the two full-time and two part-time employees at the landfill.

Although the board of health, sponsor of this article, proposes to transfer the manpower to another town department, selectmen said there would be no place where the men could be transferred.

Selectmen made no decision to oppose or support the article, but agreed to allow the article to be included in the April town meeting warrant.

According to Executive Secretary Mark Lanza, the board of health strongly recommends this article, although the advisory board is against the proposal. The board of health will have concrete figures to present to the voters to support their argument for the transferral, he added.

Lanza said although the board recommended transferring the present landfill employees to another town department, no definite plans have been proposed. It is the firm conviction of the board of health not to lay off any employees, Lanza said.

Lanza added that at this time, there would be no place for the employees to be relocated. He said unless the board of health has a strong argument for this proposal, it will "go down in flames."

CHS Hockey team advances

Cohasset's fanatical fans chant to victorious Skipper icemen.

Downs Lynnfield, face Wilmington Thursday

By J. T. Ryan

Powered by a tremendous overall defensive effort, keyed by senior Mark Brown's goaltending consistency, the Cohasset Skipper hockey team reigned supreme for a hard-fought 3-1 victory against Lynnfield March 6.

The team faces Wilmington High Thursday night, March 10 at B.U.'s Walter Brown Area without the services of their leading scorer co-captain Don O'Neill.

The first period started at a slow pace with much of the action in the Cohasset zone. The poise and experience of goalie Mark Brown and his defensive mates shunned many Lynnfield scoring opportunities as the period ended without any goals.

In the second period, when the Skippers enjoyed a power-play advantage, junior defenseman Joe Hoffman faked his way past the School Supt. says he can cut $30,000 . . . but no more

By Mike Berger

School Supt. Eugene Crowell told the school committee Monday the most he can cut from the proposed 1983-84 budget is another $20,000 to $30,000.

This will leave the school budget $52,000 to $62,000 over the advisory committee's recommendation under Prop. 2½ guidelines of $3,790,161.

Last week the school board submitted a proposed school budget of $3,872,109 to the advisory committee, $82,948 greater than the sum allocated for the schools by the advisory board.

The budget was presented with an explanation that hopefully there would be a $50,000 surplus or "deferred spending" amount at the end of the year which may be returned to the town coffers or used to buy back certain materials such as fuel oil for the schools next year.

Crowell said there could be an excess amount of $20,000 in a deferred spending status because of the mild heating season and the attrition of personnel in 1982-83.

Last week committee member Martha Gjesteby said the excess amount could be greater because at least $40,000 could be cut from the utilities account.

She was not present Monday night to hear Crowell's explanation.

After examining the financial accounts with Stephen Hart, Special Education Director and assistant to the superintendent last weekend, Crowell said there is a $149,500 excess which could be used at the end of the fiscal year, June 30.

However, last year's annual town meeting and the advisory committee required a $84,109 cut from the committee's budget. Under Prop. 2½, the advisory committee can set the "bottom line" spending limit for the school committee. The advisors may or may not recommend the school committee's budget figure but town meeting voters make the final decision.

After the required transfer from surplus to cover the $84,109 deficit, Crowell said the possible deferred spending estimate is $65,391.

Cohasset's week...

Budget hearing delayed

The school committee has decided to delay the public hearing on their fiscal 1984 budget to Monday, March 14. The hearing will begin at 8 p.m. in the high school auditorium.

Tammaro court hearing

The next court hearing for John Tammaro, accused of one count of murder and unlawfully carrying a gun in a motor vehicle will be Monday, March 7. In late January, a doctor determined that Tammaro is mentally competent to stand trial on the charges. Tammaro is accused of murdering 20-year old Leslie Ann Haynes, a Cohasset college youth. Tammaro pleaded innocent to both charges. Tammaro has been given until March 7 to prepare for the trial. A trial date is expected to be determined then.

Surplus cheese & butter

Surplus cheese and butter provided by the federal government will be distributed to low income and elderly residents Thursday, March 17 at two locations. Between 11 a.m. and noon distribution will be made at the Unitarian Parish House. Between 2 and 4:30 p.m. distribution will be at the Cohasset Town Hall.

For further information regarding eligibili y or delivery, call the Cohasset Social Service League at 383-0771 or 383-0821.

Early release day

Thursday, March 17 will be an early release day in the Cohasset public schools. There will be no afternoon Kindergarten sessions and other students will be dismissed according to the following schedule: Junior/Senior high school, 12:20 p.m.; Deer Hill School, 12:40 p.m.; and Joseph Osgood School, 1 p.m. Lunch will be served in all of the schools.

This early release day has been authorized by the Cohasset School Committee to allow staff members at the Junior/Senior high school, Deer Hill School and Joseph Osgood School to take part in Curriculum Update Workshops.

Water table testing

The Board of Health has announced that water table testing opens March 1. The testing will remain open through April 30. Any questions about this procedure should be addressed to the Health Agent Elaine Eliopoulos.

Auto insurance reform bill

State Sen. Allan McKinnon has co-sponsored the following bill: auto insurance reform bill — S886. This bill lowers good drivers' auto insurance bills by making the small minority of dangerous drivers pay their fair share of insurance claims that they impose on all drivers.

Weatherization loan bill

State Rep. Mary Jeannette Murray has co-sponsored the weatherization loans bill in the state legislature.

The bill establishes a low interest loan program to finance the weatherization of 500,000 homes owned by low and middle income families. The interest rate on the loans would be reduced by an assessment on the profits earned by the major oil companies in Massachusetts.

Town pier use

In a meeting with welectmen last week, a member of the Harbor Study Committee noted that more emphasis must be placed on the recreational use of the town pier if federal funding is expected for the expansion of the wharf.

Bill Richardson said there is money available for the reconstruction project, although the funds are difficult to attain. The money would be appropriated through the Water Conservation Fund Act, he said. Cohasset might have a chance at some funding if the Anderson-Nichols proposal included some emphasis on the recreational use of the facility, he added.

There are about 50 commercial, and 500 recreational boaters who use the wharf, Richardson said. But the current proposal centers on the fishing industry.

Candidate's corner...

Cliff Mitman

This week the following coffees have been scheduled to give voters an opportunity to meet and talk with Cliff Mitman, candidate for Cohasset selectman:

Wednesday, March 9, 8 p.m. Peggy Soltesz and Patsy Rabstejnek, 3 Border St., 383-0527.

Sunday, March 13, 4-6 p.m. Jim and Mary Richards, 703 Jerusalem Rd., 383-6435.

Sunday, March 13, 7-9 p.m. Mr. and Mrs. John McNamara, 45 Fairoaks Lane, 383-6945.

Monday, March 14, 8 p.m. Jim and Laurie Hamilton, 298 King St., 383-9834.

Ted Guild

A meeting was held Saturday, March 5, at the home of Ted Guild, candidate for Sewer Commissioner (one year term) to form his campaign committee. The following officers were elected and committees organized:

Chairman, Charlie deSantis; Treasurer, George Rabstejnek; Campaign financing, Ed Long; Endorsements, Bobby Pape; Coffees, Pat Buckley and Patsy Rabstejnek; Publicity, Jack McNamara; Legal and environmental, Jeff Bates; and Capital outlay impact, Dick Avery; and Steering committee, Bill Baird, Ray Kasperowicz, Rita Strong, Robin Suhrbier and Gary Vanderweil.

John DeBassio

John A. DeBassio, candidate for a one-year term on the Cohasset Board of Selectmen, addressed over 150 supporters at a kick-off brunch held at Harrington's, Cohasset Village, Sunday.

During the brunch, and at coffees held the first week in March at the homes of Richard and Marsha Silvia, Roy and Ann Crawford and Virginia Abbadessa, DeBassio addressed various town issues and the contributions he felt he would make to the newly-constituted five-member board of selectmen.

"Residents are presently looking to their elected leaders and candidates for office for answers regarding the legal ramifications and alternative methods with regard to the sewer issue.

"Certainly, the next several weeks will be critical for the Town. What course of action the Town will ultimately follow will be provided by various sources: town counsel, the present board of selectmen, the state, the sewer commissioners and the sewer advisory committee.

"In light of recent emphasis given to the adoption of alternative plans, I'd like to see some hard engineering facts and figures, especially as they relate to other communities that have successfully gone with an alternative solution. That information must serve as a basis for adopting any alternative solution for Cohasset."

DeBassio added, "When all the facts and figures are in, and in the absence of any action to the contrary, I see my role as a facilitator of the alternative plan and would recommend that the board of selectmen create a public forum and/or special town meeting where those alternatives are presented to the public for the purpose of adopting a future course of actions.

"As long as alternatives are available they should be examined and considered. If viable, they should be adopted and offered for certification. If necessary, the state should be challenged to modify the order."

A public coffee for John DeBassio will be held Sunday, March 13 at the Cushing Room, Cushing Plaza, from 1 to 3 p.m. Refreshments will be served.

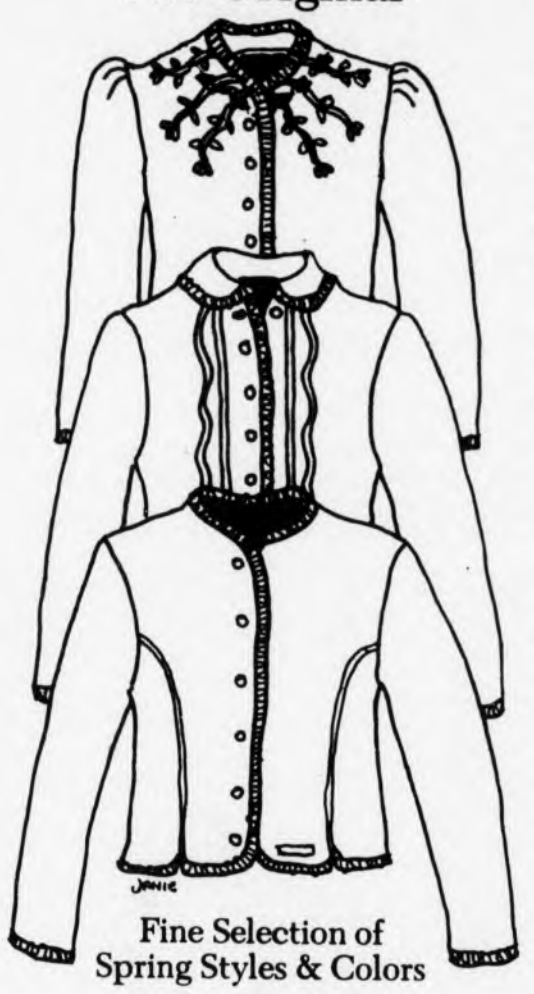
Laurence Mitchell

In the belief that he can contribute practical working knowledge of the specific "down-to-earth" problems that now form the major part of the responsibility of the board, Laurence J. Mitchell, of 271 North Main Street, a plumbing contractor with 20 years' experience in the business, has announced his candidacy for a three-year term on the Cohasset Board of Health.

"Since the enactment of 'Title V' legislation that deals with pollution control, the work of the board of health has changed radically, from strictly medical problems to approval and supervision of septic systems, drainage and waste disposal," Mitchell stated. "I have been down in the trenches, so to speak, with these types of problems every day for years in all part of the town, and I believe I can provide a needed practical experience in these matters on the board.

"I not only know about these problems first hand, but I know the people in the town and am available around town every day. I think I could perform a valuable service to the town on the board of health."

Holder of a master plumber's license and one of the town's two plumbing and gas inspectors, Mitchell has operated his own plumbing business in Cohasset, Scituate and neighboring towns for the past eight years. In the course of building his own operation, he took over the business formerly operated by Donald Clark. Prior to establishing his own business he worked for plumbing firms in the Boston area.



Mitchell attended Wentworth Institute where he studied engineering, Franklin Institute where he studied the development and operation of municipal water systems, and Northeastern University where he took education courses. Before entering the plumbing field, he served for over a year as a VISTA volunteer in Arkansas.

He is married to the former Ann Poland of Cohasset and the couple has two children.

New town hall hours approved

Selectmen approved new hours for the town hall. All town offices in the town hall will be open from 8:30 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. Offices will nowbe open from noon until 1 p.m.

Cable television meeting set for Thursday

Cohasset's Board of Selectmen and Cable Television Committee have scheduled a joint public hearing Thursday, March 10, at 7:30 p.m. at Town Hall to discuss cable television.

At this time, American Cablesystems will explain its proposed Cohasset system and answer questions posed by the selectmen, committee and public.

The cable company has proposed to build a 450 MHz, addressable system using signal receivers in Scituate. The system will be completed within six months of signing the final license.

Cohasset subscribers will have a choice of paying $4.95/month for 29 channels or $7.95/month for 38 channels. In addition to the basic services, American will offer residents seven premium services. These include Home Box Office ($8.95/ month), the Disney Channel ($8.95/month) and Sports Channel New England ($5.95/month). KEYFAX, the national videotext information system, will be available for $19.90/month.

American Cablesystems proposes to locate its communications center in Cohasset Village. This will house the company's business office and programming studio. Residents will be able to receive free training in video production and produce their own cable programs. The company has also promised to support the schools in their efforts to use the cable medium.

The system will have data transmission capabilities from system turn on and will be capable of carrying a range of non-entertainment services including home security, meter reading and data transfer.

American Cablesystems is a Massachusetts-based firm that has been active in South Shore communities. It built and operates the cable television systems in Quincy and Milton, and will soon build systems in Scituate, Hull, Norwell and Randolph. The company also operates systems in Arlington, Newburyport, Newbury, West Newbury and recently acquired the Ipswich cable system.

American was founded by Steven Dodge, a former vice president of the First National Bank of Boston, four years ago. A medium-sized firm, it is presently listed among the top 50 cable firms in the country.

The Cable Advisory Committee has been meeting since January, 1982. Following the public hearing, it will make a recommendation to the selectmen whether to accept American's proposal. The selectmen will make the final decision.

Flemmings to be feted

School asbestos problem under control reports Crowell

By Mike Berger

There is asbestos in the junior-senior high school and the Osgood School but the school department has almost finished a maintenance program which will control the problem.

There is no cause for alarm and children and staff are safe, School Supt. Eugene Crowell told the school committee Monday.

Recently, the media has reported on asbestos closing Duxbury High School and Norwell Town Hall. Crowell siad the administration has known about asbestos in the schools for several years and have constantly monitored the problem.

He said the school dept. is following state and federal environmental guidelines and a full report and inspection must be submitted to the state by June 28.

Recently architect Frank Bagge made a survey of suspected areas at the high school and Osgood School. During the February school vacation, pipes at both schools were wrapped with a special cast-like, fiberglass material.

All exposed surfaces which children could hit and knock asbestos from were boxed in with plywood.

Work in the boiler rooms in both schools will be completed in the summer, Crowell said.

In 1979 the state told the school department asbestos was present in the junior-senior high. But the officials said the problem was not dangerous unless it was allowed to deteriorate.

Crowell said asbestos can be controlled by two measures: removal and encapsulation.

Encapsulation encloses the asbestos with a special plastic fiber. Low-lying pipes which could be hit or vandalized are then encased with plywood.

Crowell said the asbestos in both schools is now controlled and there is no need for alarm. He said asbestos is dangerous when it becomes powdery and is in the atmosphere.

Bagge of the architectural firm Knight, Bagge and Anderson, Inc. of Boston has assured Crowell Cohasset is on the right course. "We have been on top of this all the way," Crowell said.

Before a final report is given to the committee and the state, air samples will be taken in both schools.

Deer Hill School will also be checked. Crowell said asbestos is in all buildings built in the early 1950s to 1973.

All work concerning asbestos control is done when children are not attending school. Custodians wear protective garments during control work.

Crowell and the School Facilities Study Committee toured all three school buildings Saturday and were given an explanation of the asbestos control program and a list of capital outlay items by Crowell.

These items were endorsed by the committee Monday.

They are in order of priority: roofing repair at the Deer Hill School and repairs to the cafeteria and kitchen. Roofing repairs will cost $20,000 and will be financed through an article at the April town meeting.

They are in order of priority:

1. Roofing repair at the Deer Hill School and repairs to the cafeteria and kitchen. Roofing repairs will cost $20,000 and will be financed through an article at the April town meeting.

2. Management Survey: a. Roofs of all school buildings. This survey will be financed out of the school budget and will cost $2,000. The cost of masonry repairs to all buildings are unknown. b. The masonry repair should be done between 1983-86 school dept. budget. Costs for asbestos control during the 1983 school year are not known but there could be some state aid available.

3. Repair or Replacement of the Sullivan gym floor. The cost of this program during 1983 is unknown but could be financed through insurance of a water damage problem.

4. Repair or installation of a kitchen floor in the junior-senior high school during 1983. This will cost $5,000 or more and will be financed from the school budget.

5. Phase 2 of the renovation of the high school auditorium. This program is planned for 1984-1986 and will cost $100,000. A special town meeting warrant article is planned.

6. Installation of an electronic alarm system for all schools. This is planned for 1984. A $10,000 warrant article is planned.

7. Repositioning and resurfacing schools' and town playgrounds and fields. This is planned for 1985 and will cost $20,000. A town meeting warrant is planned for financing.

8. Exterior painting for all schools during 1983. This could be a summer program and could be financed at $10,000 through the school budget.

School budget cuts . . .

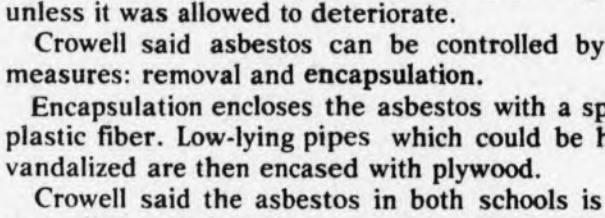
Further necessary expenditures for the balance of the fiscal year, he said, are architectural fees for the Deer Hill School and auditorium, $2,251; legal fees for the drug and alcohol guide and other, $4,000; required fire extinguishers and signs, $1,250; computers, $20,000; transportation costs for school bus gasoline, repairs and maintenance, $10,000; substitute salaries, $3,000, and the maintenance surveys for asbestos and roofs, $5,000.

These items total $45,501, leaving an estimate of available funds at $19,890.

"The best we can come up with is $5,000 or $6,000, and $10,000 if we are lucky," said Crowell.

To reach the near $20,000 amount, Crowell eliminated spending $8,500 for a gymnasium floor hoping insurance will pay for the repairs; repairs to the high school kitchen floor; filling of oil tanks at the Deer Hill and Osgood Schools which would amount to $8,000 and six pairs of new steel doors, at a total amount of $2,000.



Crowell said at first glance it would seem more could be cut from the electricity account, but even though the surcharge rate has dropped, the kilowatt cost has increased.

Meanwhile the advisory committee is standing firm on its guideline. The board required all other town departments not to exceed this year's spending level in next year's budget.

If the town had completed 100 percent revaluation, Prop. 2½ would allow for a town meeting override by two-thirds of the voters, Crowell said.

But the revaluation was not completed and the state set a valuation which restricted town spending even further.

The committee will hold a public budget hearing March 14 and will meet with the advisory board in an important meeting to review the entire school budget, Thursday, March 17 at Town Hall.

Selectmen to decide alternate sewer plan future

By Jane Lane

Selectmen are expected to decide this week whether they will support a citizen's petition to rescind the November special town meeting vote to seek alternative sewer systems solutions.

A letter requesting selectmen's support of an article within the annual April town meeting was signed by sewer plant operator Manuel Salvador. Selectmen delayed any decision on the proposal until they could study the issue further.

It is too late to submit the petition article in the annual town meeting, selectmen determined. The question now would be whether to hold a special town meeting in which the matter could be publically considered. Town Counsel Richard Henderson will make a decision this week regarding that question.

Selectman Henry Ainslie said it was too late to schedule a special town meeting within the annual meeting in April. He said he would oppose the additional costs of holding a separate town meeting at a later date.

The proposal written by Salvador was read by selectmen at their meeting last week. Later in that same session, sewer commissioner and alternative plan proponent Charles DeSantis tried to learn how selectmen would vote on the proposal to rescind the November decision.

He urged selectmen to expedite a decision regarding that proposal, along with a decision to renegotiate the Agreement of Judgement court order, or to petition to bring the state to court. Last week state Assistant Attorney General Ann Rogers declined to renegotiate the court order to allow Cohasset more time for an alternative study, or funds for an alternative study.

Last week the sewer commission and the sewer advisory committee unanimously voted to hire Ward Engineering Associates to complete an alternative sewer system. The commission also voted to advise selectmen to spend up to $10,000 to fund that study.

The sewer commission was going to meet with Ward Engineering until they were advised the meeting was not posted according to the Open Meeting Law requirements and would have to be rescheduled.

Selectman Chairman Henry Ainslie noted that he was personally against the choice of Ward Engineering. As a professional engineer, Ainslie thought the company acted unprofessionally when it "stepped into a project" already underway by another engineering firm, Metcalf and Eddy.

He questioned the company's ethics when the firm came to Cohasset last year and advised the town that less expesnive sewer alternatives could be devised when a sewer plan was already under construction.

DeSantis vehemently disagreed with the selectman, and answered that Ward Engineering came to town after being invited at the request of James Lagroterria of the advisory board. DeSantis took exception to Ainslie's charges, and added "it took courage and ethics to defend what they (Ward) feel is professionally absolute. They defended the rights of the consumer."

Raymond Kasperowicz of South Main Street said he appreciated the town's attempt to seek a "second opinion" regarding the $13.7 million Metcalf and Eddy project. But Ainslie answered that one does not seek a second medical opinion after the operation.

Ainslie said he will not vote for the sewer commission and advisory committee's first choice of Ward Engineering. He said he would support the committee's second choice of Lombardo and Associates.

"You assigned an excellent committee that has worked for two months and a number of hours. The members came up with a reasonable vote. You people were not engaged in those processes (exception, Mary Jane McArthur who is a selectman and a member of the sewer advisory committee). The sewer commission rubber-stamped the advisory group's decision. I have great respect for their decision. They did a magnificent job for this town. I hope you take the advice of the sewer commissioners and go along with their decision," DeSantis replied.

DeSantis emphasized that all decisions must be made quickly. He noted that two weeks had already lapsed since the town was notified that the alternative study would not be funded by the state. He urged selectmen to quickly decide the next course of action. The sewer commissioner said it was vital the commission talk with special environmental counsel Thomas Bracken to prepare future plans.

Selectmen repeatedly told DeSantis they will make no decision until they have been advised by Henderson. McArthur noted that legal questions have to be addressed before any course of action is developed.

When DeSantis asked if he and the sewer commissioners could sit with selectmen and town counsel during the discussions, Ainslie said no.

Kasperowicz said it was that division between the board of selectmen, and the sewer commission and advisory group which will hurt the town.

"I feel that there's a wall separating selectmen and DeSantis. I feel like I come from a different town. I want to know, will Charlie find out what's happening with the town counsel and selectmen," Kasperowicz said.

Selectmen said it will be a matter of days before town counsel renders a decision. DeSantis will immediately be informed of any decision by selectmen.

DeSantis then asked if a meeting could be scheduled for the end of this week, with selectmen, town counsel, the sewer commission and advisory group. Selectmen agreed to the suggestion. In the meantime, everything hinges on town counsel's decision this week.

Water shutoffs will proceed, says Curley

Customers of the Cohasset Water Department with overdue accounts have been properly notified and will not be notified again that their water may be shut off, according to Superintendent Ben Curley. Shutoffs will proceed during March, he said.

"We have notified customers with overdue accounts, both by certified letter and by telephone, that their water may be shut off unless we receive payment," said Curley.

"The Water Commissioners voted unanimously Wednesday, March 2 that customers with delinquent accounts have been notified, and do not have to be notified again before water service is shut off," he explained.

Last year, said Curley, the Water Dept. sent three notices to customers with overdue accounts, and gave additional notification before water was actually shut off. With about 300 customers to be notified, the mailings are expensive, he added.

"They've had every opportunity to pay what they owe," said Curley. "It's not fair to all the people in Cohasset who do pay their water bill for so many people to owe so much money to the Water Dept."

A total of about $100,000 is outstanding from overdue accounts.

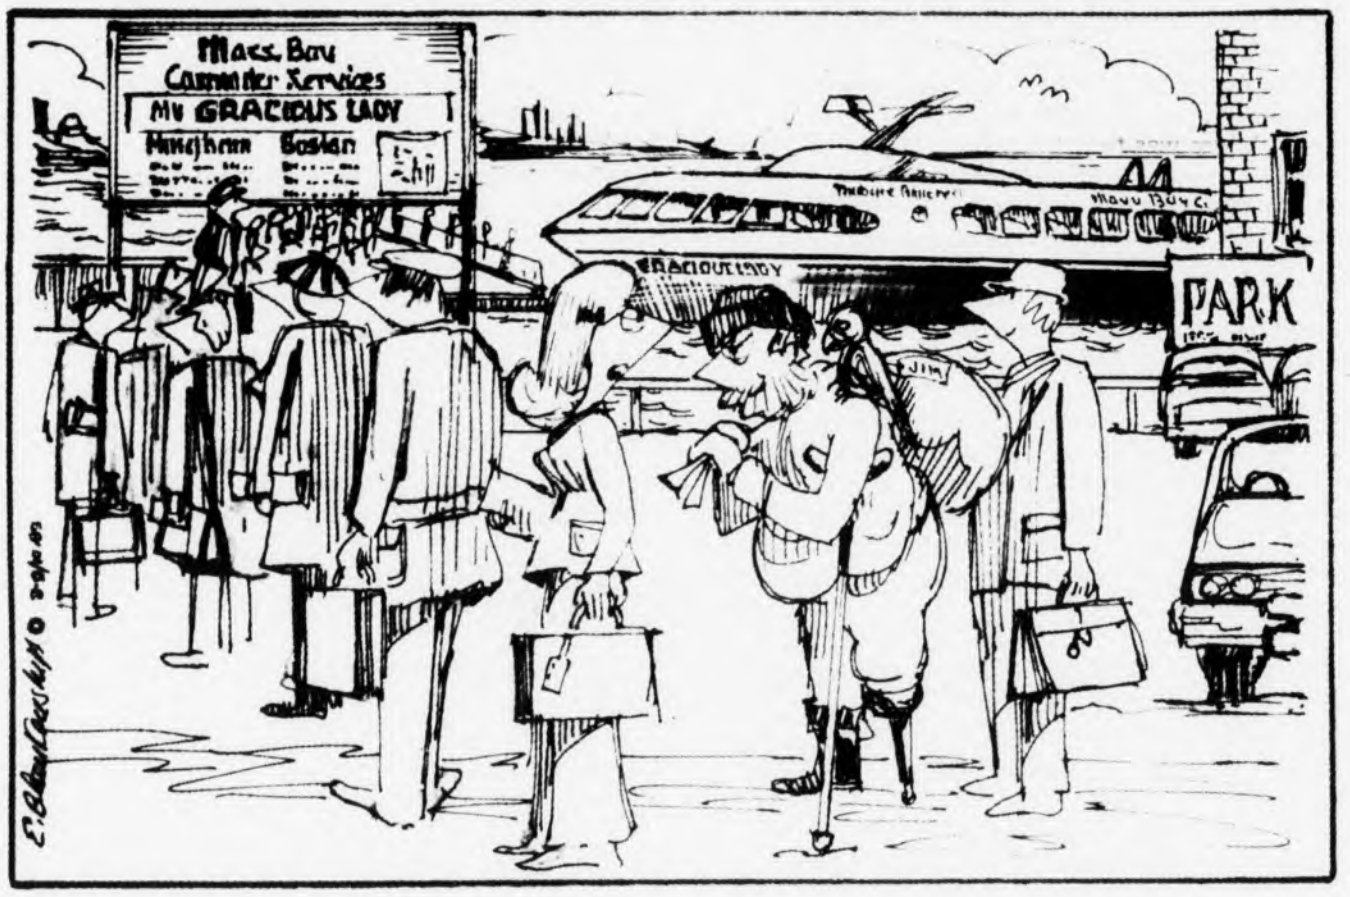
Separate issues

Last week we made some recommendations about the advisability of non-action with respect to adult book store zones. We are glad that town officials, led by Selectman Chairman Henry Ainslie, see the problem the same way we do. If any of you have any lingering doubts that creating an adult book store zone would be fraught with risks, consider that Boston's notorious combat zone came about as an effort to confine and limit pornography.

This week we'd like to say a word about video games. Some equate video games with adult book stores : they regard both as undesirable, and they might therefore be inclined to put both in the same place if they had the choice.

Nothing could be an unwiser action. Video games are by their nature clean and recreational. It seems wholly obvious to us that young folks partaking of them are having fun, not breaking the law, not trashing the town, and are not hanging out in unlighted areas where their parents can only wonder what they are up to.



So why all the fuss about video games? Well for one thing the history of man reports instances when the occasional client of a video game has neglected his homework, dropped a coke can on the sidewalk, and driven too fast entering or exiting the said video parlor.

Adolescents, in short, sometimes show the worst characteristics of their age group while partaking of video games. But adolescents wear their sins on their sleeves. We middle-aged delinquents may drive drunk to some sleazy saloon and behave perfectly lasciviously while there. But somehow editorials don't get written about our behavior, nor do municipal ordinances get written to outlaw our loci of recreation.

No, we save our scapegoating wrath for our adolescents. We exercise our outrage on their life style, and lately the trend (how we middle-aged follow trends!) is to come down on adolescents for their fondness for video games. Could this be because the average score in a video contest between the under 20 and the over 40 would be about 600 to 6? Who knows?!

What matters here as a question of public policy is that video parlors not be confused with adult book stores. We don't necessarily endorse either. What we do suggest is that the two are and ought to be totally separate questions.

NEWS ITEM — New day dawns for harried South Shore commuters. Police ballot question is illegal... percent of the registered voters signing the petition.

However, Henderson said the citizens' article presented to Town Clerk Charles Marks refers to the requirement of five years with a police chief out of Civil Service and the incumbent chief's approval.

This decision, said Henderson, means the ballot question is void for the April 9 election. Executive Secretary Mark Lanza said the question cannot be reworded because it is illegal for the town to alter a citizens requested ballot.

After reading Henderson's decision, Barrow said he would ask Secretary of State Michael Connolly for his opinion on the legality of Henderson's decision. He said his attorney will be examining it and he plans to discuss the matter with selectmen.

In a related matter, Kealey is expected to sign a final contract as chief and be sworn in before March 31.

Lanza said Kealey is still under the rules of a temporary chief's contract but the negotiations for the full-time chief are almost over. It's up to Kealey and his attorney to review the contract and sign it.

As Acting Chief, Kealey still retains his Civil Service elegibility because he was promoted from patrolman.

Before Henderson's decision, Kealey said he wasn't sure if a Civil Service extension or a leave of absence was needed for three or six months pending the outcome of the Civil Service ballot question.

If the petition is presented at another special or annual town meeting, it still is unclear what would happen to Kealey if the petition was granted, Lanza said.

Would he have to pass a standardized Civil Service test to be eligible for the chief's position? Would he be able to take the exam before anyone else and merely have to pass it to compete for the highest score?

Lanza said the answers to those questions are still unclear. Henderson and counsel for the state Civil Service have different interpretations of the state law. "It's hanging in limbo," Lanza said.

Henderson's decision does not affect a town meeting question calling for a "strong police chief." This would mean the chief could set his own rules and regulations and enforce them without political interference from selectmen.

Kealey told the Mariner, realistically, there is not much difference between a strong or a weak police chief.

Under the provisions of a strong chief, Kealey said, the rules and regulations may still be under the jurisdiction of selectmen. If selectmen do not approve the chief's rules within 30 days, the rules become law.

Either way, Kealey said, "I could work with both systems. I believe in presenting my ideas with the selectmen and working with them. I have no problem whatsoever in talking to the selectmen.

"Whatever the people want I can work under. I am not taking sides," he said.

Once Kealey is sworn in, he plans to appoint a detective from within the ranks of the police force.

Ward Engineering outlines sewer plan

By Patricia Anne Walsh

Joseph Ward of Ward Engineering Associates outlined steps to combat the state's denial of $90,000 to Cohasset for a full alternative sewer study at the sewer commissioners meeting Monday.

Ward also outlined steps which might solve the sewage problems of the Veterans area of town to Muriel Silvia.

The commissioners' first choice for an engineering firm to study sewer system alternatives was Ward Engineering, Second LEA and third Lombardo.

Commission Chairman Joseph Gwinn notified Town Counsel Richard Henderson that the commission planned to send a "letter to Ward requesting he draw up an Agreement for review by the board and town counsel. The execution of this agreement is required 30 days after the state offers step one funding assistance."

The commission gave Ward a stack of books and booklets approximately two-feet high of studies done on Cohasset sewage problems, including Metcalf and Eddy's.

The commissioners will send a letter to the state informing them that Ward is working to solve Cohasset's problems. Ward will send the state documents to show the scope of his current studies.

All the commissioners agreed to answer fully all the points raised by the state in the Feb. 18, 20 page document from Asst. Atty. Gen., Anne Rogers, it would take the expenditure of $10,000.

Pounder asked if $20,000 would be better, but Ward proposed that an adequate answer could be framed for $10,000, which would include some on-site investigation.

Ward also agreed to appear before the April Town Meeting, if necessary.

Muriel Silvia, of 10 Arrowwood Road, a long time resident of the "Veterans Area" questioned whether the proposed sewer system would take care of that section of town. She described clay soils, puddling, poor drainage, cellar problems, etc., and said the area is frequently "mucky", with the overflow polluting Lily Pond, where the water intake for the town is located.

Ward said that the problem might be solved with a "curtain drain" surrounding the area, which would lower the water table, and mound or effluent gravity septic systems. He said such work would be 94 percent government funded, if it solved on-site sewage problems.

He said the most difficult installation they had ever encountered cost $10,540 for on-site work for a homeowner, and that even if one cost $14,000 (worst case,) it was still cheaper than the $17,000 average. Metcalf and Eddy have agreed to show the cost effectiveness to the state.

Murray's memos

Report from the state house

By State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray

The Mass. Caucus of Women's Legislation elected your representative Chairman. One of the first events presided over was the 163rd Anniversary of Susan B. Anthony's birthday February 15.

Susan B. Anthony was an ardent crusader for the cause of a woman's right to vote and the abolition of slavery. She campaigned throughout the nation for the right of women to control their own property and to vote.

JANUARY UNEMPLOYMENT

Massachusetts' unemployment rate for January was 7.9 percent.

The state's rate during December 1982 was 7.7 percent.

The national rate was 10.4 percent for January, down from 10.8 percent in December. (A national rate of 10.2 percent, which includes military personnel, was also released by the national Bureau of Labor Statistics.)

Despite a slight increase, the Commonwealth's unemployment rate remains 2.5 percentage points below the national rate and continues to be the lowest of the major industrial states.

Industry data show a small drop in employment in all industrial sectors. While the wholesale and retail trade sector sustained a larger than usual seasonal decrease, primary metals stabilized after almost a year of job losses.

The increase in national defense spending is beginning to translate into employment increases in Massachusetts.

Last month there were 2,759,000 people employed in Massachusetts, compared to 2,744,000 in December 1982. Employment in January of last year was 2,790,000.

In January 238,000 workers were unemployed compared to 230,000 in December 1982 and 216,000 in January 1982.

In January 1982 the unemployment rate was 7.2 percent in the state and 8.6 percent in the nation.

The non-seasonally adjusted rates for January 1983 were 8.7 percent for Massachusetts and 11.2 percent for the nation.

MISSING PERSONS

The State Police established last week the first state missing persons bureau which will act as a clearinghouse for information on missing persons throughout the state.

Trooper Joan Wisher, who will run the unit under the department's Bureau of Investigative Services, says that one of the big problems up to now has been that there was no central place for information on all missing persons in Massachusetts and no office coordinating all agencies investigating missing persons.

Currently, there are 6,000 missing persons in Massachusetts and 90 percent of those are juveniles.

The unit will act as a liaison to non-profit agencies such as Childfind, and also to various social agencies. By providing pictures and information regarding runaways to these agencies, there is hope that some of the missing children can be found — for example, in child pornography and prostitution cases.

The Bureau also encourages finger-printing of children that some communities have adopted to aid in investigations. But, it would be left up to local communities to implement such programs.

TAXING SEASON

The Massachusetts Department of Revenue (DOR) announced last week that the department is increasing this year's available assistance to taxpayers.

In addition to its Boston office located at 100 Cambridge St., (Room 2106), and 10 district offices, more than 36 other locations are planned throughout the state. This is a major increase of 33 locations over last year.

Elderly and handicapped taxpayers will be provided with special assistance at all locations. The Dept. of Revenue also plans to provide classroom instruction to the many Volunteer Income Tax Assistance Organizations (VITA) throughout the Commonwealth.

Early returns indicate two typical taxpayer errors on the new forms. One error is claiming only a $2,000 personal exemption when in fact this exemption has been increased to $2,200. It appears that this error is the result of copying the exemption from last year's return.

Also, taxpayers eligible to claim a deduction of one-half of the rent they paid during 1982 (up to the $2,500 maximum) for their principal Massachusetts residence have been omitting Massachusetts Schedule RD when filing. Taxpayers who fail to include the landlord's name and address will have any refund delayed until such schedule or information is received.

Senior citizens should become aware of a new federal income tax law that may allow them to claim several tax exemptions. Under the new law, certain interest and dividend payments may be withheld beginning July 1, 1983. Elderly citizens are reminded that some of them may claim an exemption for the withholding, but a certificate must be filed to claim exemption.

The exemption may be claimed if any one of the following was applicable for the 1982 tax year: The tax liability was $600 or less; you are 65 or older, and your tax liability last year was $1,500 or less; either you or your spouse are 65 or older and you filed a joint tax return with a liability of $2,500 or less; you were not required to file a return last year.

If you are interested in the dates and locations where state examiners will be assisting the public in preparing returns, or if you have any other questions concerning your taxes, please call, 722-2400, or write to Room 134, State House, Boston, MA 02133.

Mariner survey

This spring's annual town meeting will be an important one for determining Cohasset's future.

The annual town meting and election will be held Saturday, April 2 and Saturday, April 9. The Mariner invites residents to air their views on potential town meeting articles, ballot questions and general opinions of local government.

This survey will be in the next three issues of the Mariner with the results published March 30.

1. Should the town rescind its November special town meeting vote and revert to the Metcalf and Eddy sewer plan?
—— Yes ——No ——No Opinion.

2. Should the town continue with the Charles DeSantis sponsored article and seek other alternatives to the town's sewer problems?
——Yes ——No ——No Opinion.

3. Should the position of police chief be returned to Civil Service?
——Yes ——No ——No Opinion.

4. Should the position of police chief continue to be solely under the jurisdiction of selectmen?
——Yes ——No ——No Opinion.

5. Should a special citizen's task force be re-established to screen police chief candidates?
——Yes——No ——No Opinion.

6. Should the town allow the police chief to be a "strong chief," free from interference from the selectmen and not under Civil Service?
——Yes ——No ——No Opinion.

7. Should the school committee be allowed to exceed the advisory board's spending guidelines?
——Yes ——No ——No Opinion.

8. Should the town landfill be run by a private contractor?
——Yes ——No ——No Opinion.

9. Should police officers be hired to patrol Cohasset Village on a 24-hour basis?
——Yes ——No ——No Opinion.

10. Should the planning board establish an adult entertainment zone before a business firm applies?
——Yes ——No ——No Opinion.

11. Should the town go forward with the harbor expansion project?
——Yes ——No ——No Opinion.

12. If the town does expand the harbor, should recreational boaters be allowed to use the new pier?
——Yes ——No ——No Opinion.

13. Should the school department be charged for water and sewer costs with the costs included in the school budget?
——Yes ——No ——No Opinion.

14. Should the town prohibit a special town meeting from voting changes in the structure of town government?
——Yes ——No ——No Opinion.

15. Should guests of residents be charged a beach and landfill sticker?
——Yes ——No ——No Opinion.

Please mail surveys to Cohasset Mariner, Box 71, Cohasset 02025, or drop off at Colonial Pharmacy.

T.M. articles . . .

Other warrant articles reviewed last week by selectmen include a request to require all new businesses to install automatic water sprinkler systems. The water commission supports this article, Lanza said, although Fire Chief Martin Dooley said he would have to research it further before he made any final decision.

Selectman Rocco Laugella agreed there was a lot to be considered in this proposal, regarding its effect on the town. Lanza added the proposal would not affect existing businesses except those which constructed new additions.

He also noted that the article could be withdrawn from the floor of town meeting.

Selectmen said they will wait until town counsel completes a draft of the planning board's zoning by-law amendment to authorize the establishment of an adult entertainment district. The planning board must hold a public hearing on the by-law change proposal before town meeting considers the request.

Selectman Mary Jane McArthur said town counsel is "looking into drafting an article" and after that, selectmen will discuss the issue. Selectman Henry Ainslie said that in general principle, he was in agreement with the planning board.

In other action last week, selectmen and recreation director Jack Worley discussed regulation revisions regarding the issuance of facilities and health stickers in 1984.

Worley said he was confused by a directive from advisory board stating that transfer of funds for the stickers will be approved for the selectmen's budget, not the recreation department budget.

The board said that since the recreation department is under the authority of the selectmen, the $1,000 fund for the stickers should be placed in their budget. The stickers had previously been issued through the police department.

Selectmen explained although the recreation department agreed to issue the beach and landfill stickers, selectmen still maintained final authority over the department, and the stickers. Executive Secretary Lanza agreed selectmen should retain jurisdiction over the procedure.

"Worley said his concern was that he didn't want "to get caught between two boards." Lanza explained there are strict rules and regulations governing the issuance of the stickers, and there would be "little room for interpretation" on the part of the recreation director. Lanza said he did not foresee any operational problems with the revised procedure.

Selectmen approved several regulations regarding the issuance of the facilities and health stickers. A resident will pay $10 for the first sticker and $2 for a replacement. Senior citizens will pay $4 for a sticker. Non-residents will pay $15 for a Government Island sticker.

Guest permits will be abolished. Worley said that has always been an area of possible abuse. Selectmen determined it will be responsibility of the host to transport his guests to and from the beach.

Worley will meet with members of the Sandy Beach Association to discuss these revisions.

No hotel-motel permits will be issued. If a sticker-holder sells his car, or changes his license plate, there will be a $2 replacement charge. There is a regulation stating that all stickers are non-gransferable and the permit will be revoked from anyone violating that rule.

After discussing what fee should be charged to non-resident business owners, Lanza said he will investigate whether separate stickers could be issued for the landfill and beach facilities.

Selectman McArthur said most business owners only want to use the dump. Worley suggested the board of health administer a separate sticker for the landfill, and establish a separate set of rules and regulations. At present, non-resident business owners will receive one sticker issued to a business vehicle.

The stickers will be issued from the recreation department at town hall from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday through Thursday, and 7-9 p.m. on Tuesday and Thursday. No stickers will be issued Friday, but they will be issued from 9 a.m. until noon Saturday, May 23 to July 16.

Area fishermen want changes in harbor wharf plan

By Patricia Anne Walsh

Despite recent claims that area fishermen oppose the proposed town pier expansion, a majority of fishermen who attended harbor study committee meeting last week feel they could accept the plan with some changes.

Recently selectman Rocco Laugelle said fishermen told him they were not in favor of improving the Government Island Pier as proposed by Anderson-Nichols. He asked for a survey of the fishermen.

Harbormaster Harry Ritter said 60 letters were sent to commercial fishermen who use the harbor, but only 21 attended the meeting March 3.

Fishermen present included: William Figueiredo, Mike Hevey, Herbert Jason, John Small, Bernard Salvador, Mark Salvador, Glenn Salvador, Robert Figueiredo, Jack Silva, Robert Pattison, Bill Stone, Scott Herzog, Peter Hutt, Edward Figueiredo, Michael Grimes, William Kelley and Ritter.

Most of the questions were asked by Mike Hevey of Marshfield, formerly of Cohasset. The Figueiredos had several objections. When the harbor was previously dredged, the Figueiredos said, several rocks and pieces of ledge were not blasted out of the shallow harbor resulting in a hazard to navigation. They told of damaged hulls and propellers, and said that after the rocks were marked with pipes, the tide covered the pipes and boats still sustained damage.

Selectmen Rocco Laugelle and Mary Jane McArthur said they would support removing the rocks if the harbor were to be dredged in the future.

The pier extension study cost $21,500. Anderson-Nichols was paid $17,500 through State Coastal Zone Management funded by the U.S. Dept. of Commerce. The remaining money was "in-kind" contributions from Cohasset such as use of the Harbormaster's boat.

Anderson-Nichols recommended a granite extension which will cost $450,000. They expect 50 percent will be funded by future state legislation, and the remainder by the town and fishermen's user fees.

McArthur said she had learned from Joe Lerner, a state director of conservation services, that if federal construction was used, the pier might have to provide facilities for pleasure boaters, and might not be restricted to use by fishermen.

Presently, boats larger than 45 feet are not allowed to moor in the harbor, but the fishermen questioned whether the new facilities might not attract large draggers or other boats for offloading.

"I've already seen Cohasset Fisherman Charlie Butman's 72 foot boat in the Harbor three times!" one fisherman said. "Even though it's shallow he made room by turning his props." Butman usually docks in Scituate.

Charles Fink, chairman of the harbor study committee, responded to a question regarding the Cox estate which occupies most of the northern side of the harbor. He said piers could be built there if the necessary three permits were secured from government agencies.

Fishermen also questioned if sufficient parking wuld be provided for the extended pier.

Fink called for a vote from the fishermen regarding the plan. Four were opposed.

He then called for a vote of those who would favor the plan if there were some changes and 12 fishermen voted yes.

Fisherman Glenn Salvador questioned if the federal and state agencies would fund any future studies for improvements in Cohasset if the results were not endorsed by potential recipients.

"You people should have been attending the meetings the last two years, and voicing your objections, so the money wasn't wasted," he said.

After the fishermen left, the harbor committee resumed its meeting. It was noted that many fishermen who had questioned the new plans do not use Government Island Pier. Instead they use another dock called "Fishermen's Pier." Bernard Salvador complained that they dock longer than 30 minutes without permission of the harbormaster and the dock is littered with barrels and bait.

The committee then moved "to request that the selectmen notify the harbormaster to strictly enforce the Bylaws referring to Cohasset Harbor operations." Harbormaster Ritter seconded the motion which was passed unanimously by the six (of seven) members present.

Member Richard Barrow said Ritter should have been enforcing the bylaws all along, and "this just shows they have not always been enforced."

MEETING MINUTES

Fink told the Mariner that some of the 1981 and 1982 minutes of the committee would be available in the selectmen's office. Some meeting did not get a quorum, Ritter said.

Other minutes are "still being worked on" Fink added.

He acknowledged that a letter from former chairman of the selectmen, Arthur Clark, dated Sept. 22, 1981, regarding keeping minutes and sending copies to the selectmen had been "mislaid."

However, Executive Secretary Mark Lanza said they have not received any committee minutes.

Community Center dance

The Cohasset Community Center is planning a Teenage Dance featuring a local band, The Identity Crisis, to be held at the Cohasset Town Hall, Friday, March 11, 8 to 11 p.m. Admission will be $3 per person and $5 per couple. This dance is limited to high school students from Cohasset.

Cub Scout happenings...

BLUE AND GOLD DINNER

Cohasset Cub Scout Pack No. 38 and their families celebrated the annual Blue and Gold Dinner at Cohasset High School. One hundred and seventy-five attended the function.

The guest of honor, Robert Blaisdell, is the Mass. State Director of the U.S. Karate Association and owner of the N.E. Academy of Karate. Having 18 years experience in martial arts, and a former high school teacher, Blaisdell is the director of three martial arts academies in Weymouth, Stoughton and Cohasset.

Accompanying Blaisdell was his demonstration staff from the Weymouth branch who did a demonstration of karate's various techniques and form.

Karate utilizes total concentration of mental and physical skills.

Merle Brown, committee chairman, and Jeff Forsdick, cubmaster, had the parents present their sons with awards and year pins the cubs had earned.

Bear Badge, Den I, Billy Baird, Mark Bath, Michael Cisneros, Linc Marsac and Jonathon Mitchell.

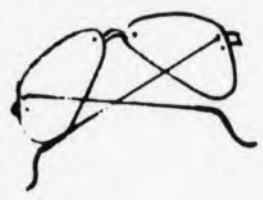
Bobcat, Ian Fitzpatrick, Den 7.

Wolf, Chris Bartow, Den 5, Bill Murphy, Den 8 and Brian Conant, Den 8.

Silver Arrows, Evan Spencer, 2 arrows, Den 6.

Webelo Badge, Matt Silvia, Webelo I.

Webelo, Matt Silvia, Webelo I, Sportsman; David Zaloga, Webelo III, engineer, forester, outdoorsman and naturalist; David Farrag, Webelo I, artist, traveler and scientist.



The Blue and Gold evening ended with a film, former Bruin Bobby Orr's, "First Goal."

CHS MUSIC DEPT. WEEK

March 7-11 marks the national observance of "Music in Our Schools Week." This annual observance is set to make the school and community more aware of school music activities. Cohasset Jr./Sr. High Music Department is planning an open house Thursday, Mar. 10 and Friday, Mar. 11. Music classes which meet during the school day will demonstrate some of the activities and skills involved. Also a "Look-Listen" table will be on display.

Students may sign out of study halls and entire classes are welcome (accompanied by a teacher). Parents and interested townspeople are also welcome and may call the school for the schedule: 383-6100.

MATH DEPT. NEWS

Steven Persy of Grade 11 is a Certificate Winner and Fred Zotos and Gia Barressi of Grade 12, are the runner-ups in the yearly Olympiad Math Exam.

Cohasset is in sixth place in Norfolk County in the New England Mathematics League. Leaders after four contests are Wayne Thomas, Chris Mahoney and Elizabeth Glasfeld.

The winners were: Contest 1: Elizabeth Glasfeld, Grade 12; Contest 2: a three-way tie between Sean O'Connor, Grade 12, Chris Mahoney, Grade 12, and Wayne Thomas, Grade 11; Contest 3: Peter Dagget, Grade 11; Contest 4: Wayne Thomas, Grade 11, Mason Sandell, Grade 10, Sean O'Connor, Grade 12, and Joy Pratt, Grade 12.

In the Computer Science League, after four contests, the computer science team placed in the top five in the state. Members of the computer science team are: Sue Hobson, Maureen Kelly, Elaine Mullen, Joy Pratt, Gia Barressi, Ken Breitkreing, Steve Camardo, Bill Davenport, Paul Johnson, William Langmaid, Wayne Thomas, Fred Zoltos, Liz Glasfeld and Sean O'Connor.

LEACH TO EVALUATE

Edwin Leach, a teacher at Cohasset High School, was invited to serve on the visiting committee which will evaluate Martha's Vineyard Regional High School March 6-9.

Founded in 1885, the New England Association is the oldest regional accrediting association in the country and is recognized by the U.S. Department of Education as the sole agency to award accreditation to education institutions in New England.

The Association is a voluntary league of over 1,140 public and independent schools, colleges and universities, and vocational, technical and career institutions. Of these, approximately 660 public schools have been accredited through the Association's Commission on Public Schools which assists individual schools to improve the quality of education through a process of evaluation and accreditation.

Leach will help review various educational components of the school and will assist in the preparation of the final report of the Martha's Vineyard Regional High School evaluation. He will have special responsibility for the report on Special Education.

By Joan Pinkham

Wouldn't it be great after a day's shopping, or when company drops in, to be able to go to the freezer and take out a meal you had already prepared? It's a nice feeling — like money in the bank — to know that lying in wait is a tasty casserole, a loaf of crusty bread and perhaps a dessert, or cookie or two. Quite often, the steak or scallops or crepes you ordered the last time you ate out had been frozen and heated with the magic touch of a microwave before being served to you and so, like "Chef Boyardi" you, too, can produce a satisfying meal on short notice. All you need to go with Phyll Carlson's recipe are some hungry people, rolls and a salad as you enjoy her

ZIPPY BEEF CASSEROLE

1 lb. hamburg lightly sauteed with ½ c. chopped onion and celery leaves. (Phyll uses dehydrated, sprinking what she thinks is necessary).
1 c. cooked elbow macaroni
1 c. shredded cheddar cheese
1 small can tomato sauce
1 can mushroom soup heated with 1/3 c. milk
Combine all in dish and bake 45 min. covered. Remove cover and top with crushed potato chips. Bake 15 min. uncovered.

Having been on a week's vacation (thanks to Bucky for taking over the column with his usual expertise), I never did get a chance to tell you of Janet Ingram's Valentine tea served on a grey afternoon in her plant-filled home overlooking the river and marshes. The tea table was laden with tempting dishes and graced with a pot of pink cyclamen. Janet had used her freezer to advantage, for in her free time before the tea, she would bake and store the pound cake, dainty cookies and even this jellyroll which was layered with raspberry jam made from her own berries.

JELLY ROLL

2/3 c. sifted cake flour
1 tsp. baking powder
¼ tsp. salt
¾ c. sugar
3 eggs, separated
1 T. cold water
½ tsp. grated lemon rind
1 T. lemon juice
1 c. jelly or jam
Mix and sift flour, baking powder and salt. Beat egg yolks until thick and lemon-colored. Gradually beat in sugar, then water, lemon rind and juice. Fold in half of stiffly beaten egg whites. Gradually fold in flour, sifting about 3 T. at a time over surface. Fold in remaining egg whites. Turn into greased 9x13½x1" pan, lined with heavy paper and again greased. Bake in moderate oven(350 degrees) about 20 min. Quickly turn from pan onto paper sprinkled with powdered sugar. Cut off crisp edges and remove paper. Spread with any tart jelly or jam. Roll lengthwise, wrap in paper and cook on rack. Roll may be frozen.

All too often our freezers are chock full of leftovers which we finally end up feeding to the dog, or soup bones we certainly intend to do something about someday. The trouble is, if you have something particularly tempting stashed away, somehow it doesn't hang around that long. I mean, who could forget that lying in wait is this

CANTON TUNA

1 can condensed cream of celery soup
⅓ c. milk
Green pepper and celery
1 can chow mein noodles
1 can tuna
Thin soup with milk, add the tuna, a bit of chopped green pepper and celery. Heat and serve over noodles. Serves 4.

Unfortunately, not everything can be frozen before that special occasion is scheduled, as is the case with Janet's

TEATIME SANDWICHES

Soften two 3 oz. pkgs. cream cheese. Add 2 T. blue cheese, crumbled. Add ½ c. finely chopped nuts, ¼ tsp. grated onion, ½ tsp. Worcestershire sauce, ¼ tsp. salt, ⅓ c. mayonnaise. Mix Well. Chill. Spread on lightly buttered bread rounds. Makes 1⅓ cups.

A Review

'Dangerous Corner' doesn't turn

By Jane Lane

Last week for three consecutive nights, the Cohasset Dramatic Club presented the 1930's mystery "Dangerous Corner."

It was the second in a series of three plays to be presented in the 62nd season of the dramatic club.

The first presentation was "Scenes From American Life," a series of vignettes focused on life in Buffalo, N.Y. in the past, present and future. A contemporary play, it was a successful version of a difficult production.

"Dangerous Corner" is out-dated theatre that has worn out its welcome. Like a tired visitor standing at the door, this play has arrived once again without invitation or anticipation.

The play is billed as a classic "whodunit" in the elegant style of the 1930's. The playwright is noted author, novelist, essayist and dramatist, J.B. Priestly.

This was the English author's first attempt at playwriting. It opened in May, 1932, produced by Tyrone Guthrie. Although certain critics, mainly of the magazine and literary genre, were impressed with Priestly's baptism into theatre, the dailies panned the production.

Despite the generally negative reviews, the play continued for a long run, thanks to a strong production hand belonging to playwright Priestly.

The play has been presented in just about every country throughout the world, by about every amateur theatre group from here to New South Wales.

The strength of the play is its technical effects. It is said Priestly took only ten days to complete the play because he had the mystery of this jigsaw puzzle already placed in his mind.

Characterization is not essential in this play. The effectiveness of the production is the way in which the audience succumbs to the tension of involvement. The conclusion is intended to startle the audience, which leaves the theatre with a disturbing, yet provoking sense of uncertaintly.

While the Cohasset Dramatic Club presentation complied with these demands, the reason it does not succeed is because of the play itself. "Dangerous Corner" may have been a moderate success in the 1930's, but audiences have become a good deal more sophisticated since that time.

For years now, we have sat in our livingrooms and solved the mysteries before us each night with our television contemporaries, Kojack, Columbo, Quincy and hundreds of others. We have accepted plot twists and contortions so readily that the simple one placed before us at the conclusion of Priestly's play merely amuses, rather than arouses us.

To be sure, the scheme Priestly sets before us is clever. The play involves a small group of persons who slowly unravel the answer to one mystery while they inadvertently expose a few others. As the play approaches a close, the audience is lulled into a false denouement.

Just when the audience thinks the play is about to wrap up, Priestly jolts the spectator into viewing a second, opposite version of the mystery. We are left with a question — a neat way to hang the audience. Which ending was real and which was not? But the biggest question for me was, who cares?

Acting in this play came secondary to plot. The characters in "Dangerous Corner" were an amusing conglomeration of personalities. It was interesting to watch the plot unwind, and as it did, so did the secrets held by various characters.

Again, this device might have been original and acceptable in the 1930's, but audiences have become so accustomed to our daily soap operas that complex anti-heroes have become typical characterizations.

Jane Turner becomes Betty Whitehouse of Drama Club's "Dangerous Corner."

Performances by the Cohasset Dramatic Club blended well with the elegant gossip Priestly portrayed in that era 50 years ago. Sarah DeLima as Freda Chatfield was perfectly coy in her portrayal of the publisher's wife.

Robert Chatfield, played commendably by Derek Holmes, was the catalyst who yearned for the mystery to be unwound.

One by one, outlandish secrets are hesitantly revealed by characters, including Charles Stanton, played exceptionally well by Joe Coyle, Olwen Peel, played by Andrea Dassori, and Betty and Gordon Whitehouse, played by Jane Turner and Carl Slotnick.

Inch by inch, the mystery of who shot Chatfield's brother is solved, but not before many other subplots are exposed.

As Charles Stanton warned at the beginning of the play, "telling the truth is the same as skidding around corners at 60," to which another replied, "life is a series of dangerous curves."

Perhaps this is one play the Cohasset Dramatic Club should have swerved to avoid.

CHS sports update for the week...

By Alana O'Brien

GYMNASTICS

The CHS gymnastics team placed second in the league this season with a 6-2 record.

One of the Skippers' most outstanding gymnasts, Susie McMahan, was unable to compete midway through the season due to injury.

Leading Cohasset in scoring were senior co-captain Karen Ekberg, a three-year all-star, and sophomore Julia Sechan.

Other strong performers this year were juniors Richelle Sargent, co-captain; Nancy Walls, Katie Duffy and eighth grader Alice Bowdren.

The squad will perform their annual gym show March 21 at 6:30 p.m. in the Sullivan gym.

BOYS VARSITY BASKETBALL WRAP-UP

The CHS boys varsity basketball team wrapped up their season with an overall record of 9-11.

The highlight of the Skippers' season was their Christmas Tournament Championship at Scituate. Cohasset beat Cape Cod Tech and Scituate, a division two team, for the Championship.

Another high part in their season was their one point victory over Hull in the latter half of the season. With three seconds on the clock and the score tied, freshman point-guard Tony Bogerty hit an off the glass 15-foot jumper to earn the win for Cohasset.

Bogarty, Cohasset's leading scorer, was the first freshman ever elected to the South Shore League All-Star Team.

Seniors Captain Jack Mahoney and Danny Anderson were very strong contributors to this year's program. Maloney's free throwing expertize helped in some tight spots along with Anderson's hot shotting style.

Leading the Skipper squad under the boards were juniors David Barcomb, Peter Caruso, sophomore Phillip Bernstien and 6'5" freshman James Creed, who Coach Ed Minelli feels is a potential all-star.

Coming up from the sub-varsity level with strong floor playing was sophomore David McDonald and freshman Bob Shultz.

GIRLS VARSITY BASKETBALL WRAP-UP

The girls varsity basketball team had a tremendous season which ended up with the best record at CHS for girls basketball in over two decades, 13-7.

The girls missed going to the state tournament by one loss. Most league officials agreed that had Cohasset qualified for the tournament, they would have won the Division III state crown.

The Skippers' biggest moment was their five point victory over league champ Abington. Never had a Cohasset team beaten Abington and it was the first time Abington has ever lost on their home court since their arrival in the South Shore League.

This year's squad relied heavily on seniors Gia Barresi and Beverly Mullaney, who were elected to the all-star team.

The Skippers started three sophomores, point-guard Janet DiGirolamo, forwards Carla Lucas and Tracy Fitzpatrick, who should, before they graduate, hang a league champion banner in the gymn.

Also contributing to the success of the team were seniors Jill Grant, Elizabeth Glasfeld, juniors Trina Moore, Penny Wright and 1983-84 Captain Jenny Dickerman.

GIRLS JUNIOR VARSITY BASKETBALL WRAP-UP

The girls junior varsity basketball team finished their season with an impressive record of 12-6.

This year's squad worked very well together despite the loss of three starters to varsity.

The Skippers were responsible for two of the three losses of first place Rockland.

Midway through the season the girls had a seven game winning streak.

Sophomore Sarah Seavey led the scorers while sophomore Vicki Spooner led rebounding.

Other strong players for Cohasset were sophomore point-guard Jill Nedrow, eight graders Lisa Shumaker and Maureen O'Leary and sophomores Kerry O'Brien, Krissie Pompeo, Pip Gilmore and freshmen Lyn Pompeo, Kara McDoinald and Ann O'Leary.

BOYS JUNIOR VARSITY BASKETBALL WRAP-UP

The boys junior varsity basketball team finished up their season with a 3-15 record.

The team's biggest victory was their win of 20 points over league rival Hull.

Another memorable win for the boys was over East Bridgewater by one point.

The Skippers had been down by one the last minute and with a second to play, eighth grader John Reidy was fouled and sank two free throws for the win.

Leading the JV'ers were freshmen Chris Kirkendall, Todd Trautwien and John Riedy, along with sophomore Philip Bernstien and freshman Bob Schultz, who also played varsity.

Freshman Rob Leonard (Gerb) contributed in the latter stages of the season. Freshmen Aiden O'Connell and David Caffery were strong off the bench for the Skippers.

1983 SOUTH SHORE LEAGUE ALL-STARS

Hockey: Don O'Neill, senior; Dan Bowen, senior; and Rich Evans, senior.

Basketball: Tony Bogarty, freshman; Gia Barressi, senior; and Beverly Mullaney, senior.

Wrestling: Paul Igo, senior.

WRESTLING

This year's CHS varsity wrestling team, who went through the season winless, worked on rebuilding.

This year's squad, many of whom are first year wrestlers, received excellent performances out of league all-star captain Paul Igo who placed third in the sectionals at the 100-pound class and also from junior Lee Ried who placed seventh in the sectionals.

Other strong wrestlers who we should watch in the future are juniors Kevin Keller and Bill Sargent; sophomores Rick Rourke and Bill Stover; and freshman Eric Whitman, John Jackson and Tim Campbell.

CHS Hockey team advances

Lynnfield forwards, shot at the goal and flipped in an errant rebound for a 1-0 Cohasset lead. The Skippers began their assault on the Lynnfield defense, but couldn't add to their slim one-goal margin.

The third period began with furious non-stop action as the boisterous Cohasset fanatics chanted encouragement to their hustling players. Yet five minutes into the final period Lynnfield tied the score on a power-play goal. Three minutes later Cohasset's junior forward John Drago scored the eventual game winner assisted by Hoffman and Dan Curran completing a pretty rush.

The teams battled heavily with the play becoming extremely rough. When a Lynnfield player handed Cohasset's Don O'Neill with an intentional cheap-shot, he soon retaliated and the ensuing stick-swinging forced O'Neill to the bench for the remainder of the game and Thursday's Wilmington quarter-final also.

The consensus of opinion of his teammates was conveyed by Joe Hoffman's comments: "We feel for Don, he leads us by his example on the ice, losing his leadership handicaps us since we'll be missing an intrical part of our success, yet he'll be ready for Sunday's semi-final game."

As Lynnfield was pressuring the Cohasset defense late in the game, senior Dan Bowen blocked a Lynnfield bid, broke away from the pack and turned out the lights of Lynnfield's party with his unassisted open-net goal.

Co-captain Rich Evans noted Cohasset's overall defensive effort, enhanced by the hustling back-checking of the CHS forwards as the winning edge.

Let's hope the Skippers can keep up the intensity for an invitation to the Division II finals at the Boston Garden.

Cohasset icemen won a hard fought victory over Lynnfield, 3-1. Above, Troy Chatterton fights for puck, and below, John Casey mixes it up with the Lynnfield goalie. (Photos by Greg Derr)

ST. PATRICK'S CELEBRATION

Harbor View residents are planning a St. Patrick's Day celebration Saturday, March 19 with a social hour at 5 p.m. and dinner at 6 p.m.

Lillian Mitchell is chairman and cook of an old fashion corned beef dinner.

The hall will be decorated with shamrocks and a mischievous leprachaun.

Entertainment will be Irish melodies with Kay Mulcahey at the piano.

WEEKLY ACTIVITIES

Every Tuesday at the Unitarian Parish House there is a dinner for senior citizens, at 12 p.m. All are welcome. The meal is supplied by the high school.

Tuesday afternoons there are bingo games for residents and a few invited guests at Harbor View recreation hall. Games are also on the first Thursday of the month in the evening.

An active bowling group of men and women meet at the Community Center every wednesday morning. Many have scores over 100.

There is a change in the entertainment program for Sixty Plus Club Thursday, March 17. Scenes from the musical, "My Fair Lady" will be played by Nancy Howard De Druyn, with Ellen Fryling as piano accompainment.

SERVICE LEAGUE INTERN

The Cohasset Social Service League expanded its work force with the addition of Mary Cucinotta of Norwood as an intern in the field of geriatric counselling. She is a graduate of Suffolk University, now working on her master's in Geriatric Counselling at Framingham State College.

For the past several weeks Cucinotta has been doing a "practicum" (work experience) one day a week at the League offices under the supervision of Carolyn Houseman, social worker. In addition to her class courses and work in Cohasset, she maintains a full schedule working for the state in case management, doing pre-admissions to nursing home placement.

Cucinotta and the League feel this is an enriching experience for each. She notes the difference in dealing with people in their home environment rather than a hospital setting. "People are more themselves when you see them at home. It's a new dimension for me."

Two Keep-Well Clinics will be held March 17 at the First Parish House from 11 to 12:30 and March 23 at Harborview, 60 Elm St., from 10 a.m. to 12.

For all Cohasset residents, regular hours at the Social Service League are Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 8 a.m. to 9 a.m. and 12 to 1 p.m. for free blood pressure screening, urine testing, T.B. testing and health consultation. The office address is 16 Highland Ave. (St. Stephen's).

MARINE SERVICES

ATTENTION SAILORS AND BOAT BUYERS
Are you buying a sailboat but do not feel confident in handing it? Do you need to further refine your sailing skills? Now you can do this ON YOUR BOAT at reasonable cost and in very short order.
Unlike many schools where you pay for high overhead costs and canned instruction, receiving private instruction in the intimacy of your boat offers clear advantages. You develop further skills tailored to your needs on a boat and in surroundings most familiar to you. You do not waste your time and money learning about someone else's boats and gadgets or waiting for others to take their turn at the helm. You will receive personalized instruction from a mature and patient individual who:
*sailed twenty-six years on the Caribbean, Atlantic & Pacific Oceans *taught at the well-known New York Sailing School
*skippered for the Tufts National Championship Sailing Team
A few time slots remain for you. Special rates for family and friends. For further information, call Robert anytime at 383-1233 and leave your name and telephone number.

DON'T TRY TO KEEP UP WITH THE JONESES. PASS THEM.

Following trends is easy.

Setting them, however, takes a little more imagination. The kind of sixth sense that can appreciate innovation before it becomes fashionable.

Case in point: the Saab 900 Turbo. For some time, car mavens have admired its exhilarating power and performance (not to mention more mundane features like room and economy and comfort). More recently, even publications like The New York Times have seen fit to print its praises. Which may explain why now the Saab Turbo is increasingly seen pulling into the more elegant driveways of America.

Even the Joneses are starting to take notice.

But given the Saab Turbo's acceleration of 0-60 in 9.6 seconds, they'll have a pretty tough time keeping up.

Sunday at the Center

"Creating a watercolor," a multi-screen slide demonstration by well known Boston artist Frederick Kubitz, should be a beneficial two-hour refresher course for the lay and the professional artist.

The South Shore Art Center's second Sunday at the Center program continues March 13 from 3-5 p.m. Kubitz will give participants insight into how he creates his watercolors. He will describe his approach and show his work from first sketch to finished product.

The Sunday at the Center series, The Creative Person — Part III, focuses on the creative person and his work, the problems he encounters and his relationships in society. The series presents a varied schedule of demonstrations, slide presentations and panel discussions. Advance registration is required.

Mardi Gras dance

Friday, March 11, from 7:30 to 11, the Philoptochos Society of the Panagia Church (Pope Memorial) is sponsoring a Mardi Gras Dance at the Red Oaks in Cohasset.

Chairwoman for this event is Sharon Costos of Scituate, 545-4463 and co-chairwoman is Laura Apostolu of Hull.

Tickets are currently on sale, but are limited in number.

Proceeds go to the Philoptochos Society, a philanthropic organization associated with the Greek Orthodox Church.

Holiday shoppe

St. Patrick's Day, Easter, Mother's Day, Father's Day or your pet's birthday offer a good excuse to purchase someone special a handcrafted gift from the South Shore Art Center's Holiday Shoppe.

Several South Shore craftspeople have works included in the holiday shop which offers an excellent chance to purchase a handcrafted item. The crafts are on display in the Center's members' gallery at 103 Ripley Road.

Patrons are welcome to come to the shop Monday through Friday, noon to 4 p.m. and Saturdays, 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Two-person show

"Idiosyncrasies, Abstract and Figurative," a two-person show at the South Shore Art Center March 7 to April 2, describes the large-scale works of Bernard LaCasse and Rita Straus Berkowitz.

A formal reception will be held Sunday, March 13, from 6-8 p.m.

The two artists, whose works are different yet complementary to one another, have attempted to interpret the inner feelings of the subjects with which they work.

Both artists seem to rely on abstract and figurative forms to express the movement or inner energy of their subjects.

Vistors are welcome to view "Idiosyncrasies, Abstract and Figurative" Monday through Friday, noon to 4 p.m. and Saturdays, 10:00 a.m. to 1:00 p.m.

'Ides of March'

Shakespeare immortalized "the Ides of March" (March 15 to us) in his "Julius Caesar" as the day on which Caesar would be betrayed by his erstwhile friends.

Cohasset remembers it for another reason. It is the day on which Gigi Burbank and her high school humanities program traditionally stage their annual production to commemorate the historic Ides.

This year the presentation is so excellent that the indomitable Mrs. Burbank has decided to open the curtains to the public. Scenes from Shakespeare will be performed by the humanities students from several grade levels. Refreshments will be served by the PSO.

"We would like to encourage this type of creative enterprise among teachers and students," said Nancy Sandell, president of the PSO. Curtain time is at 7 p.m. Tuesday, March 15 at the high school auditorium. The public is cordially invited to attend.

CCC workshops

The Cohasset Community Center is offering two workshops March 10.

Panorama Egg demonstration is offered by Nancy Krueger from 9-11 a.m. Each student will take home a decorated sugar egg.

Sine Pounder, owner of the Bread Shop, will demonstrate a class in bread baking at 7 p.m. The finished product will be an Easter Bread.

On March 15, from 7-10 p.m., Mary Kelly's herb class will cover herb cooking with every meal; mixes to enhance flavor, bouquet garni, salt substitutes and salad dressings.

Classes are limited. Call the Center, 383-0088, between 9 and 1, to reserve your spot in these classes.

Historical Society dinner

The Cohasset Historical Society's March 16 dinner meeting will be held at Trueblood Hall of the Unitarian Parish House and will feature a traditional corned beef and cabbage fare catered by the Dorothy Bradford Chapter, Eastern Star, of Hingham.

The after dinner speaker will be Robert Thorndike, a lifelong summer resident of Scituate. Thorndike's topic will be the history of the Glades and Strawberry Point, North Scituate.

The speaker's long association with the Glades has given him the opportunity to study that area's unique history and he will present an illustrated lecture which promises to be interesting and informative.

The dinner meeting will begin at 6:30. Reservations can be made by calling 383-0773 or 383-6930, no later than Saturday, March 12.

'Focus on Family'

The second in a seven-part film series titled "Focus on The Family" will be presented at the Second Congregational Church Sunday, March 13 at 6:30 p.m. The series is being sponsored by the church in cooperation with other town churches, and all parents, or parents-to-be, are welcome.

The second film, "Shaping the Will Without Breaking the Spirit," features Dr. James Dobson, a psychologist associated with the University of California School of Medicine. The first in the series, "The Strong-Willed Child," was shown March 6.

The series continues Sunday evenings, except Easter Sunday, through April 24. It has had wide acceptance and has been sponsored by 15,000 churches across the country.

State sewer offer of $1.2 million has strings attached

By Patricia Anne Walsh

The state approved a planning advance of $1,124,959 for preparation of a facilities plan and final planning for the construction of the large central sewer plant.

The town received a letter dated March 11 to Joseph Gwinn, chairman of the sewer commissioners, from Thomas McMahon, director of the DEQE Div. of Water Pollution Control.

Cohasset has until April 11 to accept or reject the offer. The town would have to provide an additional $497,169 as the applicant's share. The federal government has provided $256,718 towards Step 1.

Gwinn said at the sewer commissioners meeting March 8 he was withdrawing any approval of work to be done by Ward Engineering.

At a meeting of the commissioners with Joseph Ward March 7, it had been decided Ward was to convince the state that alternate solutions was the way to go instead of building a large central plant. Instead the state should fund an alternate townwide study for $90,000 as proposed by Sewer Commissioner Charles DeSantis.

Town Counsel Richard Henderson told the commission in a letter March 7, "This is to acknowledge receipt of your memorandum dated March 3 with respect to the proposed letter to Ward Engineering. I have previously ruled there can be no selection of an engineer nor negotiations with respect to an alternative solution until such time as the terms of the Agreement for Judgment have been renegotiated or have been modified by court order. Since neither event has occurred, commenting on the proposed letter would be premature other than to say that I think it is quite inappropriate at this time to request Ward Engineering to do anything."

Gwinn was asked to comment on the $1.1 million grant offer. He first said he might prepare a statement concerning the offer for review by Henderson.

He then acknowledged that after the letter had been hand-delivered to him at South Station (by Brian Jeans), he had discussed the matter with Selectwoman Mary Jane McArthur Sunday. "It would appear that we should move very quickly to accept the state's offer," he said.

Charles DeSantis said, "It is out of order for the State of Massachusetts to submit for approval a grant with authorization, when the official position of the town of Cohasset is that they do not wish to proceed with the M & E plan. It is inconsistent for the state to be sending a grant out, when the Town Meeting wishes to pursue another course of action. To submit grant authorization at this time does not make any sense."

DeSantis added: "Article 4 of the last Special Town Meeting clearly states the Town of Cohasset cannot engage Metcalf and Eddy for the working plans and specifications for construction of its proposed sewer plant.

The driver of this overturned cement truck, James Graziano, 24, of Randolph, walks away unharmed. The fully loaded truck lost its brakes at the intersection of Pond and Spring Streets. See story on page 11.

Dream home still difficult for the young

Local real estate market is booming

By Jane Lane

The good news is that the real estate business is booming in Cohasset and Scituate. The bad news is that it is still difficult for a young couple to purchase their "dream home."

No matter how low the interest rates drop, local realtors say, the average price of a home in these two communities will either stablize or climb higher. And for the average homebuyer, that necessitates a middle-to-high income.

Realtor Bob Mullin of Dwyer and Mullin of Cohasset said an income sufficient to support monthly mortgage payments of $600 and more usually means two incomes. And two incomes in turn, suggests deferred families.

The American dream of owning your own home, with the white picket fence, and two children and a dog, has been altered these financially-uncertain years. More and more young people are being forced out of the homeowning market. Those who are lucky enough to afford a downpayment and mortgage costs find that two incomes are mandatory to cover their hefty expenses.

Mullin said the average price of a home in Cohasset is $120,000. With an interest rate of 12¾ percent, the buyer would put 20 percent as a downpayment. The buyer would then be borrowing $95,000 which results in a $1,200 monthly mortgage rate, including principal, interest and taxes.

"Young people in the Cohasset housing market are being forced to live on two incomes. And that means deferred families," he says. "Champagne taste requires two incomes or one person with an extraordinary income."

Yet all local realtors agree the housing market in both towns is brisk, with all signs pointing to a brighter future. In fact, they add that the demand for homes in the two coastal communities currently exceeds the demand.

The primary reason for the influx of prospective homeowners is the decrease of the lending rates. Currently, most local mortage-lending banks are at a 12¾ percentage rate. That is down considerably from the near 20 percent rate of about two years ago. One reason for the resurgence of the realty business is the rush to "grab" the lower rates in fear they will increase again in the near future. Still, realtors unanimously proclaim no one has the infallible crystal ball in which they can accurately predict when rates will rise or fall.

Tribute to the Flemings of Fleming Hardware

By Patricia Anne Walsh

The skies cleared Sunday as Cohasset merchants and residents paid tribute to the Flemings, a stable, friendly family company in Cohasset Village since the 1930's.

Over 150 friends attended the party in honor of John Fleming, 83, and his sister Mary Fleming, 87, of Parker Avenue, at the Lothrop House.

The octogenarians had worked daily running their family business, Edward M. Fleming Hardware, until they recently sold it to interior decorator Philip Smith and his nephew, Frank Smith.

John said he had worked in the business begun by his deceased brother, Edward, for 51 years.

Edward bought the building at 24 Elm Street from John MacNeill, who had his plumbing business there before he moved to Ripley Road.

Recently John managed the sale of marine supplies and hardware on one side of the store, while Mary ran the gift department on the other side and did the bookkeeping.

Many of the guests were yachters, who frequently purchased their chandlery supplies from John.

A friend of Mary's recalled that Mary stocked imported china, Carlo Conte's miniature doll house furniture and antiques. She said Mary sometimes bought the antiques at estate sales, and that if a set had an odd number such as five, Mary would reduce it to an even number, such as four, and offer them for

Body of Jamaica Plain woman found

Police feel an apparent suicide caused the death of Susan T. Cairns, 28, of Jamaica Plain. Her body was discovered on Black Rock Beach early Tuesday morning by a newspaper delivery man.

Police also found her car, a 1980 Datsun, parked on Summit Avenue, Hull, near Cohasset's Forest Avenue.

Cairns was identified by a friend who lived in the same apartment house with her in Jamaica Plain. She was last seen at 2 p.m. Monday at WGBH-Channel 2 where she worked as a switchboard operator.

There is no evidence of foul play, said Acting Chief Joseph Kealey. Dr. George Katsis was to

Candidates' night

The Parent School Organization (PSO) Activities Chairman Sue McNamara announces the PSO-sponsored School Committee Candidates' Night takes place Thursday, March 24 in Room 107 at the High School.

Refreshments wil be served at 7:30 p.m.; the program begins at 8.

"Our plan is to foster awareness of school-related issues," said McNamara. "We do not support issues or candidates. It is exciting to have three candidates for the two available seats. The public has a definite choice to make. We hope to help them make an informed decision."

School Committee Chairman Diana Kornet and committee member John Langmaid are the incumbents. Judith Volungis is the challenger. Candidates will respond to prepared questions. Additional questions will be entertained from the floor. Candidates will be given three minutes for their response. McNamara will moderate the discussion.

"We are pleased to offer this service to the community," said PSO President Nancy Sandell. "The League of Women Voters holds its Town Affairs Night March 29 and will present candidates for all public offices. The PSO forum provides still another opportunity for the townspeople to focus on school issues and answers."

Town Election Day is Saturday, April 9. Polls are open from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Absentee ballots

Absentee ballots will be available for the April 9 election Thursday, March 17 in the town clerk's office from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Tammaro case update

The defense attorneys for accused John Tammaro, charged with the Dec. 19 murder of Leslie Ann Haynes of Cohasset, are considering the possiblitiy of raising a defense of "lack of criminal responsibility." Assistant District Atty. Robert Banks said the decision must be made by April 14. Judge Robert Prince continued the case to April 14 to give Tammaro time to be examined by a psychiatrist. Tammaro is being held without bail in a county jail and has been found competent to stand trial.

Open meeting law

A workshop on the Open Meeting law has been changed from Tuesday, March 15 to Tuesday, March 22 at 8 p.m. at Town Hall.

Booster correction

Last week the Mariner reported the Cohasset Boosters Club Scholarship Dance was planned for Friday, March 18 at the Sons of Italy Hall, Route 3A in Hingham. It should have read the dance will be held Friday, March 25. Tickets are $12 and may be purchased by calling Izzy Salvadore at 383-1569 or Rose Duffy at 383-0292.

Town Hall ramp rejected

The advisory committee rejected a town warrant calling for $5,000 to build a ramp to Town Hall. A wheelchair-bound citizen complained town hall isn't accessible to the handicapped.

A consensus of committee members feel the ramp would not give a handicapped person access to town offices upstairs and recommended the big hall downstairs should be used more for meetings. The ramp would have to be very long and take two turns to avoid a steep grade.

Monorail plan moving

A plan to study the feasability of a monorail down the Southeast Expressway has been given approval by the Legislature's Transportation Committee. The committee gave a favorable report to the study to be completed by the first week in November.

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray is backing the bill. She has been interviewed on the issue by television reporters and continues to lead support for the bill which was filed by former Rep. Phil Johnston, now state director of Human Resources.

Murray feels a monorail seems to be the best answer to the South Shore's transportation problems. She noted monorails are used in Japan and the cost of construction is much less than a normal elevated mass-transit system. A monorail is also used to transport guests to Florida's Disneyland.

Creative persons workshop

Dan Wakefield, a name associated with television scipts, movies and novels; Inge Hoffmann, noted therapist working with the creative mind; Dennis Kowal, innovative sculptor whose works may be seen across the country; and Betty Kohlberg,well-known artist and painter, headline the South Shore Art Center panel who will discuss the creative person's relationships in society.

The third program in the Sunday at the Center series, Sunday, March 20, 3-5 p.m., brings together four individuals with diverse backgrounds and ideas. They will address the question whether the creative person is unique and needs special support and privileges in personal and private life, or if the creative person is not unique and should deal with his work and relationships like any other professional.

Advance registration is necessary and may be made at the South Shore Art Center, 103 Ripley Road, 383-9548.

Kindergarten review

After a kindergarten screening in March, the School Dept. will review the latest enrollment projections. Seventy-six have registered so far.

Former school board member Pat Walsh said although many register, some children don't enroll in the fall.

THREE REASONS WHY:

1. SULLIVAN IS COMMITTED:

"My greatest motivation in seeking the Selectman's position is a sincere desire to professionally address the many issues confronting our TOWN. Issues pertaining to septage, the dump, zoning and growth directly affect not only the townspeople, but the overall character and personality of our community. If elected, and I serve this brief term well, I will ask to be Re-Elected in order that I might make a more long-term commitment to the Town of Cohasset.

2. SULLIVAN IS KNOWLEDGEABLE:

Sullivan has proved her interest in all the issues confronting Cohasset. She attended all interviews to select our new police chief. She has attended Board of Health meetings and Board of Appeals hearings regularly, as well as the public hearing conducted by the Planning Board on the issues of cluster zoning. Sullivan has knowledge of and concerns for all the issues confronting the tax payers — this is an essential qualification for an effective selectman for the people.

3. SULLIVAN IS ACCESSIBLE:

Sullivan feels that accessibility to elected officials is essential. For this reason, she has installed and will continue to maintain if elected, a Voter's Hot Line (383-1173). Sullivan's main job will be the business of the voters; she is presently and will continue to be available days and evenings to hear the concerns of the people of Cohasset.

The issue in this election is not WHO can do the job, but who can BEST do the job — sale. "Mary was smart that way — she knew what the public wanted," she said.

She fondly recalled buying tables inlaid with Dr. Howard Reid's tiles with scenes of Cohasset, which were a Fleming exclusive.

Burtram Pratt's history of Cohasset includes a 1932 picture of Cohasset's police department. Among the seven faces in the picture is that of Patrolman John Fleming, the father of Mary and John.

Genealogy records show that the Flemings' ancestors included the Fitzgeralds and Kellys of Ireland. Their parents, born in 1866, were married November 25, 1891, and had five children all "born in Cohasset." Their mother lived to be about 100 years-old.

The lists of Cohasset residents serving in World War I and World War II include a John Fleming and John J. Fleming, respectively. John says he is the veteran, and that he served in both wars.

Friends also recalled that before the family moved to Parker Avenue, the Flemings told them, their parents lived in a small "house on stilts" on the marsh on Atlantic Avenue, near the harbor.

Many guests said the Cohasset Historic Society's Lothrop house had never looked lovelier. Francis O'Toole and Eleanor Bleakie had made arrangements of fresh daffodils, tulips, daisys and forsythia which complimented the paintings and Nancy Clapp's pineapple stencilled walls — pineapples are a sign of hospitality.

Chairman Ellen Morrissey said the affair was sponsored by the Cohasset Merchant's Association, formerly part of the Village and Harbor Association. She was assisted by Hope Seeley of In-Stitches, Tina Watson from Cohasset Hardware, Jane Stormier of Red Balloon, Constance Parker of the Historic Society, Tinka McLean of the Linen Chest and Frank and Philip Smith. They had donations from Cohasset Savings Bank, Strawberry Parfait as well as from many individuals.

Seeley worked efficiently circulating plates filled with a variety of most attractive hors d'oeuvres, and serving chablis. Mary cut a huge cake decorated with yellow roses by Tina Watson. It was such a successful party that many people lingered long after the 6 p.m. invitational limit, poring over old maps of Cohasset of the Society's and discussing the old days in Cohasset.

The League: where have all the members gone?

By Patricia Anne Walsh

I couldn't help remembering the song made popular by Peter, Paul and Mary and the Kingston Trio many years ago about where had all the flowers gone, when attending three scheduled meetings for League of Women Voters last week.

The first meeting, called to take consensus on the League's three-year study of health care, scheduled at the home of member Betty Van Slyck March 1, was cancelled because no members made reservations to attend.

At the second consensus meeting scheduled for March 3 at the home of Debbie Cook, 15 members attended. The League has 49 women and two men as paid members.

The third meeting was a twentieth birthday party, for the 50 charter members still living in Cohasset at the home of Janine and Austin Broadhurst. It was attended by 45 people including members' husbands.

Margie Charles and I appeared to be the only charter members, in addition to a handful of charter members who have remained dues payers, present from the original group of over 70 women.

I wistfully remembered LWV meetings where almost 200 had been present, but I must report that the food and wine were excellent, and the company pleasant.

I speculated the increased number of women in the labor force has undoubtedly affected the League.

I know my departure was influenced by the fact that the dues went to $20 annually, with state and federal assessments taking most of that amount, so that additional funds had to be raised for local use.

I argued in vain, and publically, that with dues so high, the League would not attract people who did not have "money," and that they should have pursued economies in the state and national budgets.

Another friend told me last week that she left because she wanted to work actively for a political party, and the League stresses non-partisanship of board members and officers. She has since coordinated a governor's campaign. A few dropped out when the League took a "Pro-Choice" position on abortion in 1972.

Commentary

The League is concerned about its membership. In their Jan.-Mar. Bulletin they write: "In an attempt to increase our membership, a questionaire has been prepared to help us evaluate Cohasset LWV's strengths and weaknesses. During the past several years we have lost many members and our attempts to interest new and enthusiastic members have not always been successful. It is our hope, through this four-page questionnaire, to be able to assess what we need to provide our members in order to keep their interest as well as what we could do to attract people."

Don't think all the Leaguers have just been a "long time passing" as the song says.

Michael Bliss, one of the two male members, is chairman of the board of health. Present member Jean Cotton is chairman of the advisory board and Janet Dagget was, until recently, a member of the sewer commissioners.

Sheila Evans is on the Paul Pratt Library Board. Pat Gwinn's husband, Joe, is chairman of the sewer commissioners, and she fostered his interest in that position.

June Hubbard's husband is a member and former chairman of the conservation commission. Barbara Kern is on the board of health.

Chartris Langmaid's husband is on the school committee. Barbara Power is chairman of the planning board. David Whipple, the other male member, is a former member of the school committee. Millie Mitman's husband, Cliff, is running for selectman.

Alice Weeks' husband is a former member of the advisory board.

Some present members have substantial employment. After becoming state presidents of the League, Margaret Lynch and Pat Facey took responsible positions in Boston. Lynch was a member of Dukakis' first administration team, and expects to receive her law degree shortly. Bobbi Leary is working for a firm of architects and city planners in Cambridge, after her stint as chairman of the planning board.

Jackie Whipple [illegible] Houghton Mifflin, and Jane Ellis is teaching [illegible] chairman of Cohasset's METCO host family chapter.

Former member, Martha Gjesteby is a member of the Cohasset School Committee.

One thing has remained the same. That is the thoroughness with which League members investigate a topic. At the consensus meeting Genevieve Young, Doris McNulty, and co-president Marie Caristi gave very thorough and excellent presentations on health care. They asked 42 questions within six categories regarding members' feelings on the adequacy and quality of health care.

Included were questions on licensing and accredidation of institutions and professionals, recertification procedures, cost efficiency, peer review, malpractice prevention, consumer relations, barriers, the effectivness of Medicaid and Medicare, eligibility criteria, deductibles, Neighborhood Clinics, funding, etc., etc.

If you did not know anything about these matters before attending the concensus meeting, you could not have left that way. Charts and lectures gripped your attention for four hours.

Co-president Chartis Langmaid said that this meeting was only a very small part of concensus being reached throughout the state, and that the state League would announce the results later.

Unlike the "old days" votes were not taken, but each member's thoughts expressed on any subject under sonsideration were faithfully recorded by Elizabeth Van Slyke. They will be organized and sent to the state.

The League is planning a Town Affairs night, popularly known as "Candidates Night", for the evening of March 29. Mark it on your calendar.

Cable system could be in Cohasset in a year

By Jane Lane

If Cohasset grants American Cablesystems Corp. a final license, the entire $1.1 million cable system will be operational within a year of the license approval.

The only corporation to apply for Cohasset's cable license made a final public presentation last week to the cable advisory committee and selectmen.

If the committee recommends the company to selectmen, it will be about a week before selectmen vote on the recommendation. As the granting authority, selectmen must then submit their preference in writing to the state cable commission.

There will then be a 30-day appeal period before a provisional license is awarded. A final 15-year license is granted five months after the provisional award. And according to American vice president of corporate development, Anne Bailey, the entire system could be operational within a year of that date.

American Cablesystems executive vice president Barry Lemieux said last week the company would supply the town with a $1.1 million system, including a local office in Cohasset Village. That location would be used for sales and marketing operations, as well as a studio for local productions. In addition, there will be $17,000 worth of camera and video equipment at the junior-senior high school for the exclusive use of the schools.

The American Cablesystems would utilize a regional "head-end" transmitter in Scituate. The transmission system would be shared with Hull and Norwell, he said. American has also applied for a cable license in Hingham.

According to financial data supplied by the company, the lowest tier of 27 cable channels would cost the subscriber $4.95 per month. The second tier of services, Supercable, would offer 36 more channels and would cost $7.95 a month. That is the level preferred by most consumers, although American will explain to each customer exactly what services are provided by each level.

Premium services, which would offer exclusive programming such as Home Box Office, the Sport channel, children's programming, and nickelodeon, cost the subscriber from $5.95 to $8.95 in addition to the basic level service charge.

A system will be installed free if it is ordered within two months of construction. Installation will be free to senior citizens. All rates will be frozen for a year after installation.

Bailey said subscription rates are influenced by the number of homes subscribing to cable, the number of cable construction miles and underground miles, along with the density of population. Another factor used to determine rates is the projected revenues generated by the system in Cohasset, she said.

She said revenues are applied to the cost of the system. Rates are pro-rated according to the head-end transmission costs and the revenues projected for the town. In that manner, Cohasset would not be paying for the debt structure of any other systems, she added.

Nancy Bicknell, director of programming, said the Cohasset Village studio will be staffed for one person to coordinate all local programming. Training for all interested residents would take place at this main location. Through the shared utilization of the transmitter in Scituate, Cohasset could participate in regional programs with such organizations as the South Shore Natural Science Center and others, Bichnell suggested.

Cable advisory committee chairman Joseph McCool said the committee was strongly concerned with the cable capabilities provided to the town and to the schools.

Cohasset's Audio-Visual director John Packard replied that he was "extremely excited" about the services guaranteed to the school systems. He has seen community services by American Cablesystems in Quincy and Arlington. There is a "new life" to local organizations through the utilization of cable, he said.

Dr. Packard, who has studied the system thoroughly and will present a report to the school committee later this month or in early April, said the $17,000 of studio equipment to be given to the schools will allow any student or teacher to become competent and "self sufficient" with the video cable system.

The equipment will consist of two cameras, two video recording units, and audio and lighting equipment which will be portable and used throughout the school in a one-camera production system.

The schools will also be given complete flexibility with an editing and titling system used in post production. All portable equipment may be used by any of the schools, teachers and students, he said.

In the high school studio, there will be two-camera production which is similar to commercial television production. There will be stable lighting facilities and multiple monitors.

One aspect of the American Cablesystems' school package is the Video Conference Module which allows one school to instantly "plug in" a camera. It immediately televises a location "plugged" somewhere else in the community. This allows the schools instant access to various locations, a type of "in-school field trip," Dr. Packard said. This intricate system is available only through American, he said.

For instance, he explained, if a group of students are discussing elderly people, they could hook up one camera in their classroom, and connect another camera to a nursing home and have an instantaneous discussion with that group.

The cable equipment will allow the schools to film productions of the sports, arts, dramatic, and many other school programs, Dr. Packard said.

Third in Family Series

The third in the nationally-acclaimed film series, "Focus on the Family," will be presented in the Second Congregational Church, Sunday, March 20 at 6:30 p.m., under the auspices of the church in cooperation with other town churches.

All are welcome, and it is not necessary to have seen the prior films.

The third film is titled "Christian Fathering" and stresses the need for fathers to put their families at the highest level of priority in their lives, reserving something of their time, effort, and energy for leadership within their own homes.

The series features James C. Dobson, Ph.D., a psychologist and family counselor associated with the University of California.

☐Mike Berger is a happy man . . .as was reported by Martin a few weeks ago. He became a new papa to Daniel Joseph Berger. Mike, community editor for the Cohasset and Scituate Mariners, and his wife, Linda, wish to thank the many people who took the time to wish them well on their new venture. As Mike put it, "I have found out whatever the event or issue, stop the world, here comes a baby." He feels great!

☐Riding through Cohasset one sees a new addition to a lot of homes, a pump hose coming through basement windows, and homeowners looking skyward awaiting the appearance of that huge, glowing orange ball we call the sun. Will it ever rear its beautiful head again seemed to be the question last week.

Herbert Crehan

☐Herbert Crehan was named an employee benefit consultant in the Boston office of William M. Mercer, Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary of Marsh & McLennan Co., which is the world's largest property and casualty broker.

During his 17-year career, Crehan has consulted with organizations throughout New England on all areas of human resources management. Mercer provides employee benefit and compensation counseling services worldwide, employing more than 2,000 persons in some 80 offices around the globe.

Crehan joined Mercer from Hay Associates where he was a partner in the Boston office. He is a graduate of Northeastern University where he was a member of the honor fraternity Sigma Episilon Rho. He is a member of the American Academy of Actuaries and an enrolled actuary.

☐Susan Cuff of South Main Street was named to the dean's list of the University of Rhode Island for achieving a high academic standard in the fall semester, 1982.

☐Frank England was in California last week and met the same weather we have been reading about. He had one bright spot...he was visiting his daughter, Terry, and his grandchild (who is two years old).

☐The Log and Line is finally back to full attendance. Mr. Ripley is back eating his breakfast and looking grand after his accident. The "Old Goats" are elated too.

☐Reports are that Rose Pape, vacationing in Florida, is on the mend after a recent illness. Rose, you're suppose to leave those germs behind you when you head for the sunny South.

☐Cohasset Country Club could offer three season recreation lately. Cross-country skiing in the winter, canoeing in the spring, and golf in the summer.

☐After reading the list of those awaiting a mooring, it seems as though Cohasset should enlarge the harbor as well as building its new pier. And it was only a partial lising, with many more names still to come.

Mary Whorf

☐Mary Whorf of Marshfield, previous owner of SeaCoast Realty for the past ten years, has returned to the Rte. 3A office of Jack Conway, Realtor, where she started selling homes 20 years ago.

A sales associate with the Jack Conway Marshfield, Cohasset and Scituate offices from 1962 to 1972, Whorf left the firm to establish her own business which she successfully ran for the past decade.

She holds salesman and broker real estate licenses, is a GRI graduate and is a former secretary of the Plymouth County Board of Realtors.

Returning to the Conway office is "like coming home again, especially as Muriel Desmond is still there, only now she is the office manager," Whorf said.

A 32-year resident of Marshfield, Whorf was born in Cohasset and graduated from Cohasset High School.

☐Richard Dabrowski was elected to the board of directors of the Mass. Assoc. for the Blind recently at its annual meeting.

The Association, a private nonprofit agency, serves the needs of visually impaired persons across the Commonwealth. With its main facility in Brookline, it presently provides direct service to over 1,250 clients.

Richard Dabrowski

Dabrowski lives with his wife Maudie in Cohasset, retired from Raytheon in 1974 where he was manager of planning and administration in the Sidewinder Missle Project. He has served for many years as an active member of The Fernald League for Retarded Children's Advisory Board.

In addition to maintaining a residential and educational service Dabrowski fills his retirement hours by producing books on wood carvings, several maps, short story illustrations, and handling the editorial and layout assignments for two newsletters. He also sails off Cohasset, golfs, sketches and tends his vegetable garden.

☐Terry and Bernie Mulcahy were in Aruba last week, soaking up the rays, while the rest of us were getting soaked in Cohasset. They had a wonderful time.

have conducted an autopsy Tuesday afternoon.

The body was reported to police at 6:15 a.m. Police immediately gave a description to the media.

Cairn's friend heard the description over the radio and called Cohasset police. Cairn's brother was due in Cohasset Tuesday evening to make a positive identification.

Lt. Charles Stockbridge said the body "wasn't in the water any length of time."

"What was found was the body of a white female, approximately in her mid-20's with shoulder length, reddish color hair," said Stockbridge. "The body is five-foot nine and weighs 130 pounds. She had green eyes and was wearing brown corduroy pants. Near the body was a black fur coat, a pink sweater, and a gray sports jacket, size small."

Stockbridge said Cairns was wearing a piece of jewelry around her neck, a gold chain with a pendant set in sapphire pearl with a silver background. She was also wearing one brass colored earring.

Two sewer articles set for warrant

By Jane Lane

Selectmen allowed the insertion of two warrant articles, sponsored by the sewer commission after denying a petition article requesting that voters rescind the November decision to seek alternative sewer solutions.

Last week selectmen voted not to allow a petition article signed by sewer plant operator Manuel Salvador to be included in the April town meeting warrant. The proposed article, signed by Salvador and 10 other residents, requested voters to rescind last fall's special town meeting vote to seek alternatives to the town's $13.7 million central sewer system.

After meeting with two sewer commission members, selectmen allowed the insertion of two articles by the commission. The first would ask the town to authorize continuing the Metcalf and Eddy central sewer plan while seeking design studies of an alternative system. The second article will ask voters to appropriate $20,000 to fund that alternative engineering study.

Sewer Commissioner Maxwell Pounder said the commission has been advised that $10,000 is not available to fund an alternative engineering study. It is my intention, he told selectmen, to get the study underway by Ward Engineering, because additional data is needed to convince the state "that this alternative is viable."

Two weeks ago, the sewer commission and the sewer advisory committee recommended that selectmen authorize Ward Engineering to begin an intensive study for the design of an innovative and alternative sewer system.

The article will request "not withstanding Article 4, that the town appropriate $20,000 for the investigation of phase one for the feasibility of on-site, or innovative and alternative sewer systems,"

Pounder told selectmen it would necessitate $20,000, according to Ward Engineering, to come up with the substantial data necessary to convince the state to fund the entire alternative system.

T revisited

Here's a brand new idea for you. If you're Irish today you may want to try it out on the "little people" before making up your mind.

For the last 19 years Cohasset, along with seven other South Shore towns, has been paying scores of thousands of dollars every year to the M.B.T.A. in involuntary assessments. In return for our dollars we get no direct service — have never gotten any.

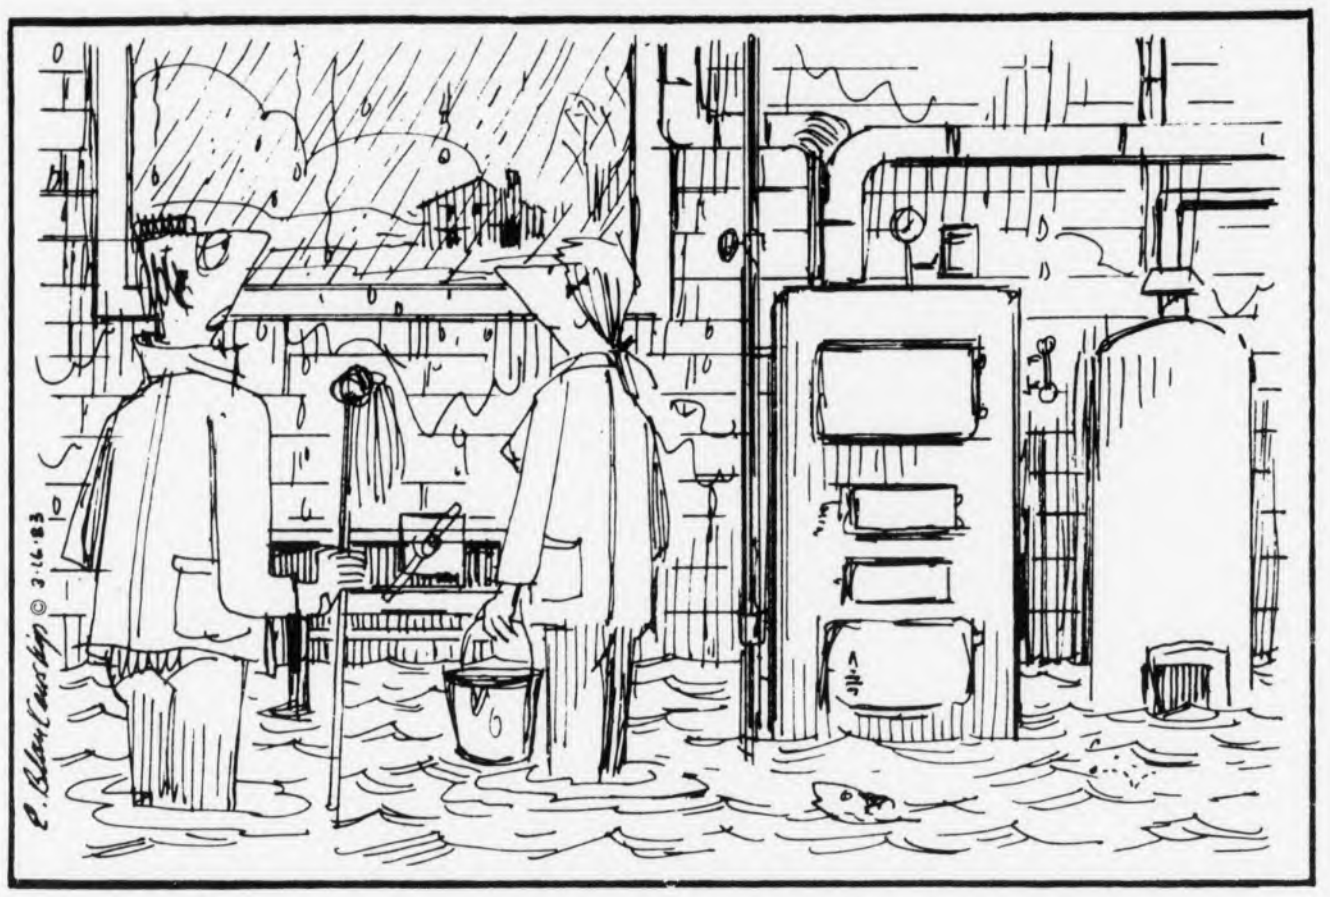
From time to time our legislators have risen to complain of the unfairness of this quid pro nihilo arrangement. Their eloquence hasn't gotten them far because their urban colleagues in the legislature would as soon have us South Shore suburbanites get nothing for something from the M.B.T.A. as have their own communities pay the entire cost of the grand, inefficient system.

Clearly the reform that is needed is to take Cohasset and the other towns in the region that have not traditionally gotten service from the M.B.T.A. out of the M.B.T.A. for good. As we suggest, that has never been politically possible; but we believe there is a way it could happen that might be politically irresistible.

In 1974, when the state assumed 50 percent of the burgeoning M.B.T.A. deficit, the legislature, as a sop to non-M.B.T.A. communities, created state-supported regional transit systems throughout the state. That is how Brockton Area Transit (BAT) came into being. BAT is a pretty successful operation — far more efficient than the M.B.T.A. You have probably seen their clean, modern buses on the Southeast Expressway.

Why not create a "South Shore Transit" authority made up of M.B.T.A. towns that have been paying for nothing all these years? We would still be assessed some sort of fee in support of the new authority, but we would control it as we can never control the megalithic M.B.T.A.

Our "S.S.T." might willingly hire M.B.T.A. service, it might run its own buses, or it might work something out with the Plymouth & Brockton. The advantage for us would be that we and not some bureaucrat in the executive office of transportation in Boston would decide what service we desired and what assessments we would pay.



The selling point on Beacon Hill would be that we would not be trying to weasel out of our perceived responsibility of paying something for regional transportation, we would merely be seeking to transfer control of public transportation policy to a local authority analogous to several that already exist across the state.

We think the idea has merit. Our membership in the 79-community M.B.T.A. is a proven disaster. Can there be much doubt that a transit authority consisting of Hanover, Marshfield, Scituate, Cohasset, Duxbury, Norwell, Pembroke, and Rockland — these are the M.B.T.A. communities in this region without service — would do a far better job for our public transportation than the absolute nothing the M.B.T.A. has done for 18 years?

Alone at last . . . and compatible

By Claire McDonough

The Dragon and I smiled dreamily at each other.

For the first time in more years than we could remember, we were alone in the house. Kevin and Kim had taken Breida, Skipper and Tanya for an overnight visit. Patrick was "jamming" somewhere. Larry was at Martha's. Jay was at Sharon's.

Alone at last.

"What do you want to do?" I asked, a little heady with my new-found freedom.

He leered, "What do I always want to do?"

"Eat," I told him.

"Right," he replied. "It can be just like it was when we were first married. I'll go watch television and you whip up a gourmet meal. Light the candles. Start a fire in the fireplace. We can hold hands and listen to our favorite music after you finish the dishes."

"Whoa there Buster," I said. "That was in the unenlightened fifties. I'm a liberated woman now."

He looked at me with melting brown eyes. "Just this once? For old time's sake?"

We settled on a compromise. I'd cook and he'd do the dishes. I always was a sucker for melting brown eyes.

Dinner preparations took a while. Shelling and deveining all those shrimp take time.

So do decisions. If you and the cat have disputed possession of a shrimp, do you wash off the shrimp and cook it, or do you concede defeat and give it to the cat.

I settled for cutting off the part that had been in the cat's mouth. Then I washed and cooked the rest.

The phone didn't ring more than 12 times, and the delmonico potatoes browned nicely. London broil. Fresh asparagus. Perfect.

Well, maybe not perfect. When we were first married he didn't have diabetes and I didn't have an ulcer. We ate dessert. Cheese and fruit would just have to do.

And the croissants were a nice continental touch.

I set up a card table where it would catch the glow from the fireplace and lit the candles. I put a Vivaldi album ont he stereo.

"Honey," I called softly. "Dinner's ready."

Silence. Except for the sounds of a re-run of "Charlie's Angels" cavorting through the World Trade Center.

"Sweetheart," I called a little louder. "Everything you like is in the living room."

More silence. Except for the sound of...could it be? It was.

My beloved was lying flat on his back, eyes closed and mouth open. He was snoring softly and blissfully.

I blew out the candles and put the food away. Delmonico potatoes are always better the second day anyway.

I took a quick bath, climbed quickly and carefully into bed, and smiled fondly at my slumbering Lothario.

We are compatible, after all.

Concerned over the sewer action

Letters

To the Editor:

As a citizen of Cohasset, a member of the sewer advisory committee and a professional engineer with 18 years experience in industrial waste water treatment, I am concerned that the town is not taking a course of action which will serve its interests.

It is my understanding we have an Agreement for Judgement with the state to bring our waste water treatment plant discharge into compliance with regulations by 1985. There have been so many delays which are not the fault of Cohasset that this date is no longer valid. In accordance with Article 4, which was voted at the last town meeting, the town has met with the state to negotiate pursuing alternatives to extensive sewering and a large sewerage treatment plant. The state has met with us once and so far has turned down our proposals.

I also understand that our selectmen have now decided to take the state to court to modify the Agreement for Judgement with the state in accordance with Article 4. I believe this course of action is unwise at this time because a single meeting does not constitute negotiations.

In my opinion our best course of action is to have an engineering consultant immediately for three reasons: 1) to furnish data to our attorney; 2) to furnish the town with the information it needs to determine whether or not alternatives to extensive sewering and a large treatment plant exist and are cost effective; and 3) this is the time of year to research leaching field failures and alternatives. If we do not hire an engineer soon we will lose this opportunity for a year.

The current situation is that the special advisory committee to the selectmen has investigated alternatives to central sewering and has concluded that pursuing alternatives is in the best interest of the town. The committee has selected a consultant and

Murray's memos

Report from the state house

By State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray

Deficit or surplus? Is Dukakis paving the way for new taxes in addition to the already proposed gasoline and cigarett tax hikes? Is the Dukakis budget balanced?

These are the questions that have been raised in editorials, columns and cartoons since the Governor unveiled his budget proposal.

The Governor's budget depends on the so-called "Revenue Enforcement and Protection Program." The problem is that many of the components of this program, including the hike in certain consumer taxes and fees, must be submitted to and approved by the House and the Senate in legislation separate from the budget. If all of the proposed revenue measures are not implemented, the Dukakis budget will not be balanced. (States are constitutionally required to have balanced budgets.)

The following are the Dukakis proposals for raising new money he needs to balance the budget. Some of the tax collection measures are continuations of Governor King's improved collection procedures and can be implemented administratively. Others require legislative action. The number in parenthesis indicates the amount of money the Dukakis administration expects to collect.

Gas Tax. Establish a minimum rate of 11 cents per gallon. The rate is now 10 percent of the average wholesale selling price. Current prices indicate a rate of 9.3 cents for the first quarter of FY '83 and the second quarter rate could be 8.5 cents ($48.2M).

Cigarette Tax. Increase the tax by 4 cents per package and eliminate the minimum pricing provisions; increase the penalties for bootlegging and tax evasion ($20.7M).

Income Apportionment for Corporations. (a) Use of the business corporation apportionment formula (property, wages, sales) for utility companies in assessing their taxable income; (b) allows the Department of Revenue to adopt alternative apportionment formulae for particular industry groups where the statutory formula is not adapted to approximate Massachusetts income ($2M).

A state tax clearance certificate would be required of every applicant for any state or local business license or any state vendor, to prove that said individual or business is in good standing with the Department of Revenue ($6M).

Reciprocal agreements with border states, to encourage collection of sales taxes. ($1M).

Placing a mimimum interest rate of 18 percent on overdue taxes, also on overpayment (protects current revenue).

Revocation or suspension of the business license of any tax delinquent ($1M).

Adoption of the federal scale of penalties for tax-related crimes ($2M).

Tax collection by private contractors who will assist in the collection of delinquent tax accounts (on a percentage fee basis) and out-of-state scofflaws ($6M).

Withholding taxes on pari-mutual and lottery winnings; taxing non-residents on Massachusetts winnings ($3M).

Inclusion of federal savings banks under the excise imposed on all thrift institutions (protects current revenue).

Enforcement of sales and use tax on boats registered out-of-state ($.5M).

Provisions for informational access (with Department of Revenue representative present) to safe deposit boxes upon death of the owner, for estate tax purposes ($.5M).

Taking advantage of the state tax credit allowed on federal generation skipping transfer tax ($.5M)

Redirection (of a percentage equal to $7M) of employers' unemployment insurance compensation contribution, to an Economic Development tax ($7M).

Enforcement of the 1982 fee bill($20M).

Administrative actions to increase federal reimbursments ($37.2M).

Directing unclaimed bottle bill deposits to the General Fund ($10M).

Upfront assessment on business for government services such as audits and inspections ($5.15M).

Transfer of Motor Vehicle Inspection Fund surpluses to Highway Fund to help offset other motor vehicle-related costs ($5.4M).

Assessing hospitals for Rate Setting Services (3.3M).

The budget now goes to the Legislature's Ways and Means Committees where these and other items will be debated. Your thoughts are important to legislators as we begin work on the state budget. Please call or write with your ideas.

Mariner survey

This spring's annual town meeting will be an important one for determining Cohasset's future.

The annual town meting and election will be held Saturday, April 2 and Saturday, April 9. The Mariner invites residents to air their views on potential town meeting articles, ballot questions and general opinions of local government.

This survey will be in the next three issues of the Mariner with the results published March 30.

1. Should the town rescind its November special town meeting vote and revert to the Metcalf and Eddy sewer plan?
—— Yes ——No ——No Opinion.

2. Should the town continue with the Charles DeSantis sponsored article and seek other alternatives to the town's sewer problems?
——Yes ——No ——No Opinion.

3. Should the position of police chief be returned to Civil Service?
——Yes ——No ——No Opinion.

4. Should the position of police chief continue to be solely under the jurisdiction of selectmen?
——Yes ——No ——No Opinion.

5. Should a special citizen's task force be re-established to screen police chief candidates?
——Yes——No ——No Opinion.

6. Should the town allow the police chief to be a "strong chief," free from interference from the selectmen and not under Civil Service?
——Yes ——No ——No Opinion.

7. Should the school committee be allowed to exceed the advisory board's spending guidelines?
——Yes ——No ——No Opinion.

8. Should the town landfill be run by a private contractor?
——Yes ——No ——No Opinion.

9. Should police officers be hired to patrol Cohasset Village on a 24-hour basis?
——Yes ——No ——No Opinion.

10. Should the planning board establish an adult entertainment zone before a business firm applies?
——Yes ——No ——No Opinion.

11. Should the town go forward with the harbor expansion project?
——Yes ——No ——No Opinion.

12. If the town does expand the harbor, should recreational boaters be allowed to use the new pier?
——Yes ——No ——No Opinion.

13. Should the school department be charged for water and sewer costs with the costs included in the school budget?
——Yes ——No ——No Opinion.

14. Should the town prohibit a special town meeting from voting changes in the structure of town government?
——Yes ——No ——No Opinion.

15. Should guests of residents be charged a beach and landfill sticker?
——Yes ——No ——No Opinion.

A vote for a ramp at Town Hall

Letters

To the Editor:

Please publish the enclosed letter which is a response to the decision by the advisory board outlined in the accompanying article.

I am writing to express my disappointment at your decision to advise the town not to appropriate the funds for a ramp at the Town Hall.

I feel the board members "missed the point" of my reasons for wanting a ramp. According to the enclosed article, Ms. Dormitzer says the other wheelchair bound citizens and I are not being "disenfranchised." This, I suppose, is true, and I'd tell Ms. Dormitzer at the next advisory board meeting, if I could get in!

She also stated she "would feel better" about the ramp if more people would use it. I would like to point out to the Board that the sad fact is that the number of disabled citizens in any community seldom decreases; more often the number increases. So, it's conceivable Ms. Dormitzer might "feel better" in a few years, when the ramp will cost $10,000 and many more disabled people demand it.

With regard to access to the upper floors of the building, I never expected to have that available. I estimate to date I have missed several hundred selectmen's, advisory board, zoning and other town government functions, to say nothing of party caucuses, Village Fairs and several excellent plays, so I'm told, by the Drama Club.

Mr. Ainslie is correct in stating the town does not have to build the ramp, and I'm not sure the ramp would create a "stampede" of disabled voters at the polls. (Voter apathy is not restricted to non-disabled people). I do feel he is being unrealistic about the town clerk making house calls.

I'm glad to see Mr. Lagrotteria and the other board members decided that I "probably" could get in "with a little assistance." Will "a little assistance" always be there when I am? Do I bring my own? If I get "assisted" in, will there be assistance out?

In conclusion, I feel a properly maintained ramp would pose less of a health risk than icy steps in winter.

voted unanimously to immediately hire him at a cost not to exceed $10,000 to provide data for town meeting and for our attorney.

Town council has interpreted the wording of Article Four to mean that the town negotiate. If negotiations fail, the town will go to court and if the town wins, we then hire a consultant. As executives for the town, the selectmen should vote to hire the engineering consultant while we pursue negotiations. Obtaining engineering data while continuing negotiations is appropriate. The authors and proponents of Article Four state this course of actions is the intent of the article.

Free blood pressure clinic

The Medi Mart Drug Store located at Rte. 3A, Cohasset, will hold a free blood pressure screening clinic for the public Fridays, March 18 and 25 from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

The screening will be conducted by a nurse. Anyone with an elevated reading will be advised to see a physician.

The clinic is one of a series of health screenings held regularly by the Medi Mart Drug Stores.

Class ratios lead school budget hearing

By Mike Berger

One of several issues discussed at the school department budget public hearing March 14 was class ratios.

School Supt. Eugene Crowell said a class ratio of 21 students per class, especially at the high school, is misleading.

Advisory board member Jacqueline Dormitzer brought up the subject of the ratio. Dormitzer had earlier completed an indepth analysis of the $3.8 million budget and had recommended several ways to trim it.

Crowell said the ratio is true for general academic classes, excluding music, art and special education classes, but there are many classes which have 25 to 28 students.

"You have to remember," said Crowell," that when you schedule elementary grades, you are dealing with numbers in grades while at the high school you are dealing with an elective system.

"If you want to have an art program at the high school you have a section of eight or 12 students. Remember we service 20 percent of those students who do not go on to a four-year college."

Crowell said either smaller classes are established for these students or the programs are abolished.

School board member Jack Langmaid said it was important to realize there are many different competency levels when classes are scheduled.

The school committee finished its version of the fiscal 1984 budget which is some $62,000 short of the advisory committee's recommendation under the Prop. 2 1/2 guideline of $3,790,161.

The board first studied a budget proposal of $4,074,473, but cut back $200,241 in line budget items.

Here are the cuts by school:

OSGOOD SCHOOL

Administrative clerical aide, $7,359; supplies, $200; library, $300; total: $7,859.

DEER HILL

Aides, $3,650; Grade 6 teacher, $20,000; art supplies, $200; library rebinding, $200; Grade 4,5,6 supplies, $1,500; total: $25,550.

HIGH SCHOOL—JR. HIGH

Library, salary, $11,022; library books-periodicals, $2,000; part-time English teacher, $11,022; business education teacher, $2,054; supplies, $300; guidance contracted services, $3,500; athletics-transportation, $7,000; athletics-supplies, $5,000; special education-aides, $7,300; and heat and maintenance, $75,000.

ALL DISTRICT OR ALL SCHOOLS

School committee legal counsel, $1,500; attendance truance officer, $921; salary reserve adjustment, $3,325; school supt. supplies, $100; out-of-state travel, $500; business manager, $33,488; travel, $600; special education contracted services, $2,000; and supplies, $200.

All of the cuts amount to $200,241.

Crowell said there is a $149,500 excess which could be used at the end of the fiscal year, June 30.

However, last year's annual town meeting and the advisory committee required a $84,109 cut from the committee's budget.

After the required transfer from surplus to cover the $84,109 deficit, Crowell said the possible 'deferred spending' estimate is $65,391.

Further necessary expenditures for the balance of the fiscal year, he said, are architectural fees for the Deer Hill School and auditorium, $2,251; legal fees for the drug and alcohol guide and other, $4,000; required fire extinguishers and signs, $1,250; computers, $20,000; transportation costs for school bus gasoline, repairs and maintenance, $10,000; substitute salaries, $3,000, and the maintenance surveys for asbestos and roofs, $5,000.

These items total $45,501, leaving an estimate of available funds at $19,890.

Crowell told the board he found he could cut another $4,000 in unemployment compensation cuts which now means the school budget is some $58,000 more than the advisory board recommendation.

In explaining the budget to the 20-member audience, Crowell said the budget shows no school dept. progress and he feels more money should be spent for computers.

He added he is going to budget on a year-to-year basis rather than on a five year spending plan.

Dick Silvia added he's afraid Cohasset's school programs, if continued to show no growth, could cause Cohasset not to be competitive with other area schools.

School board member Dick Conley challenged the advisory board to come up with innovative ways to raise money and to fund the town budget.

Advisory committee member Dormitizer said the message of Prop. 2 1/2 was accountability.

It is expected the school board and the advisory committee will discuss these matters further Thursday, March 17 at 8 p.m. at town hall as the two committees try to reach a spending compromise.

Former school board member Pat Walsh suggested some further trimming of the budget, especially in the utility and transportation accounts.

Essentially, she suggested the school board submit a budget which shows budget speculations based on actual spending amounts.

After examining bills from last year, she suggested further cuts in the telephone and oil accounts, amounting to some $4,000 and also added proposed sewer spending is too excessive.

Walsh said, according to Town Accountant Bill Signorelli, the town only charges the school dept. for pumping. She doesn't feel the bill should come to $2,160. Crowell said the department will propably spend $1,160, leaving a $1,000 balance.

Walsh also said there are unencumbered or unspent funds in the roof repair accounts. Supt. Crowell and Stephen Hart, administrative assistant to Crowell, replied the money will be used for the asbestos control project.

Walsh also said the committee should reconsider spending $3,840 for the school bus storage contract when the department must use its custodians for night security.

She also said if the buses are damaged or vandalized, the contractor, Charles Pape is not obligated to pay for the damages.

Robert Sturdy, head of the school facilities committee urged the committee to push for spending money to add a full-time custodian who could re-set bricks and help "re-point" the buildings. This could cost $20,000 but Sturdy said the repairs are a must and could cost less than contracted labor.

But Crowell responded, "That's an additional teacher."

Handicapped children workshops planned

A series of workshops presented by the Coastline Council for Children are designed to educate parents and professionals on their rights and responsibilities under Chapter 766, the law for education of handicapped children.

The workshops will be held at Congregation Sha'aray Shalom, 1112 Main St., Hingham, from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m., Monday, March 21.

The speakers are all knowledgable professionals in their fields. Parents will have an opportunity for questions and are encouraged to bring their child's IEP to the meeting.

The schedule of events is as follows:

7:30 — Coffee and welcome, Taffy Nothnagle, chairperson, 766 Committee, Coastline Council for Children.

7:45-8:30 — Workshop I Series (Choose 1); "Chapter 766, How it Works," Marsha Lerner-Holbrook, advocate coordinator, Coastline Council for Children; "Basic Rights Under Chapter 766," Anne Wheelock, parent advocacy trainer, Massachusetts Advocacy Center; or "Parent Advisory Councils," Gloria Arcisz, staff designee to local Advisory Councils for Special Education, Greater Boston and Regional Education Center.

8:30-9:15 — Workshops II Series (Choose 1): "Practical Advocacy Tips," Anne Wheelock, parent advocacy trainer, Massachusetts Advocacy Center; "The Individual Education Plan: (IEP) The What and How," Dolores Estrine, advocate/coordinator, Greater Marlboro Council for Children; "Mediation and Appeals," Patrick Davis, State Board of Education, Bureau of Special Education Appeals; or "The ABC's of Testing," Michael Hohn, advocate/coordinator, South Shore Council for Children.

9:15-9:30 — Summary and recommendations.

For further information, call Taffy Nothnagle, 383-0895.

Casino comments needed

Carol Oteri of Hull, president of Citizens Against Casino Gambling, Inc., encourages Massachusetts residents to express their opposition to casinos before a legislative committee hearing Wednesday, March 23, in Room 466 at the State House.

Casino and other proposed gambling legislation will be aired before the Government Regulations Committee, 11 a.m. Oteri also urges casino opponents to be alert for any change in the date, place or time of the hearing.

Cement mixer overturn causes health inspection

By Mike Berger and Moira McCarthy

The overturning of a cement mixer Friday afternoon did not cause environmental damage to Cohasset's drinking water.

Inspectors from the State Department of Quality Engineering inspected the intersection of Pond and Spring Streets Friday after a concrete truck landed on its back and ruptured its diesel gas tank.

Jet-Line Company of Braintree was called to mop up 10 gallons of diesel fuel which was seeping into the soil.

After the inspection, Dick Sullivan of DEQE said none of the diesel fuel got into the ground water. An adjacent brook was also inspected and Sullivan concluded the fuel did not enter the water.

Health Agent Elaine Eliopoulous told the Mariner the water in the area does not go into the town's drinking supply but goes into the ocean.

Police said the driver, James Graziano, 24, of Randolph was cited for operating to endanger.

The truck is owned by A. Graziano Inc. of Braintree.

James Graziano told the Mariner he was on his way to South Main Street to fill a foundation. He was coming down Lantern Lane to the Pond Street-Spring Street intersection and his truck was full loaded with cement.

He said, "I put the brakes to the floor and got nothing, so I tried to make the railroad beds to avoid the apartments. After it tipped over, I climbed out of the window. I just shut it off and jumped out."

Dana Sylvia, 24, of the Spring Street apartments said, "I was inside and I heard a noise. I looked out and the trees (next to the apartment) were waving. Then I saw the driver jump out, so I called the police."

Graziano said the only object which stopped him from continuing was the tree.

There have been accidents near the area before. A year ago a gasoline tanker truck overturned. The area is a traffic problem because it's at the bottom of a hill. Although Graziano told police about the brake problem police still cited him. Acting Police Chief Joe Kealey said Monday police do not believe the accident was caused by the truck's brakes.

Firefighters also responded to the accident. Fire Chief Martin Dooley said firefighters were called at 1:09 p.m. and didn't complete operations there until 7:30 p.m.

Dooley said firefighters disconnected the electrical batteries from the truck and plugged the leaks into the fuel tank.

Because diesel fuel is classified as a hazardous material, the health agent and DEQE were notified.

No one was hurt, but as a precautionary measure, medical vans were available.

Despite the police citation given to Graziano, Dooley said the driver should be complimented "on the way he handled the vehicle. He avoided a pole with high tension wires. He was smart to go towards the abandoned railroad bed. I feel strongly about this. He reacted in a split second decision," Dooley said.

The rainy weather softened the ground up enough so the truck was able to roll over, Dooley said.

Besides this accident, firefighters responded to a felled tree limb Friday night at 11:20 p.m. on Bayberry Lane. No one was hurt as firefighters patched up the roof.

Firefighters also received some calls about flooded cellars but Dooley said firefighters do not have the facilities to pump out cellars.

Last week's continuing rainstorms caused havoc for sewer plant operator Manny Salvador who reported a complete washout, "with heavy amounts of water coming in."

Salvador usually pumps 70,000 gallons of water at a maximum. During last week's storm, he figured as much as 300,000 gallons were pumped. The result: the excess washes right out into a brook and eventually into Cohasset Harbor.

Tuesday, Salvador reported the sewer plant was back to normal sewer operations.

Like Cohasset, Scituate and Hull experienced severe flooding and washouts in the communities' sewer plants, Salvador said.

Highway Supt. Harold Litchfield said a week-long rainstorm usually causes a backup of brooks and streams and storm drains. The open brooks, he said, feed into a pipe under the road. "Nothing goes through until the water recedes.

There are several, he said, throughout Cohasset, especially the Meadows area.

Sewer warrants included...

Brian Jeans of the state Division of Water Pollution Control told Pounder, "The state will take under consideration any conclusive information that is submitted relative to the I and A (Innovative and Alternative) Study."

Ward Engineering has told the commission his investigation would provide 100 percent evidence to ensure state funding, at a cost of about $20,000.

Ward said $10,000 for the investigative work could assure 85 percent guarantee of state financing. The additional $10,000 would be money well spent, Pounder said.

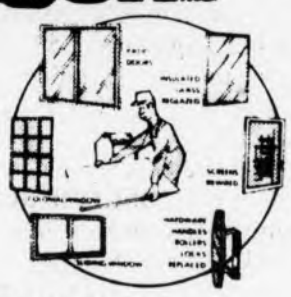
Selectman Mary Jane McArthur said Town Counsel Richard Henderson informed selectmen last week that no selection of an alternative study engineer should be made by the board until the terms of the court agreement of judgement have been renegotiated or modified.

It would be inappropriate to request Ward Engineering, or any other firm, to do anything until the court agreement is renogiated or modified, she added.

In the meantime, water commissioner William Montouri said the water commission is opposed to seeking alternatives to the central sewer plan under construction by Metcalf and Eddy. In addition, he said the commission intended to file a complaint regarding the code of ethics, against the board of sewer commissioners.

Montouri said licensed engineers are unable to provide definitive solutions for alternative treatment before a study has begun. The engineers interviewed by the sewer commissioners were therefore in violation of the state board of engineers' code of ethics.

The second warrant article sponsored by the sewer commission will ask voters to continue the Metcalf and Eddy plan while seeking the alternative engineering designs. This would allow a continuation of the contract with Metcalf and Eddy while Ward Engineering is conducting his research, Pounder explained.



If the state does send Cohasset a grant application for alternative engineering study, the sewer commission has 30 days in which to decide what method the town should accept. The warrant article allows flexibility so the town is not committed to one project, Pounder said.

Do you find yourself with a small spare room? Why not convert it into a den? During the 1930's and 1940's, before the development of the family room, a den provided a casual room for quiet pursuits. It allowed space for office work, reading and solitude away from the noise of the rest of the house. This hideaway need only be of modest dimensions and can be decorated with a desk, lounge chair and a dual-purpose sofa bed. Choose rugged furniture fabrics that can take feet-up lounging. And we often suggest that the room's colors be darker than usual so as to impart a sedate feeling. The den is also a good place to display personal collections and trophies.

Making effective use of a small room is not difficult. Having it look as attractive and comfortable as an oversized living room may be a little more difficult. Curtains can sometimes overwhelm a small room. Here at BOUND BROOK PAINT & HARDWARE we are pleased to offer you Levelor blinds. They are as attractive as curtains and are easy to maintain and clean. Stop in and see us today how they can work for you. We're easy to find in N. Scituate at 763 Country Way where we are open Mon-Wed 8-6, Thurs & Fri 8-8:30, Sat 8-5 or phone 545-3624. Happy St. Patrick's Day to you all!

DECORATING TIP

A den is a fine retreat that gives much more than its small space implies.

Wildcats end Skippers hockey dream

By John Ryan

Throughout the 1982-83 Cohasset High School hockey season the Skippers lived by the ideal of the "total team effort." At the beginning (of their EMass. quarter final Division II tournament game at B.U.), this ideal caused their death in the end at the hands (or paws) of the Wilmington Wildcats.

Now I've never seen a cat skate, with a puck that is, but when the referee dropped the puck for the opening faceoff it was evident to all that these cats had a few tricks up their sleeves. And they did as they out-skated, out-passed, and out-smarted the Skippers for two periods, stashing away four goals by the end of the second stanza.

No particular facet of Cohasset's attack was to blame for their early demise. The furious aura of intensity simply wasn't created. (Perhaps the absence of senior co-captain Don O'Neill, due to last week's suspension, may have left the team searching for an emotional lift in spirits).

The combination of Wilmington's high-flying start and Cohasset's tentative play, due to their opponent's early lead (something the Skippers aren't used to), led to the dramatic third period charge of the Wildcat cage.

Senior Dan Bowen was first to tame the Wilmington goalie scoring a 20-foot blast assisted by defenseman co-captain Rich Evans.

Soon after Cohasset's John Casey cut the score to 4-2 with a quick point-blank wrist shot assisted by Joe Hoffman and the Cohasset faithful rose to the occasion, feeling that enough time was left (9 minutes and 30 seconds) for a Skipper comeback.

The tension was building as father time ran down to the two minute mark left in the game, when 20 seconds later, Bowen backhanded his breakaway bid into the twine after receiving a clean pass from Casey as an invitation to compete on the Boston Garden ice danced in their heads.

With 40 seconds left Cohasset coach Tom Burness decided to lift goalie Mark Brown (who enjoyed a fine day's work in front of the Cohasset net) for the advantage of an extra forward.

With 20 seconds left, a Wilmington player skated away from the pack to tally an empty-net goal, finishing the game with the Wildcats winning 5-3.

Thus the Cohasset Skippers rode away into the sunset with a history of a respectable season behind then. For these talented and hard-working guys, the satisfaction of a successful and exciting season reigns supreme over the short-lived sorrow of a tournament loss, lest we forget, all (wild) cats have 9 lives!

Candidates corner . . .

Frank Hamilton

Frank C.J. "Joe" Hamilton, 244 BeechwoodStreet, is a candidate for the five-year term on the planning board.

Hamilton is a 1968 graduate of Prince George's Community College in Maryland and a 1981 graduate of Stonehill College in Easton where he majored in public administration. Courses of study at Stonehill included, but were not limited to, Urban and Rural Planning, Sociology, Economics and Environmental Science — all of which he feels will be beneficial to the Town during his tenure on the Planning Board.

"The Zoning By-Laws provide us a substantial guide for the mechanics of Cohasset's growth, but we must take a hard look at the long-term effects on the community," Hamilton said.

"We must think ahead twenty-five years, and from that perspective we must examine the probable results of the present trend of growth. Cohasset's geography is severely limited; therefore we should be aware of a dramatic impact on services, facilities and environment."

"Further," Hamilton said, "our planning must consider the preservation of the precious groundwater and surface water supplies and other natural areas from industrial and residential effects.

"We all enjoy that charm and character that makes Cohasset unique; but at what point will that be lost to expansion?"

Hamilton is the laboratory director and plant operator with the Cohasset Water Department. He is a former dupervisor at Plimoth Plantation. He has also served on the Historical Commission as Town Archivist for a two-year period. And he has served town government as a selectmen-appointed constable.

In 1976 he was assistant harbormaster. In 1977 he was a candidate for assessor. A former Army officer, he is a member of the American Legion and has served in various elected capacities.

Hamilton is married to the former Jane O'Hayre. They have two sons, Edward, age 5 and Andrew, age 3.

John DeBassio

A public coffee for selectman candidate John DeBassio will be held Sunday, March 20 from 2 to 6 p.m. at Kimball's By-The-Sea. Refreshments will be served.

Coffees held at private residences during the past week were courtesy of the following individuals: Trisha and Ronald Massa, John and Maurice Hart, Grace Tuckerman and Nancy and Noel Ripley. Residents who would like to attend a coffee at a private residence should contact Maria Plante at 383-9263.

Barbara Kern

Barbara Kern, chairwoman of the Cohasset Board of Health and president of the Massachusetts Association of Health Boards, has been invited to lead a group discussion of those interested in boards of health and their environmental concerns at the upcoming New England Environmental Conference.

The discussions will center on the close relationship of boards of health and environmental concerns on many issues. Local boards are becoming aware of the need to concern themselves with groundwater, possible contamination and pollution, upgrading local regulations and safeguards.

This is the fifth annual conference and will be held at Tufts University March 26 and 27. More than 900 people from New England are expected to attend 46 workshops. The conference is co-sponsored by over 140 environmental, business and citizen organizations.
